Approval of the new charitable organization sponsored by Mrs. Elizabeth Brennan was expressed and plans to co-operate in this work were formulated. Dr. John Miles, colored, was praised for his work in the free colored employment bureau which he recently opened here.

Mr. Thompson announced that a report could be expected soon on the work of the southern interracial commission, which is composed of outstanding representatives, which was organized for the purpose of making a scientific study of lynching case by case in an effort to discover the underlying causes and to provide an effective preventive of this evil.

METHODIST LEADERS CALL ON MEMBERS TO FIGHT ALL LYNCHINGS

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 2. (AP)—A group of prominent clerical and lay members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in a statement issued for publication today, ascribed the persistence of lynching to the neglect of religious leaders to impress the people with "solemn warnings of the church on this subject" and weakness and complicity on the part of public officials.

The statement urged that measures be taken "to bring such recreant officials to account in the courts of justice and at the bar of outraged public opinion."

The statement also said "the situation, as we see it, is serious in the extreme and challenges every religious leader, public official and Christian citizen to determined and unrelenting war upon this belighting survival of barbarism."

Dr. J. W. Werry, Nashville, Tenn., home missionary secretary; Prof. N. C. Newbold, Raleigh, N. C., Dr. Theodore H. Jack, Atlanta, Dr. E. C. Peters, president Payne College, Augusta, Ga.; Mrs. J. J. McEachern, Atlanta, and Dr. W. W. Alexander, director of the commission of interracial cooperation, signed the statement which was made public today.

ACTION AGAINST THE REVIVAL OF MOB VIOLENCE

After a three-year respite from the mob-murder infamy—attributed mainly to a court's courage in sentencing several lynchers to long terms in prison—Georgia lately has suffered a horrible relapse:

During September three negroes were slain by mobs in that State—one at Darien and two at Thomasville—and two white men were victims of whipping and tar and feather "parties." Two of the negroes were charged with "the usual crime"; but the offense of the third—at Thomasville—was that in court he had testified against two white men charged with attacking a negress! Masked men entered his home and shot him to death.

Though not involving murder, the outrage at Brooksville on the same day was peculiarly flagrant: A 60-year-old man was flogged, tarred and feathered because accused of beating his wife. The other flogging-victim had been suspected of selling liquor.

The wretched revival of lynching—both in the North and the South—has been attributed to economic, as well as psychological, conditions. Perhaps it is a case of idle hands at mischief—dastardly, bloody mischief. Then work might act as a preventive—but for a cure, more drastic measures must be applied. Georgia is experiencing a sudden, violent epidemic, which may have originated in local causes or may have been due to the spread of the highly contagious mob spirit.

In any event these evil developments emphasize a movement—lately begun in Atlanta—for "the first scientific study of lynching." Announcing the appointment of several eminent men for that purpose, Dr. Will W. Alexander, executive director of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation, observed:

"Largely because of the steady decline in lynchings, we had begun to hope that we had a new South morally, economically and politically; but the depressing record for the present year seriously has shaken our confidence."

Perhaps this expert study may devise some hopeful plan for attacking the evil at its root. Education, awakening the civic conscience, inculcating respect for authority, establishing new standards of human values, and related measures, are needed urgently.

In practice, however, official courage and resourcefulness in meeting a mob-attack and frustrating it have proved the most effective means to prevent lynching. The sheriff who boldly stands his ground, and the Governor who swiftly dispatches State troops to avert threatened violence, have contributed more to reducing the evil than any other influence.

On the day of the two Georgia outrages, National Guardsmen at Huntsville (Alabama)—with tear-bombs and fixed bayonets—dispersed a mob bent upon a double lynching. Does that official incident explain the circumstance that Alabama has not experienced a lynching in almost five years?

COMMENDABLE ACTION

ALABAMA officers, who called out the national guard and ordered the citizen soldiers to charge a lynch-mad mob with tear bombs and bayonets are to be commended for their action. Distasteful as the spectacle of American soldiers charging into a crowd of American citizens is, it is not as bad as another lynching would be.

A year or two ago citizens of the United States thought they had effectively stopped the peculiar form of savagery known as lynching. Then this year the crime was repeated in more communities and states than in many years past. Texas has been the scene of several such uprisings. Indiana witnessed such a crime. Other states have not been without their manifestations of mob law.

The Alabama authorities acted on the principle that the action of a mob of would-be lynchers is a revolt against constituted authority and proceeded to put it down. No thinking citizen can regard a lynching as otherwise and until officials everywhere are willing to act with equal promptness and force, the majesty of our law will be only a meaningless phrase.

Georgia Disgraced Again

(From The Chattanooga Times.)

The state of Georgia, which has been the scene of a series of mob executions this year, was disgraced again yesterday morning. About 1 o'clock something like 50 masked men arrived at the Cartersville jail, overpowered officers in charge, took John Will Clark, negro, from his cell, hurried him to the fair grounds about a mile distant, and hanged him to the crossbeam of a telephone pole.

The crime is deserving of more severe condemnation, if possible, than the other lynchings which have recently occurred in Georgia. This is so for the reason that it was not committed in the heat of passion, such as often exists just after the commission of a crime and the arrest of the criminal, but in cold-blooded deliberation, two weeks after the killing of Chief Jenkins. It was carefully planned and coolly executed by men who were so cowardly they masked themselves that they might be doubly secure in their murderous lawlessness.

And their premeditation involved not only the taking of a human life, but also the trampling under foot of the sovereignty and authority of the people of Georgia as expressed in their government. Their act was not only a cold-blooded murder and an overriding of constituted authority, it was also a deliberate defiance of the state and local governments. These 50 men, in secret conclave, set themselves up as superior to constituted authority, brushed it aside, took the law into their own hands and left the government looking foolish and twiddling its thumbs.

Constituted authority in Georgia has shown itself to be sigularly helpless, or disinclined, to deal with mobs which trample the law under foot and take human life in the heat of passion. Now that it has suffered the humiliation and the disgrace of premeditated, deliberate cold-blooded murder and overriding of its authority, what is it going to do about it? Lie contentedly in its disgrace, make a hypocritical gesture toward trying to bring the masked criminals to justice, or round them up and punish them as murderers?

Negro Anti-Lynching Congress To Be Held

BOSTON, Oct. 16.—(AP)—The National Equal Rights League and Race Congress, with headquarters here, today announced a national Negro Anti-Lynching Congress would be held in Washington, Nov. 24 and 25. William Monroe Trotter, executive secretary, said the Congress would offer a united protest to the National Government and the American people and adopt plans for self-protection.

Mob Law

Very recently announcement was made of the organization of a commission, composed of leading Southerners, to study the problem presented by the resurgence of lynching in this section. The marked increase in manifestations of mob law was ample warrant for such a step involving the preoccupation of the finest intelligence of the South with this shocking development of backwardness.

And now we learn that martial law has to be declared for the protection of a negro prisoner lodged in the jail of one of Alabama's most progressive cities. This action is apparently in response to an urgent threat which has been met with that military promptness which could be expected from Gov. Graves. It is to be hoped that the mere show of force will be sufficient and that no bloodletting will be needed to make the efforts of the National Guard effective. But that is not to say that anything should be permitted to prevent the enforcement of the law at all costs.

For what happened at Darien, Ga., not so long ago is still remembered as an amazing exhibition of weakness on the part of officers and soldiers engaged in the maintenance of order in the face of a threatened lynching. Somehow, the mob had its way, despite the presence of the militia. Once before such a thing happened at Statesboro, Ga., a good many years ago, and for that a company's commander was held responsible. In this later case, it was a colonel who proved useless.

No similar incompetence is likely to be shown in Alabama. The Huntsville situation will be dealt with satisfactorily, we may be sure. And that is a comforting realization, for if that were not assured, we would have to be doubly ashamed, and under the necessity of facing the scorn of the country on two grounds. Not whether martial law has turned the trick, but that there should be any occasion for this help to civil authority, is the matter which should concern the people of this state.

It is not easy to explain the rise in lynchings which has taken place this year. Perhaps the depression has figured in bringing about the sad state of affairs. Unemployment makes for breaches of the law, just as it helps to add idlers to the crowd on a rampage. In any event, it is obvious that the splendid record of the South over a course of years showing a steady decline in mob outrages has received a terrible blemish. It is high time for the noblest will and the clearest vision we have to concentrate on the road to be taken out of this ugly reaction and toward the high ground we had been approaching.

A Georgia Lynching

Alabama has had so close a shave in the Huntsville attempt at a lynching that it may seem unbecoming for The Age-Herald to express its feelings about the horrible business in Cartersville, Ga., accounts of which indicate that the local and state authorities clearly failed to give the mob's victim the protection which he should have had under the circumstances. But in that very fact, which contrasts so strikingly with the successful vigor shown in this state, lies the justification for saying that Georgia is disgraced by this vicious upflare of primitive blood-lust, to which the authorities seem to have lent themselves through weakness or intention.

A negro had killed the chief of police of Cartersville. Because mob violence was being threatened, he was removed for safe-keeping to Atlanta. Then he was brought back for trial, and it was then that he was taken from jail by a masked band which proceeded to hang him in orthodox fashion. One would have imagined that proper precautions had been taken to prevent this atrocity. One would have imagined that the sheriff would be ready for the emergency which developed. One would have imagined that the governor of Georgia would take cognizance of the ugly possibilities of the situation.

But apparently none of these evidences of diligence figured in the arrangements. "They were orderly and quiet, but descended upon us like a cyclone," the sheriff reports concerning the experience against which he should have prepared himself. "They were in the jail before I was awake, overpowered the turnkey and got their man. They were all masked so that we could not recognize anyone."

It is easy to understand that no arrests have been made of members of the mob. It is easy to understand why the sheriff should think the situation is now "calm." In Cartersville, it is not considered necessary to take even elementary measures to prevent a lynching. And when that which was pre-ordained occurs, the sheriff has the supreme satisfaction of knowing that the lynchers have gone home after killing "their man."

This affair is a very serious disclosure of the savagery which springs up so frequently in the South as to justify the reproaches which we, as a section, are quick to resent. The negro had not committed the unmentionable offense which is held in some quarters to be the warrant for a lynching bee. He was a murderer, but no one dreams of lynching a white murderer. No, it was the fact that this man was black, which damned him in the eyes of the criminals who composed that cowardly mob.

Julian Harris, of Atlanta, is on the special commission which is studying the increase of lynchings this year. He is near enough to Cartersville to be able to learn from personal inspection what has taken place there. This ghastly outrage goes far toward canceling the praises won by Georgia courts a short time ago for their striking insistence on justice to the negro.

CHURCHMEN FLAY LYNCHINGS HERE

MOB ACTION

A quiet and orderly mob descended upon Bartow County jail at Cen[illegible]rsville, Georgia, the other day, over powered the turnkey, seized John Willie Clark, confessed slayer of a policeman, and hanged him. This is just one of many lynchings that have occurred throughout the country during the las[redacted] of them have taken place in the south, although that section does not run away with the honors entirely.

It seems as inconceivable that a masked mob should take the law into its own hands today as it would be should an individual constitute himself a police force in a city and endeavor personally to punish traffic violators. Possibly the slow process of the law and the possibilities of delay and mistrial have attracted favor to the cheaper and quicker method of lynching. By this method a man is punished quickly. His guilt may be determined later.

In an effort to enforce law, law is flaunted and it is seldom that members of the mob are called to account. Such actions are reminiscent of the days of feudalism when a party of lords would band together to enforce their will upon the land. Mob action is far from the ideals of the twentieth century. It indicates a disrespect for constituted authority which should not be tolerated today.

INNOCENT MAN LYNCHED.

South Carolina has just had [redacted] and impressive demonstration of one of the dangers very often present when a mob takes the law into its hands and goes out to lynch a negro or anybody else for an alleged crime. At Walhalla last Spring a woman claimed to have been attacked by a negro, and Allen Green, despite his good record and reputation in the community, was hanged by a mob to the same tree under which several years ago he had committed an act of heroism that brought him citations of honor.

~~Now it is~~ proven to the satisfaction of a jury in Oconee County that the negro who was lynched was not guilty of the crime charged against him, but his life is gone and can not be restored to him. A terrible mistake was made. Nothing can be done now to give the negro the justice due him; nor can he be restored to his family. The best that can be done, (and that much is to the credit of South Carolina) is the payment of $2,000 to his widow. The law requires this of the county in which the lynching occurred.

Lynching would be a terrible crime against the State, even though the mob had absolute proof of the guilt of its victim, but the Constitution guarantees to every citizen, black as well as white, a fair trial by a jury to decide his guilt or innocence, and there is not one of us who would be willing to have an angry mob decide for us the question of our guilt or innocence of any crime that might be charged against us. No member of a mob would be willing, in any case, to have an angry mob decide his fate. Which is an admission of the injustice of mob law and of its fallibility as an agency for determining facts.

WOMEN TO MEET HERE TO COMBAT LYNCHING

AN ACCOMMODATING SHERIFF.

(From the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.)

The story of the lynching in Thomasville, Ga., of Willie [redacted], a negro charged with attacking a white girl, makes it clear that the prisoner was in the hands of the sheriff from some hour before midnight until some hour after 8 a. m., when he was murdered, and that during the whole of that time the sheriff and all other officers and the community generally knew and understood thoroughly that feeling against Kirkland was strong and that a lynching was being threatened. During thta period the sheriff, ministers, and prominent citizens spoke to the mob athered about the stockade where the prisoner was kept, and pleaded for law and order. Their efforts were of no avail, and eventually "the sheriff, realizing the crowd was growing restless, planned to take Kirkland to another jail." Accordingly, he came out of the stockade with the prisoner and walked straight into the heart of the mob. It overpowered him, seized the prisoner, murdered him, dragged him by a rope from an automobile and indulged in other barbarities which accompany such events. As a result, the sheriff has been commended by a coroner's jury "for the quiet and orderly manner in which he handled the angry crowd....and for the prevention of other bloodshed."

Since the lynching near Savannah a few weeks ago, in which a colonel and a detachment of the Georgia National Guard permitted a mob to seize a prisoner in jail they were guarding, there has been serious doubt whether Georgia troops are of any avail in such an emergency. But the Thomasville sheriff, officially cited for preventing other bloodshed, had at least eight hours and probably much more time in which to obtain protection against a lynching threat which he and everybody else in Thomasville knew about. If he made any effort to obtain additional protection, it is not revealed in the dispatches. On the contrary, the implication is that he made it easier for the mob to appease its desire for blood.

Let the committee of the Southern Interracial Commission appointed to gather and analyze the facts of lynchings dig into this case. If it finds that the sheriff performed his duty or adopted reasonable measures to guard his prisoner, the information coming out of Thomasville thus far has been grossly misleading.

THE COST OF RIGHT-OF-WAY.

(From the Lynchburg Advance.)

One of the items of highway costs in Virginia is the expenditures for securing right-of-way for new roads or for new locations on existing routes. In his report for the year ending July 1, Chairman Shirley of the State Highway Commission, reveals that the cost was $273,000 more than in the preceding year. The report says:

"It is with a great deal of regret that the commission has to make this report of excess cost of right-of-way, but every effort has been made to secure property at fair and reasonable prices. In many instances the property owners have been generous in giving their property and others have been very reasonable, but there was a certain number that asked exceedingly exorbitant prices and the commission was compelled to pay the same after being condemned.

"It is again recommended that the present law be changed so that one commissioner (condemnation) be taken from the county in which the project is located, and two from the outside.

"During the fiscal years the highway commission awarded 144 contracts covering 386 miles of roads. Property needed as right-of-way cost the State $614,023.86."

The State should adequately protect citizens through whose property highways are to be run. At the same time the highway commission should not be forced to pay exorbitant prices for rights-of-way. It is not often that the location of a highway damages property; it is not often that a highway does not enhance the value of abutting property. For that reason there is no excuse for certain land owners to demand, and occasionally receive, for a small strip of property an amount equal to the entire assessed value of the whole farm. Virginia needs to complete the State system of highways at the earliest possible time, but excessive costs for rights-of-way seriously delay the construction of the system. It is to be regretted that sometimes certain citizens can not resist the temptation to make the state pay handsomely for actually providing them with a valuable asset in the way of a modern highway.

The Georgia Lynching.

A masked mob took [redacted] negro from the county jail in Cartersville, Ga., yesterday and lynched him on the cross-beam of a telephone pole. It was the second mob murder within a week in Georgia.

The negro was charged with killing a police chief. Two weeks ago a mob tried to lynch him but the national guard was called out and he was taken to Atlanta for safe-keeping. When he was brought back to Cartersville for trial a mob had no difficulty in taking him away from the sheriff and his deputies and lynching him.

This lynching could easily have been averted had the state of Georgia used the proper precaution in protecting the prisoner's life. Since one attempt had been made to lynch the negro it was to be expected that trouble would arise when he was taken back to Cartersville where sentiment was raging against him.

The prompt action of Governor Bibb Graves, of Alabama, and his national guardsmen, prevented a lynching in that state, at Huntsville Monday. The same thing could have been done in Georgia yesterday. Georgia did not profit by the splendid example of her sister state. One lynching is a shameful record for a state; two within a week is an inexcusable disgrace.

The lynching in Georgia yesterday was the twentieth to occur in the United States to date in 1930. Only 12 were lynched during 1929.

THE LATEST LYNCHING.

The lynching [redacted], Clark, at Cartersville, early Wednesday morning by a small mob of lawless men, is commented upon by the Chattanooga Times in these proper terms:

> "Their premeditation involved not only the taking of a human life, but also the trampling under foot of the sovereignty and authority of the people of Georgia as expressed in their government. . . . It was a deliberate defiance of the state and local governments."

And The Times asks of Georgia: "What is it going to do about it? Lie contentedly in its disgrace, make a hypocritical gesture toward trying to bring the masked criminals to justice, or round them up and punish them as murderers?"

That question appeals to the honor and self-respect of our people, and especially so to the judge of the superior court of Bartow county. On Monday he delivered to the grand jury of the county a timely and striking charge in the interest of the due course of justice and within twelve hours all he said was blown to the winds, his court and authority damned by the contempt of a cowardly mob and shame poured upon the county, the state and its whole machinery of justice.

No court can maintain its righteous character and the confidence of the people that permits itself to be thus defied. Every interest of sovereign justice demands that the court recover its even scales and sword and visit upon those who usurped them the most prompt and condign punishment.

It will not do to try and ram down the throats of the honest people of Georgia that the members of that Cartersville mob cannot be ferreted out and brought to the bar of justice. Such a claim and such a failure will be the rankest of insults to the intelligence and honor of the people of this state.

If this defiant contempt of a court, this outrage upon lawful justice, this absolutely unnecessary insult to the majesty of the state is permitted to find immunity, to go unpursued by judge, grand jury and sheriff, condoned by whatever element of the community, then the humiliation of Georgia before the gaze of the nation will be complete.

We cannot claim a sufferable place in the ranks of civilized people if we are to allow our jails to be invaded by mobs, our courts violently robbed of their jurisdiction and the good name of the state smeared with the gruesome blood of lynch murders. The tendency to such anarchy is intolerable and the fair-minded, conscientious citizens of the state must be as one in demanding that it be quenched by every authority and power that the state possesses.

LYNCHING BLAMED ON LEGAL DELAY

Charges Made by Attorney Williamson Refuted by Bartow Official.

Following charges by Marion Williamson, Atlanta attorney, that he and his associate, Harold Sheats, had been ordered out of Cartersville on two occasions by Bartow county citizens while representing John Will Clark and his brother, Sidney, negroes, County Commissioner A. V. Neal Wednesday night issued a statement in which he claimed the lynching of John Will Clark r[redacted] activities of Atlanta [redacted] case.

John Will Clark, accused of having slain Joe Ben Jenkins, chief of police of Cartersville, was taken from the Bartow county jail early Wednesday morning and hanged to a telephone pole. His body was discovered and cut down at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, a coroner's inquest held and a verdict of death "at the hands of persons unknown" returned.

Upon his return to Atlanta from the north Georgia town Wednesday night, Mr. Williamson declared that while he was endeavoring to confer with Judge C. C. Pittman in an effort to obtain approval of his application to have the brother of the lynched negro released and allowed to be brought back to Atlanta, he was approached by several men and told that he "had better get out of town."

Despite these commands, the attorney said, Judge Pittman agreed that the negro would be safer out of Cartersville, and the sheriff having no further charges against him, he was released in the custody of his lawyers.

A public statement as to the cause of the lynching was issued by Commissioner Neal to M. L. Fleetwood, Cartersville correspondent of The Constitution Wednesday night:

"Had it not been for the appearance of Atlanta lawyers in this case Tuesday and their actions in filing a bill of exceptions which caused postponement of the trial, there would have been no lynching.

"The people of Cartersville and Bartow county were a unit in agreeing that Clark should have a fair and impartial trial, feeling sure that the sentence would have been death in the electric chair.

"However, the action taken by the Atlanta lawyers causing postponement of the hearing for an indefinite period so incensed our people that I believe I am safe in saying the action of the en who took the negro from the jail is not only condoned, but has met with practically unanimous approval."

CLARK REMOVED AND HANGED TO POLE.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Oct. 1.—P)—John Will Clark, negro, charged with the murder of Chief of Police Joe Ben Jenkins, was taken from the ounty jail here today and lynched y between 45 and 50 citizens in automobiles.

Clark was taken from the jail about o'clock this morning and several ours later the police reported finding the body hanging by a rope from a telephone pole. It was apparent, authorities said, that he died from strangulation. Officers said the body bore no other marks of violence.

A previous effort to lynch Clark was made two weeks ago last Sunday and he was removed to another jail for safe keeping, being returned here yesterday for trial.

When the previous effort was made to take him from officers, national guardsmen were called to duty from Atlanta and Marietta and extra officers employed. The guardsmen took charge of the jail and Clark was removed to Atlanta.

A special term of superior court was convened here Monday and Clark was to have been tried at the session.

Lynchers Were Unarmed.

The lynching party came to the jail in nine or ten automobiles. Ten of the men, all unarmed so far as officers were able to determine, entered the jail office where the deputies were on duty, took the key to Clark's cell from Deputy A. J. McCoy, unlocked the cell, seized their prey, and departed. Clark was bundled into the lead car of the motorcade and was speeded eastward.

"It was all over in five minutes," McCoy said. "We had no time to draw our guns, the men overpowering us as soon as they entered the office."

McCoy said he was not able to recognize any members of the mob. Sheriff Gaddis was asleep at the time the mob entered, but arose before they departed. After Clark was taken away he and another deputy went downtown in a futile effort to learn where the mob went. Unable to find out he retired and the search was continued by others.

Since the body of the negro was found hanging to a telephone pole, Judge Pittman has made no statement for publication, and Sheriff Gaddis says he has made no statement, other than that the crowd which came to he jail in early hours of Wednesday mply overpowered him and took the [illegible]soner.

Clark was taken a few hours after his attorneys had appealed to the higher courts for a change of venue on the grounds he could not obtain a fair trial here. Judge Pittman had denied the plea after several witnesses testified Clark could be tried impartially in Bartow county.

Negro Had Been Held in Atlanta.

Clark was brought here Monday from Atlanta, where he had been held for safe-keeping since the effort to lynch him immediately after his capture on September 14. He was ordered held here by Judge Pittman after the petition for change of venue was denied.

Chief Jenkins was killed on the night of September 5 in a scuffle with two negroes who had halted their automobile in front of his home and whom the chief said were creating a disturbance. He was shot with his own gun. Clark at that time was an escaped convict.

The negro was wounded in the thigh at the time of his capture and was unable to walk during the previous lynching attempt. Officers said he confessed to killing Chief Jenkins, but said the shooting was accidental during the scuffle.

Immediately after he was brought here a mob surrounded the jail, increasing to several hundred during Sunday night. Some were local citizens, but many came from nearby communities and from as far away as Atlanta. National guardsmen were mobilized in Atlanta and Marietta and extra officers were called on duty to the jail. Without making a show of force, however ,the sheriff dissuaded any members of the mob from entering the jail, telling them that a special term of court had been called to try Clark and "justice will be done."

The guardsmen took possession of the jail yard early on the morning of September 15 and on the same day transferred Clark to Atlanta.

Two Lynchings in Week.

The special court session convened Monday and Judge Pittman delivered a lengthy charge to the grand jury on law and order, citing a Georgia statute that makes combined resistance to lawful authority punishable with death. He also informed the jurymen that a sheriff who fails to attempt to suppress mob violence is guilty of a misdemeanor, and he urged that if any of the code sections had been violated "you ought to indict."

"The reign of the mob," the judge said, "is the reign of anarchy, and must not, and will not be tolerated by a free, liberty-loving and law-abiding people."

The lynching of Clark was the second within a week in Georgia. The other victim was Willie Kirkland, Thomasville negro, who was hanged last Thursday by local citizens for an attempted attack on a white schoolgirl.

When Congress Breeds Crimes

The deplorable and inexcusable increase in lynchings in the last ten months has again set going the talk of a federal anti-lynching law. For this the lynchers and their defenders are responsible, it would be no more than they deserve were they tried by drum-head court martial, and The News and Courier, far from saying a word that would give them comfort, would not protest were they sent to the penitentiaries in droves. Nevertheless, it is for rational people to point out the folly of those who wish to destroy the states, who cannot think except in terms of the national government, and The News and Courier, so doing, re[illegible] to say anything that is pleasing to lynchers.

Why look to a "federal law" to reduce lynching? Is this a time when the success of federal law in reducing any species of crime is a thing to boast? Are not the same politicians and newspapers of New York who proclaim the collapse of the federal prohibition laws demanding a federal anti-lynching statute? On what do they ground their hope that the federal courts and juries in South Carolina would be more effective than the state courts to punish lynchers?

Were trials of lynchers in South Carolina transferred to federal courts, public opinion would instantly array itself against the federal courts. Memory of the time when these courts were hated in the South has not quite faded—it would easily be rekindled. They were hated by reason of prosecutions growing out of the relations of the two races. The federal juries are largely drawn from rural counties—it is in rural localities that most of the lynching occur. Try the lynchers in the federal courts and the result would be the stirring of the resentment of the increasing numbers of white men who are doing their utmost to put down lynching. White men on juries, some of them strong and good men, would refuse to find verdicts of guilty against lynchers, whatever the evidence, because prisoners had been dragged to federal courts, because they would not submit to what they would look on as usurpation of the rights of the state. Much as the state right feeling in the South has been betrayed by the Southerners in their haste and ignorance, it is still alive, deep in Southern nature.

"But more negroes could be placed on federal juries," one retorts. We wonder if the negroes have among their Northern friends fools of that magnitude? If they want to arm the negro-hating and negro-baiting demagogues of the South with argument to inflame the ignorant mobs, let them try that. Whatever their motives, they would by the undertaking instigate race riot, set the mischief of race war afoot.

Why should murder by mobs more than any other kind of murder be referred to federal courts? Gang murder is an unusual kind of crime, it seems to be peculiar to great cities—gangs, which after all are organized lynching parties of continuing operation, not dispersing after a single crime, are, seemingly confined to great cities, as Chicago. Shall they be tried in federal courts? Why not? Gangs in one Northern city lynch more men in a year than mobs in South Carolina lynch in half a century—and if the gangs are not lynchers, what are they? Their methods are more skilful, more deadly, more fruitful in corpses, than are those Southern mobs, but the victim of "racketeers" is, after all, the victim of a mob.

Evidence is not wanting that the more federal criminal statutes we have the more crimes are done. The congress is usually a crime breeder when it strays into the field of crime legislation.

Women Against Lynchings

Macon, Ga.

Telegraph

For 60 years, those who lynch and those who write letters to the newspapers defending lynchings, have said they were necessary for the protection of Southern womanhood. Those who lynch simply because they are bestial enough and indifferent enough to human life and contemptuous enough of law, to do so, have never troubled to give any excuse, but those who have ever attempted to make a defense have always endeavored to justify it by a false chivalry.

11/4/30

The resolution of women gathered from eight Southern states to consider the lynching question is significant, because it cuts the ground from under the justifiers. They said, among other things, "Distressed by the recent upsurge of lynchings, and noting that people still condone such crimes on the ground that they are necessary to the protection of womanhood, we, a group of white women representing eight Southern states, desire publicly to repudiate and condemn such defense of lynching and to put ourselves definitely on record as opposed to this crime in every form and under all circumstances. We are profoundly convinced that lynching is not a defense of womanhood or anything else, but rather a menace to private and public safety and a deadly blow at our most sacred institutions."

If the women become seriously enough aroused, they may be able to do what men have not done, because they have been too apathetic or too timid: force the sheriffs into fulfillment of their oaths to protect their prisoners. The Telegraph long ago came to the conclusion that in nine cases out of ten, at least, lynchings were due to cowardice on the part of some civil officer. No officer who convinces a mob that he means business with his gun will have a prisoner taken away from him, because the primary characteristic of a mob is cowardice. If the women, having deprived lynchers of their justification, will not build fires under sheriffs, they will have brought the lynching era to its death-bed.

IN MY OPINION

By COLEMAN HILL

News that Gov. L. G. Hardman intends to foster an investigation of the murder of the Negro prisoner at Darien, comes as a distinct shock to those of us who have observed the great man's doings since he came into office.

For, in the midst of this terrifying year in which we have come to expect each day's front page to carry tidings of another lynching, the head of our State has maintained his customary policy of aggressive inaction. He has listened, not to the rumblings of the lawless rebellion that is sweeping Georgia, but to the radio whimsies of Amos and Andy.

Seemingly, in this period when lynchings have become commonplace, the Governor has abandoned even the amenities of this quaint Southern pastime. The shortest memory can recall the time when an outbreak of mob violence brought from the capitol an honest denunciation of the crime, a demand for prompt inquiry, an offer of the State's help, sometimes a posting of reward for the leaders. Our present chieftain has seen fit to forget these little courtesies of the trade which, though perhaps only slightly effective in the eventual administration of justice, at least gave us the assurance of official disapproval.

Mr. Hardman, while lynchings have taken place all about him, has gone blandly on the way he has elected for the lasting immortality of history. He will be known as the American executive who felt the bumps on criminals' heads and advocated the finger-printing of all the students in State universities.

Macon, Ga.

In Favor of the Inevitable

The lynching history of this year is convincing proof that only one hope remains for eliminating our blight of mass-murder.

I have never been one to desire suppression of evils by law. In the entire course of this column I have not, so far as I can recall, urged legislation as a remedy for social ills. The disastrous administration of the Volstead act has been sufficient evidence that statute may be useless.

Yet in the present emergency I believe a Federal anti-lynching law the only possible cure.

Perhaps it will not work. The need is so pressing that it MUST be tried.

* * *

Only Grounds for Disagreement

Opponents of such a law can rest their attitude on one of two arguments: either they believe the State able to prevent lynchings or punish lynchers; or they think the action of the mob is right.

Now, the experience of past months has proved indisputably that the State either cannot, or will not, make the effort demanded of it. In 1926, when a white man, not a Negro, was lynched in Coffee county, a judge and a solicitor who respected their oaths of office, saw to it that the offenders were tried and sentenced. That example, as well as the better economic conditions of ensuing months, kept Georgia free of such [illegible] crimes for three years.

Last winter Ocilla, Ga., gave the signal for resumption of the rope. And the law lay supine before this affront to it. Since then, in one part of the State after another, black men have been strung up and shot, without apparent legal attempt to exact that retribution our code is supposed to require. The final breakdown of lawful method is openly accepted by County Commissioner A. V. Neal, of Cartersville, who, speaking of the recent lynching in his town, boldly told the newspapers:

"I believe I am safe in saying the action of the men who took the Negro from the jail is not only condoned, but has met with practically unanimous approval."

In the face of this official utterance, no sane person may longer maintain that the State is able to look after itself.

The other alternative, the approval of mob rule, leaves only hopelessness and despair in its wake. If—as Commissioner Neal does, as many citizens of Ocilla did—one finds lynchings ever, for any offense, justifiable,—then our government may as well be given into the hands of anarchists and communists. For, in that event, we are faced with the complete disruption of our entire system.

The State Must Take Responsibility

And so I see no hope for the South save in the possibility of an effective anti-lynching law from Washington. A recent news note told that representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in New York, were engaged in drawing up a statute to be introduced in the next session of Congress; and, because I value our character more than our pride, I heartily hope it will go through.

What form the measure will take, I do not know. The Dyer bill, passed in 1922 by 230 to 119 votes in the House, but defeated by a filibuster in the Senate, will doubtless provide the model. That ordinance, according to a resume of it given in Walter White's Rope and Faggot, did not plan to "supersede or nullify State action against lynchers, since Federal action would, under the bill's provisions, be possible only in certain contingencies; 'when the State or county officers do not try to prevent or punish a lynching they are criminally liable, the county is made subject to a fine (of $10,000) and the Federal court, with its jury drawn from a broader district than the county panel, shall try the lynchers.' Instead of relieving the States from the task of preventing and punishing lynchings they are given every inducement and opportunity to act before the Federal power would be operative."

One Way Out

Dr. White also tells of a proposal made by Governor Atkinson, a predecessor of the bump-feeling Hardman, who ruled this State in the early 1890's. He recommended that, in the event a peace officer entrusted with a prisoner found himself unable or unwilling to protect him from a menacing mob, the officer be required to remove the handcuffs and free and arm the prisoner.

Thus, where officials were too weak to do so, the man would have a chance to defend his own life. Mr. Atkinson reasoned that a mob was composed of cowards; that any firm and obstinate resistance to it, though by a single man at bay would frighten it away.

A Georgia Lynching

Alabama has had so close a shave in the Huntsville attempt at a lynching that it may seem unbecoming for The Age-Herald to express its feelings about the horrible business in Cartersville, Ga., accounts of which indicate that the local and state authorities clearly failed to give the mob's victim the protection which he should have had under the circumstances. But in that very fact, which contrasts so strikingly with the successful vigor shown in this state, lies the justification for saying that Georgia is disgraced by this vicious upflare of primitive blood-lust, to which the authorities seem to have lent themselves through weakness or intention.

A negro had killed the chief of police of Cartersville. Because mob violence was being threatened, he was removed for safe-keeping to Atlanta. Then he was brought back for trial, and it was then that he was taken from jail by a masked band which proceeded to hang him in orthodox fashion. One would have imagined that proper precautions had been taken to prevent this atrocity. One would have imagined that the sheriff would be ready for the emergency which developed. One would have imagined that the governor of Georgia would take cognizance of the ugly possibilities of the situation.

But apparently none of these evidences of diligence figured in the arrangements. "They were orderly and quiet, but descended upon us like a cyclone," the sheriff reports concerning the experience against which he should have prepared himself. "They were in the jail before I was awake, overpowered the turnkey and got their man. They were all masked so that we could not recognize anyone."

It is easy to understand that no arrests have been made of members of the mob. It is easy to understand why the sheriff should think the situation is now "calm." In Cartersville, it is not considered necessary to take even elementary measures to prevent a lynching. And when that which was pre-ordained occurs, the sheriff has the supreme satisfaction of knowing that the lynchers have gone home after killing "their man."

This affair is a very serious disclosure of the savagery which springs up so frequently in the South as to justify the reproaches which we, as a section, are quick to resent. The negro had not committed the unmentionable offense which is held in some quarters to be the warrant for a lynching bee. He was a murderer, but no one dreams of lynching a white murderer. No, it was the fact that this man was black, which damned him in the eyes of the criminals who composed that cowardly mob.

Julian Harris, of Atlanta, is on the special commission which is studying the increase of lynchings this year. He is near enough to Cartersville to be able to learn from personal inspection what has taken place there. This ghastly outrage goes far toward canceling the praises won by Georgia courts a short time ago for their striking insistence on justice to the negro.

Making Sheriffs Responsible for Lynchings

Legislation has been attempted both in Congress and in several state legislatures to make sheriffs responsible for lynchings either by dismissal from office or by heavy fine, but no such drastic cure for the evil has yet been enacted. The Dyer anti-lynching bill which had a good deal of powerful support in Congress provided for a $10,000 fine for the sheriff of a county who failed to protect his prisoner from mob violence. Up in Indiana a grand jury has just returned a true bill against a sheriff who allowed a mob to take a prisoner from him. The prisoner was subsequently lynched.

It is not very clear just how far the law should go in putting responsibility on sheriffs on such critical occasions, but it will not be denied that if a heavy fine or forfeiture of office should be prescribed, these officials would not be outwitted and overpowered by mobs so frequently, and would be more alert in safeguarding their prisoners. It is the common excuse of sheriffs and deputies that they were taken by surprise, or were outnumbered or found it futile to resist. This is often a lame excuse, for it is usually well known when feeling is tense and a mob outbreak is imminent. Under such conditions officers with a right conception of their duties, will spirit their prisoners to safety or throw adequate guards about them. The plea of being "overpowered" is also known to be of a very flimsy texture for one determined, couregous sheriff can stand off and put to rout a half dozen mobs. It has often been done. A mob is usually just as ready to run as it is to advance. It acts when its members know they have the "drop" and the numerical advantage. The officer owes it to the state to go the limit, and die with his boots on when the exigency requires. Mobs not only defy constituted authority but ursurp the functions of the government itselt. It is a fact not to be disputed that if officers knew failure to protect prisoners meant expulsion from office, more mobs would be circumvented and fewer helpless prisoners put to death.

ASSERT LAWLESS ACT NOT DEFENSE OF WOMANHOOD

Resolutions Brand Lynch Law as "Deadly Blow at Our Most Sacred Institutions."

OFFICIALS CALLED TO STOP "ANARCHY"

Plea Made to Religious Leaders To "Cry Aloud Against This Crime 'Til It Ceases To Exist."

Twenty-one women, prominent in the religious, educational and social life of the south, met in Atlanta Saturday, broadcast to the world a repudiation of lynching as "a defense of womanhood," and called upon America to make an end of this crime "which discredits our civilization and our religion around the globe." Eight southern states were represented in the meeting.

"We are convinced that lynching is not a defense of womanhood or of anything else," said the women in their statement, "but rather a menace to private and public safety and a deadly blow at our most sacred institutions." Lynching, according to the group, "is not alone the crime of ignorant and irresponsible mobs, but every citizen who condones it, even by his silence, must accept a share of its guilt."

Anti-Mob Crusade Planned.

The meeting, called by the commission on interracial co-operation, spent the day planning a sustained southwide crusade, through all available agencies, against mob violence. Efforts will be made to enlist the organized bodies of women, religious and civic, and a special appeal will be made to the governors of the various states, in the belief that their influence may be made an effective factor in the prevention of lynching, as has been demonstrated in Alabama,

North Carolina and other states. Most of them are officially connected with large and influential bodies of women. Those present at the meeting were:

Mrs. Una Roberts Lawrence, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. J. Morgan Stevens and Miss M. M. Lackey, Jackson, Miss.; Mrs. Ernest Moore, Clarksdale, Miss.; Mrs. W. C. Winsborough, Shreveport, La.; Mrs. J. H. McCoy, Athens, Ala.; Mrs. Maud Henderson, Birmingham, Ala.; Mrs. W. A. Newell, Greensboro, N. C.; Miss Gertrude Weil, Goldsboro, N. C.; Miss Louise Young, Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. R. L. Harris and Mrs G. V. Patterson, Knoxville, Tenn.; Mrs. Willie Snow Ethridge, Macon Ga.; Mrs. W. Frank Smith, Mrs. W. T. Martin and Miss Elizabeth Head Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. L. H. Jennings Columbia, S. C.; Mrs. P. O. Arrowsmith, Kingstree, S. C.; Mrs. W. A Turner, Newnan, Ga.; Miss Abigail Curlee and Mrs. Jessie Daniel Ames Decatur, Ga. Mrs. Ames, who is director of the woman's work department of the interracial commission presided at the meeting. Follow is the statement which was unanimously adopted and given to the public:

"Distressed by the recent upsurge of lynchings, and noting that people still condone such crimes on the ground that they are necessary to the protection of womanhood, we, a group of white women representing eight southern states, desire publicly to repudiate and condemn such defense of lynching, and to put ourselves definitely on record as opposed to this crime in every form and under all circumstances.

"We are profoundly convinced that lynching is not a defense of womanhood or of anything else, but rather a menace to private and public safety, and a deadly blow at our most sacred institutions. Instead of deterring irresponsible and criminal classes from further crime, as it is argued, lynching tends inevitably to destroy all respect for law and order. It represents the complete breakdown of government and the triumph of anarchy. It brutalizes the community where it occurs, including the women and children who frequently witness its orgies, and particularly the youth who are usually conspicuous participants. In its indiscriminate haste for revenge, the mob sometimes takes the lives of innocent persons, and often inflicts death for minor offenses. It brings contempt upon America as the only country where such crimes occur, discredits our civilization, and discounts the Christian religion around the globe.

Constitution 11-2-30

"We would call attention to the fact that lynching is not alone the crime of ignorant and irresponsible mobs, but that every citizen who condones it, even by his silence, must accept a share of its guilt.

"We, therefore, call upon all our public officials to use every power at their disposal to protect from mob anarchy the laws they are sworn to defend; upon our religious leaders to cry aloud against this crime till it ceases to exist; upon parents and teachers to train up a generation incapable of such relapses into barbarism, and upon all right-thinking men and women to do their utmost in every way for the complete eradication of this crime."

Lynching—Its Cause and Cure.

Editor The News.

I note with pleasure that there has been a commission appointed of six southerners, with you as chairman, to make a significant study of the problem of lynching and that you have already begun its survey. I am glad this step had been taken. If there ever was an evil that needed correction this one does, for it is a hideous black blotch on our civilization. I wish I could do or say something that would help you to bury the crime. It needs no debate to prove that it is bad —very bad!

It's Cause.—Let us be not like the man who was a few yards below the spring trying to clarify the muddy stream. While he was filtering away working hard to no avail trying to clarify the stream, a sage that happened to be passing saw what the poor fellow was trying to do, said, "Friend if you will stop that hog from wallowing in that spring the stream will clarify itself!" Find the cause first and then remove it, if possible.

There is not a shadow of a doubt in my mind as to what is the cause of lynching? There is a cause. We do not live in a world of "happen so!" Things occur because something makes them occur, and here it is. A lack of confidence upon the part of the people in the execution of our laws is the mother of lynching!

Let us learn a lesson on the execution of law from the Africans. I heard one W. J. David, who had spent forty years as a missionary in Africa tell how thew execute their laws.

One accused of a crime had to prove he was innocent or else he was adjudged guilty and the penalty without exception was enforced and that was the fellow's head was cut off and hoisted on a pole and remained there thirty days. The consequences were there was the smallest per cent of any crime, such as murder, adultery, theft, etc., committed and no lynching. No lawyers there for they would starve to death there if they depended on the practice of law for a living. Now I am not pleading for "head chopping." I am pleading for a full, fair, faithful execution of our laws alike on black and white, rich and poor, high and low, old and young, which would cure the evil of lynching.

As it is today with our slack execution of our laws any thoughtful reader of this article knows that if I had the money I could commit a brutal crime and that in the presence of a plenty of witnesses and then hire some lawyer like Clarence Darrow, and he would "save my neck." They might let me go and keep company for a few years with Leopold and Loeb with the strong hopes of getting out of there on insanity or some other false pretense.

Its cure is a proper execution of the law which would restore the people's confidence in its execution. Then when a criminal was run down and caught the offended party would say "all right boys, take him to the courts He will get his just reward there." But now what would you say, reader? I know what you would justly say. "Well if we trust in the "law having its course" some lawyer would pull him through some of the loopholes, and he would get out of it, so we will have to take the case in hand and execute him ourselves."

Why do we so often hear it said, "There is no justice in law?"

Now Mr. Chairman. I admit that there is occasionally one that does get his just reward at the courts of our land, but so few. I also admit that it's going to be a hard, long job to bring about the needed necessary reform in the execution of the law, for so many citizens fail to realize the need of it and worse, so many lawyers and other executive officers get their bread and butter out of "getting the criminal out of it."

The pardoning power of the governor also is so badly abused, but he feels that he is following the wishes of the people when (shame on them) such long petitions are presented to him—petitions with citizens, lawyers, jurors, judges names on it—praying him to grant full pardon to someone. All of which encourages mob violence. Yours truly,

J. L. WILLIAMS.

A Brighter Side

"The evil men do lives after them," and, assuredly, the evil men do is most widely broadcast. Georgia is getting extensive advertising because of atrocious lynchings that have occurred recently. Terrible they were and inexcusable, and justly is the state criticized.

But there is a brighter light in the state that gets very little publicity. Law enforcement is the rule, whereas mob violence is the exception. The treatment of the negro in this state is not down to the level of the mob. Work is being done, by individuals, by organizations and state institutions, to help the negro.

A county agent has recently been appointed by the state and federal extension service to work among the negro farmers of Thomas, Brooks and Lowndes counties. This service is to be furnished to aid those of the colored race to become better citizens and to give them a better chance to prove an asset to the state.

"When the subject of Georgia's handling of the negro is discussed, remember there are several phases of it that do not "make the headlines."

The Church Against Lynching Evil

The notable increase in lynchings during the past 12 months has been the source of much concern and anxiety among civic leaders and well-wishers of the South and her people, and the complaint is made that the churches have not spoken out vigorously against mob violence or taken active measures to suppress these crimes which leave a stigma on our civilization. But these charges are not supported by the evidence.

The truth is that the church bodies in the South year in and year out have voiced their opposition to lynching and gone on record asking for its suppression. For example, in Georgia, the other day the Methodist conference, in condemning lynchings in that state, adopted a resolution saying "What has happened in Georgia challenges every religious leader, public official and Christian citizen to determined and unrelenting war upon this blighting survival of barbarism." During the present year the Southern Baptist convention and the Southern Methodist General conference have each unanimously condemned lynching. The Methodist conference that met in Dallas last May promptly by unaimous vote condemned the lynching outrage at Sherman, Tex. No organizations have done more to discourage the practice of lynching than have the Southern churches, uniformed racial to the con[illegible]y, notwithstand

A STEP IN TIME

GOVERNOR CAULFIELD evidently is determined that Missouri shall not be disgraced by another lynching or race riot during his administration. He sends troops to place Ste. Genevieve under military control for the second time within a week. The governor seems to think that it is better to risk criticism by sending out troops when they may not be needed than to wait until after a mob crime has been committed. That's a wise attitude. Putting a town under martial law may bring a state a little uncomplimentary publicity but if it prevents a lynching or a race riot it is cheap at the price.

THE LATEST LYNCHING.

The lynching of the negro Clark, at Cartersville early Wednesday morning by a small mob of lawless men, is commented upon by the Chattanooga Times in these proper terms:

"Their premeditation involved not only the taking of a human life, but also the trampling under foot of the sovereignty and authority of the people of Georgia as expressed in their government. . . . It was a deliberate defiance of the state and local governments."

And The Times asks of Georgia: "What is it going to do about it? Lie contentedly in its disgrace, make a hypocritical gesture toward trying to bring the masked criminals to justice, or round them up and punish them as murderers?"

That question appeals to the honor and self-respect of our people, and especially so to the judge of the superior court of Bartow county. On Monday he delivered to the grand jury of the county a timely and striking charge in the interest of the due course of justice and within twelve hours all he said was blown to the winds, his court and authority damned by the contempt of a cowardly mob and shame poured upon the county, the state and its whole machinery of justice.

No court can maintain its righteous character and the confidence of the people that permits itself to be thus defied. Every interest of sovereign justice demands that the court recover its even scales and sword and visit upon those who usurped them the most prompt and condign punishment.

It will not do to try and ram down the throats of the honest people of Georgia that the members of that Cartersville mob cannot be ferreted out and brought to the bar of justice. Such a claim and such a failure will be the rankest of insults to the intelligence and honor of the people of this state.

If this defiant contempt of a court, this outrage upon lawful justice, this absolutely unnecessary insult to the majesty of the state is permitted to find immunity, to go unpursued by judge, grand jury and sheriff, condoned by whatever element of the community, then the humiliation of Georgia before the gaze of the nation will be complete.

We cannot claim a sufferable place in the ranks of civilized people if we are to allow our jails to be invaded by mobs, our courts violently robbed of their jurisdiction and the good name of the state smeared with the gruesome blood of lynch murders. The tendency to such anarchy is intolerable and the fair-minded, conscientious citizens of the state must be as one in demanding that it be quenched by every authority and power that the state possesses.

Seeking Light on Lynchings

JUST when it seemed that eradication of the lynching evil had been all but accomplished a recrudescence of mob violence appeared, and the year 1930 will probably record more instances of this crime than in a decade. There have already been twice as many lynchings this year as there were last year, and the lawless wave shows no signs of abating.

What shall be done about it? Many forces in the past have united in their efforts to stamp out this form of lawlessness. The press, educational and religious leaders, social workers, and many persons prominent in political life have striven to arouse public sentiment against tolerating lynching. In recent years, officers of the law more and more have shown a determination not to be overriden by mobs, and officers have been responsible for preventing many lynchings.

Still, now and then some one has fallen victim to a mob. And this year's record is truly discouraging to every supporter of law and order, and of an orderly and legal administration of justice. What is to be done about this revival of barbarity, which has been manifest particularly in the South this year?

To a number of leaders of thought in the South it has occurred that one of the first things to be done should be the making of a study of the causes of lynching. Most anyone can advance, in general terms, the cause of mob violence. Loss of control by groups of men whose passions have been whipped to a frenzy by some heinous crime, disgust at the law's delays, and fears that offenders will not be adequately punished by the law. These are some of the reasons for lynching, in the opinion of the average person.

But, the idea of making a scientific study of each case of lynching, to get down to the rock bottom facts regarding the causes, has induced the citizens referred to above to undertake a thorough investigation of the 1930 lynching record. The commission on interracial cooperation will sponsor the commission.

The standing of the men who are to serve on this new fact-finding commission is such as to command for the body instant respect from the whole country. Included in the commission's personnel are George Fort Milton, editor Chattanooga News and noted Southern Democratic leader; Dr. Howard W. Odum, head of the social science research bureau of the University of North Carolina; Julian Harris of the Atlanta Constitution; Alex. W. Spence, attorney, of Dallas; Dr. W. P. King, book editor of the Southern Methodist church, distinguished minister, author and editor; Dr. W. J. McGlothlin, president Furman university, Greenville, S. C., and president Southern Baptist convention. The colored members of the commission take first rank in their respective fields. They are Dr. R. R. Moton, principal Tuskegee institute; John Hope, president Atlanta university; Dr. Charles S. Johnson of Fisk university, Nashville, and B. F. Hubert, president Georgia State college at Savannah.

Setting this commission to work shows that a more serious effort than has ever been made before to eradicate mob violence is going to be made in the South. The commission's findings doubtless will shed light on lynching causes that will enable the foes of the evil to fight it more intelligently and more effectually in the future.

AGAINST LYNCHINGS

Contrary to the aims, aspirations and hopes of ex-Senator Blease, South Carolina gamecock, and Senator "Tom Tom" Heflin, Alabama's gift to the humor of the nation, Southern leaders have made a significant step towards abolition of lynching in the Southern states.

The unusually large number of lynchings that have taken place this year has led a commission of Southern leaders to undertake a study of each case to determine the cause of the violence and to formulate an effective preventive program.

Lynchings this year already total more than twice the number last year. And only yesterday a Georgia mob brutally murdered a 20-year-old negro boy and then drug his body around Thomasville on the back of a truck.

With howls and curses of "Nordic supremacy," bigoted and sensational public men of the South have continually howled to the prejudices of the white illiterate, while the innocent majority of Southern people get the blame.

As a means to end lynching, the commission has been formed and will be sponsored by the commission on inter-racial co-operation, an organization of Southern people. This commission will assist the committee to study lynchings in the South. Not only will the actual lynching cases be studied, but those attempted lynchings which were frustrated for some reason or other, will be thoroughly investigated.

Julian Harris, son of the famous Joel Chandler Harris, Pulitzer prize winner for 1926, former editor of the Columbus Enquirer-Sun and now state editor for the Atlanta Constitution, is one of the two journalists on the committee. Mr. Harris while hounded by financial difficulties, his life threatened, his paper maligned and his home dynamited, plead for tolerance, justice for the negro and poor white and received as a reward the loss of his paper and the curses of Southern editors, who labeled his work, "as an effort to win Northern publicity at the cost of Southern journalism."

Dr. Howard W. Another Lynching

Another human life sacrificed to the hate and anger of the mob. A negro, accused of a heinous crime, but denied trial by jury as provided by the laws of the state and the nation, is murdered at Thomasville, his body is dragged through the streets and left on the public square, a mangled, bleeding example of disregard for law.

The word again goes out to other states that lawlessness reigns in Georgia: that racial antagonism exists. The situation is deplored by all good men of both races. Georgia stands disgraced in the eyes of good citizens everywhere.

And what good can come of this mob violence? If the negro who paid the horrible death penalty at Thomasville was the guilty criminal he would have been punished by law. Justice would have done her work and the members of the mob would not carry on their hands to their graves the blood of a human being. No good can come of it.

A LYNCHING IN GEORGIA

Compared to some of the lynchings that have disgraced the state of Georgia, the lynching at Thomasville, Thursday, was a mild affair. The negro victim was not burned at the stake. His body was not hacked to pieces, or drawn through the streets of the town tied to the rear axle of an automobile. He was merely shot and then dumped on the courthouse grounds, for the "duly constituted authorities" to dispose of, as they saw fit. Georgia has had much more sensational lynchings. That state can do itself proud, even as Texas can, when it starts on a lynching spree.

But an ironic touch is given to the Thomasville lynching by a jury that actually commends the sheriff "for the quiet and orderly manner in which he handled the angry crowd at the jail and stockade and for the prevention of other bloodshed." The sheriff will be re-elected when he runs again.

The sheriff maintained comparative peace and quiet and prevented "other bloodshed" by the simple expedient of not doing his duty, if the press reports accurately describe what occurred. Not only did he fail to do his duty after he was face to face with a mob bent upon lynching his prisoner, but he seems to have taken no precautions whatever to protect the negro after it was evident to practically everybody in the town that a lynching was brewing.

To begin at the beginning, the negro, little more than a boy, accosted a white schoolgirl. He did not harm her, although he probably intended to do so. But it is a fact that the "usual crime" was not committed. The sheriff had ample warning of intended violence. Had the sheriff wanted to, he could have spirited his prisoner away. In the meantime the customary appeals were made by ministers and other good people to let the law take its course. Talking that way to a mob determined to lynch a negro is like trying to sweep back the ocean with a broom, unless a few shotguns and pistols are exhibited by the sheriff's force to back up the remarks.

The sheriff had all night to take some measures for preventing a lynching. According to the press report from Thomasville, not until next day did the fact dawn upon him that the crowd was growing restless. Then he "planned" to remove the negro to some other jail. It seems that all the time the negro had been kept in the stockade, instead of the jail. Issuing from the stockade with his prisoner, the sheriff was "attacked and disarmed." A few minutes later another lynching was added to Georgia's lengthy list of mob outbreaks.

The sheriff could not identify any members of the mob, he said, being the sole witness before the jury. Then the jury complacently rendered the usual verdict. Unless the governor takes some action, the incident, so far as the commonwealth of Georgia is concerned, is closed.

GEORGIA RETURNS TO THE LYNCHING RECORD

For many years, Georgia ran Mississippi, Texas and Florida a close race to head the annual lynch-murder roll. However, after two years' comparative quiet, the State experienced but one mob crime in 1926—and that produced unprecedented consequences:

Law officers arrested 12 of the lynchers, who were arraigned in Coffee County in November following the mob's crime in August. Nine pleaded guilty; Judge Reed sentenced the confessed leader for life, and eight accomplices to four to 20 years each, in State's prison; the other three later were convicted and given similar indeterminate sentences.

That was almost four years ago and, until lately, Georgia had been sensationally conspicuous by its absence from the lynching record. To be sure, one or two attempts at lynching occurred, and a mob had released a prisoner—convinced of his innocence—which also set a precedent for Judge Lynch. By contrast, Georgia had suffered nine such crimes in 1920, eleven each in 1921 and 1922, four in 1923, two each in 1924 and 1925.

It may have been merely a coincidence that the clean slate followed the vigorous assertion of constituted authority in Coffee County—but the appearance of cause and effect is there.

Now Georgia suffers another mob outbreak—at Darien—under unusual circumstances: A watchman accosted two negroes, seen loitering about a bank at midnight; they fled to the swamps after one had shot at him. The next day the police chief was killed and three other officers were wounded in a pitched battle with the fugitives, one of whom was taken and lodged in jail.

Though a National Guard company was at the scene, a mob stormed the jail and ignored Col. Neal's orders that the negro "be not shot." That officer had no guns at the jail to enforce his command. Sheriff Poppell was absent, lured away by a fake telephone call. Governor Hardman had sent troops to keep order—which included preventing a lynching—but the mob leaders evidently surprised and outwitted the officials.

After the lynching, the Governor proclaimed martial law and Guardsmen sought the second negro. The situation calls for a thorough inquiry to determine responsibility for official neglect, if any, as well as to punish the mob murderers.

In the Coffee County case four years ago, the victim was a white man. Now it remains to be seen whether Georgia authorities will arrest, try and convict citizens who lynched a negro. That procedure there demands even more moral courage, but it would exert a correspondingly greater restraining influence upon would-be lynchers hereafter.

LYNCHING ABSURDITY

To the already excessive and disgraceful lynching record of the South this year was added another, this time at Thomasville, Ga. A negro trusty was accused of assailing a girl. He was surrendered to a mob by the sheriff, and then later the jury commended the sheriff for performing his duty. Thus we have an amazing absurdity plus a crime.

According to The Associated Press dispatch the negro prisoner was within the stockade. The crowd gathered before it. Sheriff Davis, realizing that the mob was growing restless, took his prisoner from the protection of the stockade on the pretense that he was going to move him to another jail. This was convenient for the posse. Naturally the sheriff was attacked and the negro taken from him.

The comedy in the tragedy was supplied by the jury, which said it believed Willie Kirkland, the negro, had come to his death either from gunshot wounds or by being hanged by unknown parties. It could not even determine the cause of death. But the verdict further said:

"We wish to commend our sheriff for the quiet and orderly manner in which he handled the angry crowd at the jail and stockade and for the prevention of other bloodshed. We feel assured he did his duty in every respect."

Apparently his duty was to help a mob execute a prisoner and not attempt to protect him. His method of handling an angry crowd was to feed it the victim desired. He avoided further trouble by closing his eyes and refusing even to slap somebody on the wrist. The law went into hiding when the prisoner was brought out into the open.

A Federal Anti-Lynching Law?

As was to have been expected, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has reopened its campaign for the enactment of a Federal anti-lynching law. This organization, best known in this part of the country for its activities in connection with the defeat of Judge Parker for the United States Supreme Court, has been pushing the Dyer bill for years. It is endeavoring now to commit all candidates for the House and Senate to support of a similar measure.

The opening gun of its present battle is a statement from President Hoover, given to the association under date of August 15th. "Every decent citizen must condemn the lynching evil as an undermining of the very essence of both justice and democracy," the President is quoted as saying. No one can quarrel with that. It is absolutely and literally true. Mr. Hoover does not, it will be noted, commit himself to support of a Federal anti-lynching law; but the Republican platform of 1928 did promise the early enactment of a law "to exterminate the hideous crime of lynching."

With eighteen lynchings already in 1930—twice as many as in the whole of 1929—it is not surprising that the National Association for the Advancemnet of Colored People should have seized the present opportunity to make the enactment of a Federal anti-lynching law a political issue if possible. The Dyer bill passed the House several years ago by a 2-to-1 vote and was then put to sleep in the Senate. We do not believe that such legislation is the way to put an end to lynchings. There is serious possibility, we think, that it might, for a time at least, increase the number of lynchings. But the imminent possibility of the enactment of a Federal anti-lynching law must be taken into account.

Unquestionably, the [illegible] of mob violence since the first of the present year have been extremely discouraging to those of us who had hoped that the lynch law was in process of steady disappearance. The depressing record, as Dr. Will W. Alexander, chairman of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation, says, "has seriously shaken our confidence and revealed the persistence of tragic conditions we hoped we were leaving behind." How the recent increase in lynching is to be explained we do not know. Dr. Alexander's commission has appointed a special commission, composed of a number of well known Southern men, to make a special study of the situation with a view to discovering, if possible, the causes of lynching as revealed in the record of recent months and present, if they can, "an effective preventive program."

The commission which is making this study includes on its membership several leading Southern negroes as well as a number of well known educators and publicists. Its report should at least give us a comprehensive picture of the situation.

IN THROES OF LYNCHING COMPLEX

The fair name of our sister state of Georgia was dragged into the mire again yesterday when a mob rose up, took a Negro from the custody of sworn officers of the law and strung him to a tree. The lynching crime is all the more infamous and despicable because it proves that parts at least of that great commonwealth are unable or unwilling to guarantee to its citizens the usual safeguards thrown by law around their lives. It is apparent that the state is incapable of maintaining ordered government. A Negro charged with any offense in that state stands no more chance of escaping the fury of the mob than a jack rabbit in a prairie fire.

Georgia has become the darkest blot in our civilization not with the consent of the better class of its citizenry but in spite of them. The press of no state in the Union has more bitterly arraigned the murder mobs than that of Georgia. No state in the Republic has a higher or better quality of people or a more homogeneous population than to be found there. But we are forced to believe that they are too prone to accept the old political order which puts men into office who would rather be popular with the mob than respected by the men who are the moral backbone and fibre of the commonwealth. It is to be feared that the whole political system is honeycombed by an insidious system which makes the black man common prey to the vicious, lawless whites whose chief sport is blood-letting. They are simply insatiable.

The mob complex holds Georgia in its grip. The charge of outlawry hurled against it by every state in the Union is without effect. The philippics of pulpit and press fall to the ground no sooner than uttered. Cowardly sheriffs and deputies, whose duty it is to see that human beings, be they never so low, are protected, quail before a hand full of other greater cowards who would not dare to put their threats into action in the face of one brave, determined officer with a spark of human courage in his heart. Yesterday the sheriff showed yellow to the core; but that is not as bad as the other spectacle of the soldiery standing by while an unconvicted man, fiend though he may have been, was done to death. If the governor of Georgia really desires to banish the lynching mobs in his state he should begin with the wholesale dismissal of all the white-livered sheriffs, who, if they do not openly connive with their outlaw constituents, at least throw no obstacles in their way to wreak their fury upon men made helpless by the very law that is presumed to protect them until convicted and legally executed by the recognized rules of civilization. Georgia presents a pitiable position. Perhaps we do her wrong to criticize her and to add further to her shame. But those who sow the wind must reap the whirlwind.

GREENSBORO, N. C.
RECORD

Lynching No. 19.

Willie Kirkland was the victim in lynching No. 19 in Georgia yesterday. We lynched only 12 in 1929. This year, counting Willie, we have already lynched 19, and we still have more than three months before the year ends. Mob rule is becoming more popular. Even North Carolina which hadn't had a lynching for nearly ten years staged one this year.

Willie Kirkland was a 20-year-old negro doing time on a Georgia chaingang for stealing a horse. A 9-year-old school girl in Thomasville, Ga., is said to have identified him as the man who attempted to attack her. A mob took Willie away from the sheriff and his deputies and strung him to a tree in the suburbs of the city. Then they cut the body down, tied it to a truck, drove about the city and finally dumped the corpse on the courthouse square. The spot for depositing the body was presumably selected with the idea of suggesting to the courts of Georgia how "justice" should be administered.

It may be that the mob got the wrong man, not that anyone in particular seems to care. But it does seem possible that a mistake was made. For instance, the warden at the convict camp where Willie was serving his sentence was quoted as saying that the negro did not leave the camp on the day of the alleged crime. Five other negroes were arrested along with the one who was lynched. Could the little girl have been mistaken?

A few years ago stories of German atrocities upon the weak and the defenseless stirred us to a frenzy of righteous indignation. The world must be made "safe for democracy!" We plunged into the greatest war of all time to insure the survival of right against might. Did we win? At lynching No. 19, and at every other lynching which has taken place in the United States, we have tortured and murdered our own countrymen in a manner just as brutal, just as savage, as any ever practiced by the most ruthless killers on the rosters of the Kaiser's army.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

The Infernal Spirit That Robs the Law and Disgraces the State.

In the 58 years that I have been a newspaperman I have seen five men lynched by mobs. In one case I saw two of them hung together from the same limb of a giant live oak tree.

One of the five was a negro murderer, who was hung from a lamp-post on the public square at Nashville, the capital of Tennessee, in front of the police station with brave old Captain Yates, chief of police, and all his men at immediate hand fighting like wildcats to penetrate the mob and rescue the victim.

Talk about "wild beasts of the field"—they are not in it at all with one of those troops of infuriated men, forgetting all training, all law, all civilization and fired with the blood-lust of vengeance!

* * * *

A Strange Cycle of Passion.

In this America of ours, where lynching seems more indigenous than in any other so-called civilized land, the psychology that urges to it seems to have its cycles. It flames and fades by seasons, as it were, for there are in localities long seasons when there are no mob demonstrations, and then will ensue a period when almost any major crime set up a community cry of "lynch him, hang him, burn him!"

The south, since the long-ago interstates war, has been peculiarly the field in which the lynching spirit has been most prevalent and popular.

I say "popular" because there have been so few cases of lynchers being indicted, successfully prosecuted and punished for their murders. Our record in that line of law and justice is one of the most shameful to be found among professedly Christian mankind.

* * * *

Mob Murders Flow and Ebb.

Looking over the record back to 1885 one finds that up to this year we have had 4,291 reported lynchings. That is more than 97 a year and more than 8 per month.

The highest annual number was in 1892 when 255 were lynched and the lowest number in a year was 1928 when only 9 were recorded.

This year the lynching spirit seems to be once more flaming over the country, especially in our southland, and already we are adding up a record bloodier than for a decade past.

Georgia has the honor, if anybody wishes to so regard it, of having the top place on the lynching roll. From 1889 to 1927 the nearest full record at hand, we lynched 24 white persons and 433 negroes, a total of 457. Mississippi was our nearest rival, she having lynched 26 whites and 416 negroes, a total of 442.

There were in that time lynchings in every state except the six in New England and New Jersey.

* * * *

Who the Victims Happened to Be.

Of the 3,680 persons lynched between 1889 and 1928 the whites were 783 and the negroes were 2,897.

Perhaps there is somebody living who is wise enough and honest enough to tell the world why nearly four times as many negroes should have been lynched than white men were for the same crimes—with the white criminals of the nation outnumbering the negro criminals by largely more than four to one?

All of those negroes but 110 were lynched in the southern states—our toll being 2,787.

These are figures that deserve to be most seriously studied by Christian men, by public officers, legislators and jurists who have the care and administration of the laws of life, liberty and property in their sworn keeping. There is much that is rotten in a civilization with that record.

* * * *

The Hinge of the Whole Matter.

The God's truth is that among the ignorant and low-bred class of whites throughout the south there is an intense and bitter hatred of the negro.

There was a great leaven of it among us long before the negroes were set free and it was mutual between the well-kept, well-fed blacks on the plantations and home-lots and the "po' white trash," shiftless and thriftless on the outside.

But in those days the negro-hating whites did not dare to lay hands upon the big white man's "nigger," and the negro felt the security and pride of that immunity.

The freeing of the negroes at the end of the War Between the States sunk that immunity and the enmity between the two classes became open. It has largely continued until now and is not likely to be soon entirely quenched by preachments from the pulpit or sermons from the judicial bench.

* * * *

What the Cure Must Be.

There will be no ending finally of this damnable spirit of lynching lawlessness until our communities are permeated with a stronger and deeper respect for the sacredness of life and law.

Whatever security for life is needed can be afforded by righteous and bravely enforced law. It is the right of a sovereign state only to condemn to death and execute the penalty.

A mob breaking a jail, or overpowering officers of the law, to wreak its vengeance upon a helpless prisoner, however vile and bloody, is a big consolidated coward of which every member is an equally cowardly atom.

Of the five men whom I have seen lynched all were safely in the hands of the law until the mob overrode the law and committed murder upon them. When Georgia shall have electrocuted a few lynchers she will begin to feel herself better civilized.

We Get a Letter

Macon Telegraph

10-14-30

Macon, Ga.

We have the following letter from J. Z Dooly, who lives near Darien:

To the Editor of The Telegraph:

You seem to enjoy knocking someone you know nothing about. The latest I notice in your dark complected paper today, as I sit in a cafe in the little city of Tifton. It appears that you want to hop on Adjutant General Parker for the Darien trouble a few weeks ago.

I do not approve of anything like that but still I keep my nose out of other people's affairs even if they are wrong. I know nothing of the affair at all, just like you, but when a man tries to uphold Negroes in certain crimes like you seem to do, well, all I can see is it makes them more determined to commit these same crimes that are sweeping the South.

If something was not done where would it end? They care nothing for law—what little we have.

Mr. Dark Cloud, just wait. If anything happens close to home or any of your relatives what would you do?

I have never had the agony of looking at you, so won't you publish your picture in your rotten paper. Let the people see your mug. Bet that will let them know you came from Tuskegee. Or are you being paid by that institute for all your remarks?

I live not far from Darien. You ought to visit there sometime. Another town about one hundred and fifteen miles sures loves you.

I may write more when I get back home.

Mr. Dooly promises to write us more when he gets back home. We hope he does. He has the virtue of saying something, even if it is all wrong. For his benefit, we list a few of things he has wrong.

We have not hopped on Adjutant-General Parker for what happened at Darien. He was on leave of absence when that crime was committed. We urged him to make a complete investigation of the Guard's conduct at Darien. He has not done that.

We do not uphold Negroes in their crimes. But we do not know any logic under which crimes of white people, especially lynching, can be justified either. The lynching at Darien was not provoked by rape, which is the only crime for which anybody has ever undertaken to justify mob murder.

Mr. Dooly asks what we would do if the crime came close home. We answered that once previously by saying that we might revert so far to barbarism as to participate in a lynching, but if we did, we should at least have a repulsive reaction to it. We should not endeavor to justify it by conniving in official lying and hypocrisy. We should probably be ready to admit that all the centuries of civilizing influences since our ancestors swung their clubs in the forests of Europe and worshipped their idols had been wasted on us. We should be ready to admit that all the influences of religion had fallen on the stone of our soul. We should be ready to admit that all the arraignment of mob cowardice that has made it so despicable, has fallen on deaf ears. We should be ready to admit that we had forgot the stream of blood that has flowed down the centuries of time to buy for the common man the right to have his day in court. We should be ready to admit that we had violated every concept of a religion to which this country gives lip service, at least; that we had outraged every guarantee of due process of law that had been won; that we had violated every instinct of manly character by joining a lawless gang; that we had resorted to superior numbers to achieve what we did not have courage enough to do alone. In other words, since Mr. Dooly asks us, we might join a mob, but we would not defend it, as he does.

Mr. Dooly flatters us when he asks for our picture. It really doesn't do us justice. He wouldn't like it, even if it were good.

LYNCHING DUE TO WEAK OFFICIALS

Says Church Leaders, Who Also Place Part of Blame on Churchmen.

Atlanta, October 2.—(AP)—A group of prominent clerical and lay leaders of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, today issued a statement ascribing the persistence of lynching to the neglect of religious leaders to impress the people with "the solemn warnings of the church on the subject" and the weakness and complicity on the part of the public officials.

North Carolina Lynching.

North Carolina's fine record of nine years without a lynching has been broken. This unfortunate event will afford the first opportunity for testing the new and drastic statute of that state designed to prevent this evil. The terms of this law are stern and Governor Gardner has acted promptly with a view to identifying the members of the mob and invoking the provisions of the act.

In sucstance this law provides that every member of a mob that injures a person is subject to imprisonment for not less than one nor more than ten years. If the victim is killed every member of the mob is liable to trial for murder. Civil damages can be claimed from the family of the victim from any participant in the mob. Where a lynching occurs the governor is given authority to designate the attorney-general or other special attorneys to assist in the prosecution and authority is given for the expenditure of public funds for the apprehension of members of the mob.

These statutes may have a deterrent effect. It is well that ample authority is conferred upon the chief executive for the apprehension and conviction of those who bring disgrace upon the state and discredit its judicial machinery. At the same time, judging by past experience we are inclined to doubt the efficacy of legislation alone to eradicate the lynching evil from our country.

The only sure remedy will be through the education of the people. In spite of the recurrence of this evil during the present year in a number of states we are persuaded that we have made progress in recent years in creating a sounder and healthier public sentiment against mob violence.

It is much better to prevent the mob's work than to depend upon the conviction of the members after the crime is committed. If officials of the law were only more alert and more determined there would be fewer of these crimes to disgrace the annals of our country. From the reports of the North Carolina lynching it does not appear that the sheriff took every possible precaution to protect the victim. He presumed too much upon the restraint of the mob although the crime was an especially heinous one. The identification of mob members has always been a difficult task. Even when that is accomplished convictions have been exceedingly rare. Hence, the best way to bring about reform is through an enlightened public sentiment and by the election of such officials as are wholly dependable in every grave emergency.

LYNCHING A HABIT?

Among the various disquieting criminal activities occurring recently, the recurrence of the lynching mania in a number of states is one of the most distressing. Already the list for 1930 outnumbers that of 1929, and the outlook for the balance of the year is not reassuring, the lust for that particular crime feeling largely upon the frequency of its own gratification.

When certain crimes, such as murder or rape, are committed by irresponsible persons — Negroes, for instance, in the south—the impelling urge to "lynch" is stimulated by the example of mob violence reported as the method certain other communities adopt in dealing with such offenders. If a community in Georgia or Mississippi, for instance, lynches a murderer or a rapist, then mobs in Alabama, North Carolina and other states, apparently believe it is incumbent on them to show that they have the same sort of lawless contempt for the perpetrators of such crimes as their fellow citizens in other states.

Our neighbor, Cartersville, Ga., has just been menaced with a mob murder to its discredit, and perhaps, because down at Darien, lower Georgia, the other day a mob put a Negro, charged with murder, to death without judge or jury. Fortunately feeling against the slayer of Police Chief Jenkins, of Cartersville, did not get out of bounds. Sheriff G. W. Gaddis is reported to have been of the opinion that the crowd of 200 gathered merely out of curiosity. Be that as it may, the mayor of Cartersville would appear to have acted wisely in appealing to Gov. Hardman in an effort to prevent possible development of serious trouble. And subsequent removal of the prisoner to the Fulton county jail at Atlanta has precluded the possibility of an outbreak of violence in this case.

Disposition on the part of the public to let the law take its course, together with a proper degree of self-control, is the best safeguard against lynchings. But in the absence of these things, there is need for courage, resourcefulness and faithfulness to duty on the part of officers of the law. And when the officer is faithless to his trust or is overrun by the mob, it is incumbent on a civilized society deserving to be called such to see to it that those who take the law into their own hands are brought to the bar of justice and properly punished.

Unfortunately efforts by constituted authorities to bring lynchers to account for their crimes have largely been mere gestures, although in some few cases members of such mobs have been convicted and punished.

The Lynching Problem.

Lynchings during the present year have increased considerably for the simple reason that the crimes which cause lynchings have increased in number and heinousness. The total number of lynchings will be published later as usual, but their publication will be entirely unfair unless the list is accompanied also by another list that contains not only the number of lynchings actually prevented, but also the honest and earnest efforts made to punish the members of mobs guilty of lynchings.

The case of Huntsville, Ala., right now in the public eye, can not in fairness be eliminated from any statement that would be intended to show the status of mob lawlessness in the United States. Prompt and vigorous action in that city by Governor Graves and other officials have prevented a lynching most effectively. And the action of the Alabama governor is but a repetition of the course followed by other southern executives during the present year, when lynchings either were committed or were threatened in their states.

The real truth about the lynching problem during the year 1930 would be that it is nearer solution than it has ever been, despite the increase in the number of victims of mob violence. The whole record and not a part of it should be presented to the American people, so that they might judge for themselves.

BLAME FOR LYNCHINGS FIXED BY CHURCHMEN

Constitution

In a statement given out here Wednesday by a commission of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, the persistence of lynching was laid to neglect on the part of preachers to impress their people with the heinousness of this crime, together with weakness and complicity on the part of public officials. Composed of a number of prominent churchmen, clerical and lay, the commission appealed to preachers, officers and good citizens in general to "wage determined and unrelenting war upon this blighting survival of barbarism."

Officers who "weakly or willingly yield to mobs," according to the commission, "should be made to feel the full weight of public execration, and if possible to answer legally for their breach of public trust."

The paper was signed by Dr. J. W. Perry, home mission secretary, of Nashville, Tenn.; Professor N. C. Newbold, of the state department of education, Raleigh, N. C.; Dr. Theodore H. Jack, of Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. E. C. Peters, president of Paine College, Augusta, Ga.; Mrs. J. J. McEachern, of Atlanta, and Dr. W. W. Alexander, director of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation. The statement in full is as follows:

"Year after year our church, through its various conferences and other official groups, has voiced the severest condemnation of lynching, as a sin against God and a crime against society. Yet lynchings have gone on, to the world-wide discredit of our boasted civilization and our most sacred professions of faith. Just now we are in the midst of a peculiarly depressing resurgence of this type of crime.

"It appears obvious that the solemn warnings of the church on this subject have not been taken seriously, due in no small measure, we fear, to the failure of religious leaders themselves to bring them seriously to the attention of the people. We therefore appeal [illegible] to every pastor in our connection to cry aloud against this 'crime or crime' until every community is determined that it must be ended once for all.

Oct-4-30

Atlanta
Ga

"It is obvious, also, that in many cases officers under oath to uphold the law have weakly or willingly yielded to the mob, thus becoming equally guilty with the actual lynchers themselves. Such officials should be made to feel the full weight of public execration, and if possible to answer legally for their breach of public trust. We call upon all good citizens and upon the executive and judicial departments of the several states to do their utmost to bring such recreant officials to account in the courts of justice and at the bar of outraged public opinion.

"It is the sacred duty of the courts, also, to do everything possible to bring to justice all the members of lynching mobs, to the end that the law may be vindicated and others deterred from committing like crimes.

"The situation, as we see it, is serious in the extreme and challenges every religious leader, public official and Christian citizen to determined and unrelenting war upon this blighting survival of barbarism. Otherwise we well may question whether civilization itself can survive."

METHODISTS RAP MOBBING

Prominent M. E.'s Issue Statement Condemning Lynching

ATLANTA, Oct. 2—(AP)—A group of prominent clerical and lay members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in a statement issued for publication Thursday, ascribed the persistence of lynching to the neglect of religious leaders to impress people with the "solemn warnings of the church on this subject" and weakness and complicity on the part of public officials.

The statement urged that measures be taken "to bring such recreant officials to account in the courts of justice and at the bar of outraged public opinion."

The statement also said "the situation, as we see it, is serious in the extreme and challenges every religious leader, public official and Christian citizen."

Dr. J. W. Perry, Nashville, Tenn., home missionary secretary; Prof. N. C. Newbold, Raleigh, N. C.; Dr. Theodore H. Jack, Atlanta; Dr. E. C. Peters, president, Payne College, Augusta, Ga.; Mrs. J. J. McEachern, Atlanta, and Dr. W. W. Alexander, director of the commission on interracial cooperation, signed the statement made public Thursday.

ANOTHER LYNCHING IN GEORGIA.

JUDGE CLAUDE C. PITTMAN had hardly delivered a charge to the Grand Jury of Bartow county, now in session in Cartersville, on the horrors of lynching, before the negro, John Will Clark, was taken from the county jail and put to death.

Bartow was recently threatened with the lynching of a murderer, who killed the Cartersville Chief of Police in the execution of the officer's duty.

This untimely act of a mob was prevented at that time by the law officers of the county who received military support. Judge Pittman, in his charge to the jury, emphasized the constitutional guarantee of a fair and impartial trial of men accused of crime, however bloody and exasperating. He appealed to the conscience of the good men and true of Bartow county. He denounced mob law as dangerous to the bulwarks of life, liberty and property.

This event was dramatic in its horror. The papers in Georgia were full of commendation yesterday of Judge Pittman's charge. It was commended by the best people who read it, and by the papers which noticed it. It seemed to breathe the free air of obedience to law. It praised the recent resistence of officers of the law, supported by the military, which prevented a deplorable happening at the time when excitement was rife.

It was supposed that the hysterical feeling had died down. The criminal had been brought back to jail in Cartersville. The Grand Jury had been called, and had heard the words of truth and soberness from the bench. Then came this terrible occurrence when a mob of fifty citizens overpowered the civil guard of the jail, and took the prisoner on his death ride in an automobile.

The anti-mob spirit must be put down, and the best way to put it down is to arouse public sentiment in every county. That sentiment exists if it is aroused, and the development of that sentiment is the best insurance against lawless outrages. As the Atlanta Constitution says;

"It would serve greatly to establish an anti-mob public spirit and courage in every county of this commonwealth if all our judges would deliver to their grand juries law obedience and enforcement charges as that delivered by Judge Pittman. The better people of every community, as a rule, give a respectful and even reverent heed to the calm and solemn utterances of their judges, openly delivered from the bench. So the example of Judge Pittman is worth being repeated all over the State.

There have been appeals in this direction since ecent unfortunate happenings in Georgia. Bishop teese has written an admirable letter on this line nd his advice is good, not because he is chairman f the Interracial Relations Committee in Georgia, ut because such appeals as he makes as a good itizen and a man of God—are for creating a sentiment of obedience to law.

This is the best way to put down lynching. Such sentiment should be advocated by our best men off and on the bench, and endorsed by our people.

Blaming the Church in Part for Lynching.

(From The High Point Enterprise.)

After several years of repression that gave the country reason to hope that the lynching spirit was under control, it breaks out virulently. A series of lynchings that has occurred in several States in the South moves a "group of prominent clerical and lay members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," to issue a statement in which the group attempts to allocate responsibility. The churchmen assume for the church a measure of that responsibility.

The failure of religious leaders to "impress the people with the solemn warnings of the church on this subject" is declared one cause of lynching and the other is given as "weakness and complicity on the part of public officials."

The statement is thoughtful. The press has laid more emphasis on the "weakness and complicity" of officers in fixing the blame, but the prime defect is in public opinion back of the officers and the religious leaders very properly are doctors of that. The press also bears some of the responsibility for public opinion but it is enlisted generally in vigorous, unrelenting antagonism to the lawlessness of the mob.

Georgia, apparently, is doing her level best to prove herself the most lawless state in the Union. Lynching there Thursday of a negro about whose guilt there is grave doubt, is a crime against the whole nation. Too, the fact that the murder was committed in broad daylight; that the victim's body was hitched to the rear of a truck and dragged through the streets of a county seat; that it was then thrown on the court house lawn, makes the crime all the more offensive. It is hard to imagine more flagrant, open, insolent defiance of law.

NEGRO'S LAWYERS DEPLORE LYNCHING

Statement Declares Action of Mob Proved Need for Venue Change.

Contending that the statement of A. V. Neal, commissioner of Bartow county, attributing the lynching Wednesday of a negro [illegible] suspect to activities of Atlanta lawyers, was an effort to "whitewash" Cartersville officials, Marion Williamson, Harold Sheats and George C. Dean, Atlanta attorneys, Thursday afternoon issued a statement in which they deplored the action of the mob and declared that their efforts need no defense.

"October 2, 1930.

"Noticing the prominence given in this morning's Constitution to the statement of County Commissioner Neal in his effort to whitewash his officials in their deplorable conduct of last Tuesday and Tuesday night when John Willie Clark was taken from the county jail of Bartow county and foully murdered, we believe you will give equal prominence to the following in an early issue of your esteemed paper.

"We make no defense of our action in asking for a change of venue from Bartow county and none is needed. Subsequent events seem to me to prove conclusively that such an action was the only correct one under the circumstances. That the action of the mob in lynching the accused is so unanimously approved, according to County Commissioner Neal, by the good people of Bartow county is a situation that should cause all interested in their constitutional rights and free government to pause and consider the trend of the times.

"Few people know the following facts: That the [illegible] small stature and weak physique, was maliciously and unnecessarily shot when captured; that an attempt was made in Bartow county to lynch him the night of his previous capture and was saved only by the prompt intervention of the national guard, who brought him to Atlanta for safekeeping; that orders were issued from Bartow county to allow no one to see the accused except the Cartersville attorneys who had been appointed by the court and that the attorneys employed by the accused himself were refused admission to confer with him and achieved access to him only a short time before his trial and then only after the intervention of a Fulton county superior court judge; that the trial of the accused was set for Wednesday and that his attorneys went to Cartersville to present their motion for a change of venue believing that it would be heard quietly while the accused was safe in Atlanta until the question could be determined finally by a fair and impartial tribunal and found upon arriving there that the case had been moved up to Tuesday and the first knowledge they had that the accused was in Cartersville was when someone mentioned his presence in the courtroom; that the trial was immediately called and only a previously prepared appeal to the supreme court prevented his trial in spite of the motion for a change of venue; the reason for the delay was carefully explained to the assembled populace and it was publicly stated that the accused was to be held in Cartersville until his trial in order to show his attorneys from Atlanta that there was no ill feeling against the accused in Cartersville.

"That they misinterpreted the mood of at least some of the people of Cartersville is now a matter of history.

Defense Had Merit.

"To the intelligent and the lovers of justice and fair play we merely want to state in passing that after a most thorough and painstaking investigation and study of this case, we came to the conclusion that John Willie Clark had a meritorious defense to an indictment for murder and was not the self-confessed murderer and brutal fiend he had been assumed to be.

"In confounding those who, in advocating a new type of justice, fail to understand or comprehend the majesty of the law or to respect the greatest safeguard of human life and liberty, and justify a lynching on the grounds that the accused through his attorneys was, in a legal and orderly manner, seeking to secure for himself that measure of freedom and right for which our English forefathers so valiantly fought to wrest from Prince John at Runnymede, we can only quote the words of a great chief justice of the supreme court of Georgia, Justice Bleckley, (62Ga732).

"'Those who are impatient with the forms of the law ought to reflect that it is through form that organization is reached. Matter without form is chaos; power without form is anarchy. The state, were it to disregard forms, would not be a government, but a mob. Its action would not be administration, but violence. The state, though sovereign, cannot act upon the citizens in a different manner from that which the laws have ordained. It cannot inflict capital punishment without first trying the prisoner according to the law. There is no dispensing power. Why try him at all, if he is not to be tried as the law prescribes?'

The Lynching Problem.

Commercial Appeal

The increase in the number of lynchings during the present year is calculated to cause some discouragement. It should not, however, cause the least amount of distrust or despair. To the contrary the quick reaction that is appearing in the form of a commission of honest, earnest and able men of the southern states to study and report on lynchings is the most hopeful sort of a development. This commission is setting out to make a thorough investigation of all facts and circumstances in all cases of mob violence with the hope that the knowledge gained will suggest measures for the solution of the problem.

The coming into being of this commission should of itself be most encouraging. It is expressive of the new order in the states where lynchings occur. There was a time not so long ago when public officers made no attempt whatsoever, or else a mere sham attempt, to protect prisoners guilty of certain crimes. And there was a time when some seekers after place or position openly defended the actions of mobs in some cases. But this order is changing. We now find governors of states and other officials taking drastic action to prevent lynchings when they are threatened and to punish members of mobs guilty of the crime. Also it is very rare indeed nowadays to hear any political leader either attempt justification or excuse for mob violence.

Ultimately this change of sentiment and this new process of thought will eliminate mob violence entirely from the land. But this elimination must be gradual. It cannot be entirely successful in a month, a year or a number of years. The roots of mob violence must be torn from the minds of the masses and it will take some time to do this. But, eventually, it will be done. Of that there is no doubt. The commission which has sprung into being because of the increase in lynchings is but one among other guarantees that lynchings will some day be unknown in the land.

BLEASE LYNCHING STAND ATTACKED

He Extended Clemency to 77 Persons Convicted of Assault, Harris Says

St. George, July 28.—(AP): About 100 Dorchester county voters today heard Leon W. Harris attack the position of Senator Cole L. Blease on lynching, as the aspirants to the United States senate resumed hostilities after a week of rest. Senator Blease continued to cite from his record, while James F. Byrnes, third candidate, discussed the tariff and other economic questions.

Harris, first speaker, in referring to Senator Blease's recent speech at Union, in which the senator was quoted as saying "To hell with the constitution," asked "are Mr. Blease's hands clean in this connection?"

Blease Pardon Record

The Anderson solicitor said Blease's record while governor showed a total of 77 instances of clemency to persons convicted of the crime (rape) Blease thinks justifies lynching. He declared rumors were going around that he is a candidate solely for the purpose of slinging mud at one candidate so that another might "go in."

"I want to brand such a rumor as false," he said. "I am in this race to win and because I want South Carolina represented in the Democratic caucus of the United States senate.

Senator Blease prefaced his address proper by saying the newspapers have "painted me very badly in South Carolina and they haven't quit yet." The senator said he had worked for the past five years toward reduction of freight rates on farm products, declaring that railroads now see their mistake in having the rates fixed so high since automobile trucks are hauling large quantities of freight that railroads would get if the rates were lower.

Blease Against Tariff

He touched on the tariff, saying "the protective tariff protects nobody but the eastern manufacturer." Discussing this he said he had worked consistently to help defeat the tariff or to have the debenture provision included.

Byrnes said while he was serving in congress from the second district he not only introduced a bill to pay for a church destroyed by the northern army "but I got the money for two of them." Blease previously had said he introduced such a bill, and told of his efforts to try to pass it.

Byrnes went into the matter of economics by declaring that the farmers is "losing his purchasing power" and asking, "if he does lose it what is to become of our merchants; what have those in authority done for the farmer.

Alliance With West

He added that there is no hope for the southern farmer unless he has an alliance with the western farmer. As to the tariff, Byrnes declared it "makes you take less for what you must sell and makes you pay more for what you must buy."

"Congress passed the bill," he added, "and you've got to pay the the bill."

MORE LYNCHING

The lynching curve is rising again. As many persons were killed by mobs in this country during the last six months as in the whole of last year An increase of 100 per cent in a year is a very serious thing, even if the total indicated for 1930 is not so great as the customary number a few years ago.

Lynchings are not confined to the South any more, as is shown in a dispatch from Marion, Ind., last week when two negroes were lynched for the slaying of a young man and a criminal attack on a young white woman. It simply shows that the Northern man, in at least one respect like his Southern brother, comes to the defense of his women and demands his revenge in the same "barbarous" fashion.

But, there is no excuse for mob law and the same people who would demand justice through the execution of a mob sentence, would serve better in their efforts to deter crime if they will demand of their courts, their juries and their state executives, the swift execution of our laws as they are planned for the protection of society. The ballot can bring about one hundred per cent efficiency in our courts if only the public will study the men and select men for their public officials who are above reproach and they don't have to select a politician or a man trained in the art of politics to do it, either.

The shocking situation of the mob law of today is by no means a hopeless case. Seven Southern governors have recently given expression to their opposition of the lynch law after it had been upheld by a Southern senator. A number of lynchings have been averted in Mississippi during the past few years by the manly action of sheriffs and their deputies, who warded off mobs.

The people as a whole are opposed to lynchings, but when one that is near and dear to you has been wronged it is very little trouble to arouse the heat of passion to such an extent as to bring a mob to gather to avenge the wrong. Quick acting courts, minus executive clemency, will defeat the mob quicker than anything else.

Lawrence Mob Foiled

A mob of between 100 and 150 men seeking John L. Spindle, 1[illegible]-year-old negro who, it was, alleged, attempted to assault Mrs. J. E. McKissack at her home 15 miles north of Lawrenceburg, Wednesday, were Saturday night thwarted by Sheriff Neal Morrow when he removed the negro to a neighboring county.

It was said that the attempted assault was kept quiet by the McKissack family and officers in order to capture the negro, occurred Wednesday morning when Mrs. McKissack was at home with her 3-year-old child. The negro, who lives about a quarter of a mile from the McKissack farm, entered the home where Mrs. McKissack, who had been ill, was lying on a bed. After his unsuccessful attempt the negro fled.

Mr. McKissack swore out a warrant for Spindle and it was found that he had gone to Maury county. The sheric's office kept the story quiet and swore in three men to aid in the search.

Saturday Sheriff Morrow received word that Spindle was on his way here and about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon one of the posse met him on a street of the town. Sheriff Morrow immediately rushed him out of the county, as word of the search had already spread and word that a mob was forming had been received.

Saturday night about 11 o'clock, the mob of more than 100 men appeared at the jail, where Mrs. Morrow and her brother were alone and demanded the negro. In order to show them that he was not there, Mrs. Morrow's brother took Mr. McKissack through the jail while Mrs. Morrow stood in the doorway and held the others out. When it was seen that the negro was not in the Lawrenceburg jail the mob dispersed quietly.

A Study of Violence

A case of study of the causes of lynchings in the South, such as will be made by a committee of the Inter-Racial commission, announced today, ought to be illuminating.

This year has been the worst in the recent history of lynching. For almost a quarter of a century, responsible people in the South have inveighed against it; for a decade or more, there have been instances in which lynching was actually punished. It had begun to appear that the work of a quarter of a century was about to bear fruit in the virtual elimination of a barbaric and anti-social practice, when, in 1930, an epidemic occurred.

Undoubtedly the economic situation has a profound effect upon the violence chart. A number of lynchings this year have resulted from robbery; the robberies have been induced by dire necessity for food and clothing. Neither race is wholly responsible. Criminally-inclined Negroes have resorted to criminality to supply their needs and criminally-inclined white people have punished them by extra-legal methods. The two lynchings at Scooba, Miss., resulted entirely from robbery. The trouble at Emelle, Ala., came from a dispute over money; the lynching at Darien was the outgrowth of burglary.

A case study ought to be particularly illumining in that it will be made when passions have subsided and when it is possible to get at the real truth and the real history of the cases. The study, we believe, will establish the direct connection between economic depressions and violence. Certainly it will destroy the most ancient defense of lynching: the false sense of chivalry. A casual survey of lynchings that have occurred this year places the protection of womanhood as the cause of less than have the crimes of mobs.

More Mob Murders.

Three months ago a Negro attacked and killed a white woman at Shamrock, Texas. Following the crime mob rioting became so serious that all colored people were forced to flee the town, and a lynching was only averted by the action of the authorities in secreting the accused Negro across the border in Oklahoma. Later he was tried and convicted and now has been legally put to death.

There never is an excuse for lynching when a Negro assaults a white woman or commits a murder. The penalty for these crimes is death and the courts may be depended upon to exact the penalty. Yet mobs continue to wreak lawless vengeance upon Negroes and sometimes upon white persons. Only a few days ago a Negro accused of killing an officer of the law at Darien, Georgia, died at the hands of a mob.

And since then there has been a double lynching at Scooba, Mississippi, which reminds that it is not always necessary for a Negro or even a white person to commit a capital offense to become a victim of mob lawlessness. Two Negroes arrested at Scooba on the charge of robbing a white man and his wife were taken from two Deputy Sheriffs by a masked band of fifteen men and hanged to trees.

There were nine mob murders last year, which was just nine too many, but compared with the lynching record of most previous years the number was so small as to encourage the belief that we were getting away from mob lawlessness. There were predictions that there would be still fewer lynchings this year, but with nearly four months of the year remaining there have been perhaps twice as many lynchings as occurred last year.

The country will await news from Georgia and Mississippi with the hope that the members of the Darien and Scooba mobs will be brought to justice. The people of the Southern States, where nearly all of the lynchings occur, must demonstrate that they are determined to destroy the mob and all its outrageous works if they would not see the Federal Government take a hand in suppressing this species of crime.

Georgia Returns to the Lynching Record

For many years, Georgia [illegible]ppi, Texas and Florida a close race to head the annual lynch-murder roll. However, after two years' comparative quiet, the State experienced but one mob crime in 1926—and that produced unprecedented consequences:

Law officers arrested 12 of the lynchers, who were arraigned in Coffee County in November following the mob's crime in August. Nine pleaded guilty; Judge Reed sentenced the confessed leader for life, and eight accomplices to four to 20 years each, in State's prison; the other three later were convicted and given smaller indeterminate sentences.

That was almost four years ago and, until lately, Georgia had been sensationally conspicuous by its absence from the lynching record. To be sure, one or two attempts at lynching occured, and a mob had released a prisoner—convicted of his innocence—which also set a precedent for Judge Lynch. By contrast Georgia had suffered nine such crimes in 1920, eleven each in 1921 and 1922, four in 1923, two each in 1924 and 1925.

It may have been merely a coincidence that the clean slate followed the vigorous assertion of constituted auority in Coffee County—but the appearance of cause and effect is there.

New Georgia suffers auother mob outbreak—at Darien—under unusual circumstances: A watchman accosted two negroes, seen loitering about a bank at midnight; they fled to the swamps after one had shot at him. The next day the police chief was killed and three other officers were wounded in a pitched battle with the fugitives, one of whom was taken and lodged in jail.

Though a National Guard Company was at the scene, a mob stormed the jail and ignored Col. Neal's orders that the negro "be not shot." That officer had no guns at the jail to enforce his command. Sheriff Poppell was absent, lured away by a fake telephone call. Governor Hardman had sent troops to keep order—which included preventing a lynching—but the mob leaders evidently surprised and outwitted the officials.

After the lynching, the Governor proclaimed martial law and Guardsmen sought the second negro. The situation calls for a thorough inquiry to determine responsibility for official neglect, if any, as well as to punish the mob murderers.

In the Coffee County case four years ago, the victim was a white man. Now it remains to be seen whether Georgia authorities will arrest, try and convict citizens who lynched a negro. That procedure there demands even more moral courage, but it would exert a correspondingly greater restraining influence upon would-be lynchers hereafter.

Guardsmen Who Failed to Guard

In no quarter, as far as press reports go, has there been any challenge of the first accounts of the lynching of George Grant, in Darien, Ga. Accordingly these statements still stand: that after Chief of Police Freeman was fatally shot and three other men were wounded in a fight which followed efforts to arrest Grant and another Negro, Col. Roy Neal, of the Savannah unit of the Georgia National Guard, and 25 guardsmen were ordered to Darien; that they arrived in time to place machine guns in the streets and to assist in the capture of Grant; that Grant was taken to the jail by Colonel Neal and that the National Guard detachment was guarding him; and that in spite of the National Guard colonel and his 25 soldiers, in spite of their machine guns and other arms, the mob forced its way into the jail, seized the prisoner and killed him.

Other aspects of this latest addition to the long roll of mob murders in the South this year deserve attention. One of these is that the killing of a police officer who was trying to arrest men accused of robbery, regrettable as it is, happens with deplorable frequency in the United States and is not ordinarily made the pretext for private vengeance by mob action. Another is that Grant had been captured and was in jail. He would have been brought to trial shortly. In the circumstances, it is reasonable to assume that, if guilty, he would have received swift and severe punishment, probably the death penalty.

But over and above the manifestation of mob spirit, under these conditions, is the spectacle of a National Guard detachment, ordered to the spot to help preserve the peace and fully armed for that assignment, wholly powerless to defend a prisoner held in jail. That failure calls for explanation. Unless the dispatches have not given the true picture, the public must judge the guardsmen as deficient in that intelligence or determination which it has a right to expect of them. Twenty-five soldiers, ably officered and amply armed, ought to be able to defend a jail. They did not do it in Darien.

Responsibility for Mob Violence

HENRY ARGO, a Negro held in the Grady county jail, die from wounds received at the hands of some member or members of the mob that sought his life and damaged property in its effort to get the prisoner. Members of the mob, and particularly leaders of the mob, should pay the penalty for the murder that someone committed, but it is doubtful if they will. It is difficult to fix responsibility for mob violence, and hard to convict members of a mob in a community in which a lynching occurs. J. Berry King, attorney general, should press charges against the offenders, if they can be identified. The whole state has a responsibility in the shameful episode at Chickasha, and that responsibility will not be met unless the criminals are brought to justice.

Nor should the failure of Sheriff Matt Sankey and his deputies to protect the prisoner be overlooked. That failure is convincing evidence of their inefficiency. We shall have fewer lynchings when there is a provision in our statutes for the summary ouster of any sheriff who loses a prisoner to a merciless and brutal mob. Captain E. R. Smith of the national guard unit, called out in the emergency, reports a lack of co-operation on the part of the sheriff's office. The guardsmen themselves bungled the mission for which they were ordered out. A resourceful commander should be able to disperse any mob with a handful of disciplined troops. Captain Smith should need no co-operation of civilian officers to scatter a blood-thirsty rabble, bent on slaying an unarmed prisoner.

Grady county needs an abler sheriff than Matt Sankey. His record in this case should be enough to warrant his removal. If he or his deputies failed to co-operate with the guardsmen, that policy is indefensible. At best, he failed to protect a prisoner in his custody. There should also be thorough investigation of the conduct of the guardsmen. They were ordered out to protect the prisoner, but he was not protecttd. Neither civil nor military authority can explain that fact away, and neither is to be absolved by passing the buck. If Oklahoma hopes to establish a reputation as a civilized state, it must put a stop to lynching and all manner of mob violence.

Lynching Shames a State

ETTERS in a recent issue of the London Times pointed the finger of scorn at Texas, because of the brutal lynching Sherman. The New York World lately printed an editorial nouncing the mob murder of Henry Agro, a Negro prisoner, the Chickasha jail. This editorial stressed the shameful inefficiency of the sheriff's force and the national guardsmen, d cited the utter folly of permitting spectators in the jail tly after the mob turmoil had subsided. The World urges Oklahoma to be energetic and resourceful in investigation and prosecution.

Thus Oklahoma, as a whole, bears some of the stigma of the outrage at Chickasha. It will deserve to bear it, unless the brutal murderers are brought to justice and the officers who failed to protect a prisoner entrusted to their care are removed from office. Any state that hopes to be regarded as civilized, must put a stop to lynching, and the state that will punish the leaders and members of mobs as they deserve, can stop these outbursts.

THE TEXAS LYNCHING

The recent racial outburst in Texas is to be regretted, of course, but denunciation of mob fury does not end the incident. The authorities in the state seem to have used reasonable precaution, and the only matter of debate is whether the troops should have opened general fire upon those in the streets, or retired to the jail as they did.

Racial antipathy bursts the bounds of restraint in various sections of the world. The other day, in South Africa there was a race riot. Not many months ago, in California, the whites and Filipinos had trouble. There have been other disreputable performances in American states, mostly in the South, but yet, occasionally, in Illinois Missouri and elsewhere.

It is rather foolish to give vent to rabid utterances about what ought to be done, especially when the talker is hundreds of miles away. It is more desirable that all citizens, everywhere, try to create a more tolerant outlook, and encourage a spirit of friendliness and neighborliness among all races.

"LISTEN, WORLD"

By Elsie Robinson

WHY IS A MOB?

Horror in Texas. A negro on trial for an offense against a white woman. Men milling, muttering, thickening into dark clots. A nudge a whisper. Suddenly a yell. Then moiling madness—bodies gathering into a wave—rushing headlong—filling the air with one vast, slobbering snarl.

The rangers fought them. Locked the negro in a vault. But the mob came on. Some one threw a can. The stench of gasoline. A great, gulping roar. The court house bulged, buckled, belched torrents of flame. From the locked vault came howl upon howl. Even that wasn't enough. The mob waited, testing the heat. The moment the ashes cooled they were at that vault with an acetylene torch. Presently something—twisted, utterly abominable—was thrust out through the opening. As it came into view, men cheered, women clapped. Then fell upon it, each eager for his chance; wrapped it in chains; fastened it to an automobile. . . . One can't go on.

Appalling things—mob murders, race riots. Texas has no monopoly of them. Her fine citizens resent such shame as much as other decent men. All states share in that shame. Filipinos beaten in California. Hindus mobbed in the Northwest. Negroes shot in Illinois. What can be done about it? Call out the militia? Make laws? Preach sermons against cruelty? But what good does it do when all the time most of us have a sneaking admiration for strong men who mass to defend some noble cause?

But that's just the point, mobs aren't made of strong men defending noble causes. Mobs are made of weak men who want to appear strong and grab the spotlight. And this "noble cause" hullabaloo is just a cover-up for cowardice and viciousness and diseased egotism.

Nine out of ten men in mob murders or race riots are shoddy weaklings, often far more ignorant, vicious and worthless than the poor creatures they abuse or kill. The morons and moochers and mutterers—they are the ones who arise in their might to "defend" and "protect" and "avenge." Are they really animated by a desire to protect women or defend labor? They are not. Most of them consistently abuse or neglect their own women and avoid labor as a pest. They are both despicable and despised and have no rating among regular citizens. Nevertheless, being human, they crave a rating. They desire power, admiration and publicity and are consumed with envy and resentment because they do not receive them. The more they are hoboes, the more they want to be heroes—and mob violence offers them their opportunity.

For the easiest way for that kind of a white man to achieve herodom is to kill or torture some black or yellow man under some noble pretext. By abusing some despised "inferior" he makes himself seem superior. And unfortunately, many people who should have better sense, agree with him.

Why is a mob? That's why. And we will never cure mobs as long as we think of them as exhibitions of courage and righteous rage. They are not. They are exhibitions of cowardice—of frustrated conceit. Maggots running amuck.

SUGGESTION FOR A CARVING

According to a story in The Anderson Independent, the tree under which a negro was lynched in Oconee county has been cut down so that souvenir hunters may tear it apart and have tangible reminders of that historic event. A wood carver is said to be engaged in the pertinent task of shaping the limbs into "small articles of all shapes" to make neat decorations for homes where civilization sits enthroned. To commemorate this incident is a commendable appeal to all justice-loving patriots. And if suggestions are in order as to figures for the carvings, let us suggest the well-known one of Justice—with her hands to her eyes.

Negro Oconee ~~Mob Lynched~~ Once Was Hailed as a Hero

Lawless Crowd Slew Him April 23 on Same Spot Where 11 Years Before He Received Parole for 'Practically Saving' Walhalla

Walhalla, May 28.—(AP): The lynchers of Allen Green, who dragged him from jail and killed him on the night of April 23, had a sardonic sense of humor. They killed him under the same tree he received the news of a parole 11 years ago. And behind they left this note: "On this spot Allen Green got his parole and here he got his lynch."

This strange quirk in the lynching of the man who formerly was the hero of Walhalla came to light this week when 17 Oconee county citizens including the mayor of Walhalla were indicted by the grand jury on charge of murder.

There were few who recalled after the lynching that this same negro years ago was hailed as a hero. His ability as a fire-fighter was credited with "practically saving" the town from destruction.

It goes back to July, 1915, when Green was convicted of attempted assault on a white woman and was sentenced to serve 13 years in prison.

There was an almost immediate effort to have him freed three years later, Kurtz P. Smith, who then was solicitor, joined prominent citizens in asking that he be paroled. Governor Richard I. Manning did not act in the case, however.

The next year, 1919, Governor Robert A. Cooper did grant the parole and news of the parole was brought to Green by the chaingang foreman under the tree which 11 years later was to be a witness to his death.

In the second appeal, signed by a number of prominent citizens, is the paragraph:

"Petitioners feel that the town of Walhalla is largely indebted to Allen Green as they recall that on two occasions of serious fires it was mainly through his ability and efforts as a fire-fighter that the town was practically saved from destruction by fire."

The signers of the petition said they doubted the truth of the woman's testimony in the case.

The solicitor, in commenting on this, said "there was some dissatisfaction with the verdict by some of the best people of Walhalla."

Among the signers was the complete list of jurors.

Green's lynching in April followed a preliminary hearing in magistrate's court in which a white woman testified he attacked her.

Listen, World!

Horror in Texas. A negro on trial for an offense against a white woman. Men milling, muttering, thickening into dark clots. A nudge, a whisper. Suddenly a yell. Then moiling madness—bodies gathering into a wave—rushing headlong—filling the air with one vast, slobbering snarl.

The Rangers fought them. Locked the negro in a vault. But the mob came on. Someone threw a can. The stench of gasoline. A great, gulping roar. The courthouse bulged, buckled; belched torrents of flame. From the blocked vault came howl upon howl. Even that wasn't enough. The mob waited, testing the heat. The moment the ashes cooled they were at that vault with an acetylene torch. Presently something—twisted, utterly abominable—was thrust out through the opening. As it came into view, the men cheered. women clapped. Then fell upon it, each eager for his chance; wrapped it in chains; fastened it to an automobile . . . One can't go on.

Appalling things—mob murders, race riots. Texas has no monopoly of them. Her fine citizens resent such shame as much as other decent men. All states share in that shame. Filipinos beaten in California. Hindus mobbed in the Northwest. Negroes shot in Illinois. What can be done about it? Call out the militia? make laws Preach sermons against cruelty? But what good does it do when all the time most of us have a sneaking admiration for strong men who mass to defend some noble cause?

But that's just the point. Mobs aren't made of strong men defending noble causes. Mobs made of weak men men who want to appear strong and grab the spotlight. And this "noble cause" hullabaloo is just a cover-up for cowardice and viciousness and diseased egotism.

Texas Ranger Sailing For London to Explain About That Lynching

Commercial Appeal

6-12-30

Memphis Tenn

NEW YORK, June 11.—(AP)—Capt. Tom Hickman, Texas ranger, sailed on the Leviathan today as an unofficial ambassador to London from the state of Texas.

Tom has been commissioned by Gov. Dan Moody of the Lone Star State to set Londoners right on that lynching at Sherman, Texas, a few weeks ago, by telling London newspapers just what happened.

One London newspaper telephoned to Governor Moody and asked him if that sort of thing occurred often. The governor said no, but reports have reached Texas that London papers printed accounts of the lynching which told of women tossing fuel into the flames.

He sailed with the Simmons College Cowboy Band of Abilene, Texas, a 40-piece musical outfit which will spend six weeks playing in England and on the continent.

TO EXPLAIN LYNCHING

A story says that Gov. [redacted] Texas has sent a ranger to London to explain to the newspapers, and therefore the inhabitants there, just what happened during a recent lynching which was enjoyed by Sherman, Tex. One London newspaper called the Governor on the telephone to ask him about it, but the telephone conversation was necessarily brief and the Governor apparently thinks he could not "explain" sufficiently for the Londoners to understand. Possibly the ranger will do better at explaining, but it is doubtful. Lynchings are so hard to explain. They happen, and the reasons why they happen may be easy to see and understand, but even the reasons do not explain why the authorities permit them, and that's where the ranger's job is going to be about as difficult as any job any ranger ever had.

After the ranger gets through telling everything that happened, and even goes into the historical background of lynching, and the psychological background, and whatnot, some dense Londoner is likely to ask: "But what were the bobbies doing all that time?" And the ranger will blush and try to do some more explaining, and the Londoner will still be too dense to see the point.

About the only way to make a Londoner understand lynchings is just not to let them happen. He can understand that. And, after all, we folks here at home ought to be able to see that there is no sense, no civilization, in lynchings. We are very dense if we cannot see that lynchings are attacks on law, on organized society, on civilization. No wonder the Londoners cannot understand them. And no wonder they won't be able to see the Texas point even after Gov. Moody's emissary explains it laboriously and carefully. The truth is that the point is in the other direction. A people which permits lynching is just that far short of being civilized.

Fewer Lynchings

Tuskegee Inst.

Last year there were ten lynchings in this country. In 1892, less than 40 years ago, there were 255 lynchings. Comparision of these two records and study of the years between with their slow but fairly steady decline in lynchings show that progress in this matter is real.

There are probably several reasons for this improvement. Education and agitation against lynching, stiffening of public opinion and therefore of public officials—jailers, sheriffs, prosecutors, judges—have had considerable effect.

Lynching should not exist in a civilized community where legal justice moves promptly and surely. To condemn lynching is not to condone other crimes. Humanity decency and justice are worth striving for. Their achievement in one field foreshadows their achievement in others. Thoughtful Americans hope that other crimes of violence may be checked as lynching has been.

EXPERT THINKS LYNCHING TO BE EXTINC[illegible]OON

Evil [illegible]e Ended By 1940, [illegible]s Interacial Worker

Columbus, Ga.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Lynching will be a lost crime by 1940 — something for scientists to study and the rest of us to remember with unbelief — and you can thank, among others, radio, good roads and the gentlemen of the press.

So reasons Will W. Alexander, director of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, reviewing the commission's 10-year war with the mob.

"In 1919, when the commission was born, 83 persons were lynched," said Alexander. "This year the records show but 10, and those in only five states.

Townful Lynched

"During the decade 314 lost their lives at the hands of mobs, 298 in the first five years. The figures are startling when one finds 1,726 lynched between 1885 and 1894, our earliest records. All told, 4,377 persons have been lynched since 1885, a good sized town."

Lynching is almost galloping to extinction, Alexander believes.

"Ten years from now we will be wondering how it ever happened.

"Mob slayings are chiefly a rural art these days," he explained. "Only in the most backward regions, the last to be penetrated by progress, are lynchings found. The radio is penetrating them faster than they were ever penetrated before and good roads are bringing travelers from other parts. By contact the backwoods is acquiring civilization at a swift clip."

Press Praised

The press has been a leading factor in the decline of mob law, the commission head said.

"It has helped us rip away the taboos that have veiled the barbarism. Once it was immodest even to mention lynching in the south. No evil thing can flourish in the light and the press has thrown the spotlight on the mob.

"No longer is the lyncher a hero. For one thing, the various women's organizations are after him. Women in every state in the south have denounced the old defense of lynching—that it was necessary to protect southern womanhood. That is not the kind of chivalry they want, they decided."

The commission has filed workers in every state who, as soon as they learn of a mob in prospect, immediately inform the proper officials. In many towns groups of leading citizens operate as a sort of vigilantes society against lynchers, a constant guard to warn officials, said Alexander.

Officials Cooperate

"We are getting cooperation from officials, due to public opinion, that never came before and stringent measures to protect prisoners are not uncommon. One state, North Carolina, has not had a lynching in five years."

Sheriffs who protect their prisoners with unusual valor are awarded a medal by the commission, which is presented by the governor or a leading citizen.

Rising educational standards have played more than a minor role in the struggle for law and order, Alexander said.

"What is happening, I think, is that the two races in the south are learning to live together," he saidi.

Th governor wants a report on the lynching over at Ocilla. Well that is easy. Negro attacked and then killed a fourteen year old girl, threw her body in a hog wallow. Folks rose up and lynched the negro that did it. That is all there is to it and that is all there is going to be to it. Terrible crime indeed. One that sets the blood of men on fire. Hypocritical canting about the state's record is not going to bring the girl back and while we are indeed sorry that the record has been smirched, we are darn sight more sorry that the poor little girl was butchered up in this manner by a brute in human form. 'Tis bad to have a mob, tis worse to kill an innocent young girl in such a manner. So just cuss around a little about it and shut up for that is all that can or will be done. If the man had been a white man his fate wold have been the same. here is no color line in that kind of stuff.

Negro Beaten to Death and Body Burned

Ocilla, Ga., Feb. 1.—Overpowering Sheriff W. S. Tyler and his deputies early Saturday, 500 men took Jimmy Levine, negro, from the officers and killed him ten miles from town. The negro had been arrested about an hour before at Mystic, Ga., for attacking and slaying a 14-year-old white girl.

Sheriff Tyler, who was roughly handled by a group of twenty-five or thirty members of the gang when he resisted their efforts to remove the prisoner from his automobile, Saturday night, said he had made little headway in investigating. He expected to be joined Sunday by Roy Foy, of Sylvester, solicitor general for this district, and steps will be taken to identify some of the members.

Sheriff Tyler and his deputies had located the negro in Mystic after an all night search and immediately started for jail here. In the center of town, the group met the officers and demanded the negro. Sheriff Tyler refused to surrender him and a crowd gathered about his car, finally succeeding in taking the negro.

With the prisoner in their hands, they set out in nearly 100 cars for the scene of the crime. Later the body was found on a blazing pyre of logs. Reports said the negro was beaten and his throat cut, after which the pyre was built. The logs and clothing of the negro were saturated with gasoline and a match applied.

Sheriff Tyler said he was unable to identify any of the men who surrounded his car as it was just before dawn and the light was poor. He said the negro had confessed to committing the crime before the mob got him.

The girl, daughter of a prominent planter, was attacked and slain near her home Friday and her body was found in a creek nearby. Sheriff Tyler said the assailant, after killing the girl, had dragged her body across a field to the creek where it was found. Her throat had been cut and her jaw broken.

More than 1,000 men from this (Irwin), Coffee, and Barrien Counties joined in the search for the negro Friday night.

JUDGE LYNCH RETURNS TO GEORGIA.

After a banishment of several years during which the hope was oft expressed that Georgia would see him no more, Judge Lynch returned from exile last Saturday morning. He convened his court ten miles rom Ocilla, indicted, tried, convicted and sentenced a wretch for whom death was entirely too good a fate, and turned him over to a mob of 500 men to kill, mutilate and burn.

A lynching can never be successfully defended. No logic can justify it. No thoughtful person can fail to realize that a lynching tremendously weakens the power of justice. It robs the courts of their functions and usurps their authority.

When a mob throngs the court over which Judge Lynch presides, the proceedings become a mockery, a travesty. They strike at the foundations of sacred institutions which civilized man has been at infinite pains to build through thousands of years of strife and sacrifice and bloodshed. They do damage which cannot be undone.

Yet we can understand why a lynching in Irwin County was all but inevitable Saturday morning. We can almost sympathize with members of that mob who had never before participated in a lynching, and who believed that under no circumstances would they ever be gripped by the mob spirit and swept along to the commission of revolting deeds of violence.

But that was before a 14-year-old white girl who had grown up in the community was waylaid as she walked along a country road—waylaid by a black brute who dragged her into the woods, stifled her cries with a blow that broke her jawbone; assaulted her, cut her throat and left her almost wholly nakeder body for neighbors to find.

Yes, we can understand what happened in that community, and so can you who read this. Those men turned from homes, stores, offices, garages, shops, to hunt the beast that had assaulted and murdered a child of their race. There were tears in their eyes, lumps in their throats, something red that blurred their vision, and in their hearts was a prayer that the creature they sought might not escape.

Perhaps the Sheriff should not have risked taking his prisoner, who confessed his unspeakable crime when arrested, back to Ocilla, though he may have regarded that as his best strategy. But only a miracle could have averted that Saturday morning lynching close to the scene of the horrible crime of the afternoon before.

The mob is not to be defended. The lynching thoughtful men and women can but deplore, the more because it was the first to occur in Georgia in several years. But we might as well face frankly the truth it does no good to ignore—that when crimes like the one which threw Irwin and the adjoining counties into a frenzy are committed, ordinarily sane men are going to do that which they can be expected to do when they "see red."

" 'Tis true, 'tis pity, and pity 'tis 'tis true"—but it's true.

NEGRO PAYS PENALTY AT STAKE FOR ASSAULT AND MURDER OF GIRL

"As ye sow, so shall ye reap", is a Bibical injunction that may be fitting in the case of a negro, James Irvin, after a series of tragic events that transpired Friday and Saturday of last week in Irwin county, near Lax.

A white girl, 14 years of age, daughter of a highly respected farmer was on an errand that took her about a mile down a conspicuous highway leading by her home. It was about two o'clock on a bright day of sunshine. When about half-way, and while passing through a small branch she met James Irvin, a negro man 25 years of age, married and with one child. What happened cannot be described, but the little girl died an ignoble death after suffering every torture that could be bestowed. Five knife wounds penetrated her breast and her throat was cut, after which she was assaulted. Not long afterwards her body was found a few feet from the road, cast behind a dead log and a clump of bushes in the water. The body was not lifeless, a hand moving after discovered, but she then expired. Thus died the youngest member of one of the sections best citizens.

Irvin sped away in a wagon drawn by two mules. The lash was laid and it was said that for about eight miles he drove at a furious speed. When the team had become exhausted, he leaped from the wagon and sought the woods and swamps.

The terrible intelligence spread rapidly and in a few hours hundreds of men were scouring every space, guarding roads and trains, and permitting no method of escape. Bloodhounds were summoned from Ocilla, Douglas and Nashville. The track was taken up and followed first by dogs from Ocilla, then for hours by dogs from Douglas and finally by the Nashville pack. It is estimated that the negro traveled fifty miles on foot, and at one time a group of searchers came in sight and wounded him with shotguns, but fleet of foot, he sped on and on throughout the night. The crowd of searchers had been augmented until not hundreds, but literal thousands were combined to wreak vengence upon the perpetrator of a crime unexcelled in brutality in all the annals of this state.

The officers from several counties were leading in the man hunt and it was with the assistance of the Nashville dogs led by Sheriff Tyler of Irwin county, that the dogs came to a halt at a negro shanty near Mystic about fifteen miles from the scene of the assault. The negro living there told the officers that Irvin had been there and left. This did not appease the searchers and he was found secreted in the rear of the house. Taken into custody, he was spirited away, but the mania for blood was too great and escape was impossible. News of his capture reacher the posse of searchers and near Ocilla, the negro was taken from Sheriff Tyler, after his car had been shot and he himself slightly wounded.

The march began to the scene of the crime. No doubt the captive was unmercifully tortured on the trip. Arriving at the exact spot, he was tortured with knives and in many other ways. Parts of the body were cut off. He told in detail of his deeds and stated that he killed the girl because she was too strong to handle. His was an attitude of derision, and no mercy was asked, reports state. Finally, as a climax, a huge pile of lightwood was piled high beside a tree, gallons of gasoline poured over his head and a match applied. Flames leaped high into the air and around the writhing body. A very few minutes and another chapter was written into crime annals.

The charred remains remained hanging from about 8 o'clock in the morning Saturday until after twelve o'clock Saturday night when it was removed by the coroner of the county. A verdict of murder at the hands of parties unknown was returned by a jury. Many hundred of automobiles journeyed to scene from all over the section, women and men alike viewing the tragic scene.

"Trampling Upon the Majesty of the Law"

A Negro was lynched at Ocilla, Ga., last week for the crime for which Southerners usually relieve the courts of the time and truble of trying the culprit. Of course we do not condone disregard of the law at any time or for any cause, but what we want to say is that the usual apologies to the fanatics of the North may be expected from those editors in Georgia who can shed crocodile tears over the disrespect for "the majesty of the law" when a Negro is lynched, but who at the same time can, and d aid and abet the violation of the Prohibition Law by condemning it as "irrational," "unsound," "unpopular, "wanted only by a bunch of cranks," and that "it shoul be repealed because it cannot be enforced;" that "the wa to promote temperance and respect for the law is t repeal it."

We regret that another lynching has occurred in Georgia, but when the crime that provoked it is considered, w shall not "blush with shame" half as much as we do whe we read almost daily the tirades against the Prohibitio Law by editors who should be using their influence t win respect and obedience to all laws.

The people know the evil effects of alcoholic drinks they know the bad influences the manufacture and sale o whiskey and beer had upon the politics of the country and when, in the presidential election of 1928, they ha an opportunity to register their disapproval of the law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of these beverage they failed to do so, but apparently endorsed the laws b an overwhelming majority. The voice of the people i supreme. Why trample upon it?

In saying the only way to stop drinking and promot temperance is to repeal the laws prohibiting the makin and selling of intoxicants is about as logical as sayin to repeal the laws prohibiting rape and lynching wou put a stop to these crimes. If the law prohibiting ra were repealed, would fiends cease to attack women? A if the law prohibiting lynching were repealed, would i furiated mobs cease lynching the fiends? No. And wh ynch-murder latterly has been so equent as to arouse the hope that Nation soon might rid itself altoher of this infamy. But two mob mes in a day—in South Carolina d in Mississippi—come as a disartening flare-back.

The relapse in South Carolina is rticularly deplorable, as that State d been free of lynchings since 1926 —when, during an unusual wave of olence, it witnessed three. The st mob-victim—a 50-year-old negro Walhalla in Oconee County—was rged with the "usual crime," that attempted criminal assault. He had n in jail two days when the mob rpowered the sheriff, dragged the soner out, tied him to a tree and dled his body with bullets.

In recent years Mississippi frequenthas headed the lynching-roll, occaally sharing that disgrace with ia or Texas. A citizen posse at nison, Bolivar County, summarily nched a negro charged with having d a 17-year-old white lad. A ty sheriff said he reached the too late to arrest the accused As in South Carolina, the victim tied to a tree and shot to death. [illegible] then, the present-day [illegible] methods.

The officer said that an inquest was not likely and no investigation would be held before next fall. In Mississippi a lynching is not ordinarily important enough to bring about a special session of the grand jury. Traditionally, when a negro kills a white man in that State he incurs summary hanging by a mob. There is not even the pretense of an improvised trial, such as the Vigilantes on the frontier granted the cattle-rustler. The lynchers do not always take the trouble to wrest a confession from their victim.

Five years ago at Clarksdale, Coahoma county seat, a mob seized a negro who had just been acquitted—by a jury of white men—and hanged him. For that outrage upon justice not a man in the mob ever was brought to trial. Perhaps such a record of official inaction and the sentiment which condones, even applauds, it are largely responsible for the survival of the lynching evil in Mississippi. The first essential to righting the condition is enlightened public opinion.

Two Lynchings in 24 Hours

The two lynchings reported yesterday, from Walhalla, S. C., and Gunnison, Miss., break through the serenity since the last day of February when a Georgia mob seized Jimmy Levine from the sheriff who was carrying him to a safer jail, cut his throat and burned his body on a pyre. In the South Carolina lynching a masked mob "overpowered" a sheriff and took out of jail a 50-year-old man, carried him two miles, tied him to a tree and shot him to death. His body is described as "riddled with bullets." In the Mississippi instance, no formal arrest had been made, but the suspect, Dave Harris, was being held in a house and a deputy sheriff was on his way there. For all practical purposes he too was taken from the law. Like Allen Green in South Carolina he was fastened to a tree and several hundred shots were fired into his body.

As in the earlier Georgia lynching both of these victims were Negroes, one of whom was charged with attempting to attack a girl, presumably white, and the other of whom was accused of killing a boy, also presumably white. In view of the States in which these crimes took place, it is reasonable to assume that the accused persons would have been tried quickly and, with any reasonable evidence against them, would have been convicted and sentenced and the sentence carried out in a few weeks. To the disgrace of both States the law was helpless. The aroused passion of those who in such instances know only the spirit of the jungle was strong enough to ride roughshod over all judicial processes.

The prospect that the mob-murderers will be punished is slight. In South Carolina, where recent years have revealed a greater zeal in protecting prisoners, a greater faith in the courts and a stronger public opinion against gang madness, a serious effort at punishment is to be expected. Something is at least to be hoped for there. But nothing in the records indicates any real disposition in Mississippi to take lynchings seriously. The mobs of this State have lynched more persons nearly every year than any other State, and have suffered no embarrassment either through the activity of officials or the pressure of public opinion. Nearly 500 victims have preceded Dave Harris to a mob death in Mississippi since the records have been kept, and probably not 1 per cent of the murderers have been punished. That is the picture at which today the Governor of the State, every judge and every official and the intelligent and civilized portion of its citizenship have to look. They have to demonstrate once more whether it is a picture they approve.

GOVERNOR RICHARDS AND THE WALHALLA LYNCHING

Thanks to swift action by Governor Richards, who sent detectives to the scene, and the assistance of county authorities, four men are behind the bars charged with participating in the mob attack on Oconee County jail at Walhalla (South Carolina); with assault upon Sheriff Thomas, who suffered a fractured skull; and with the lynching of a negro prisoner. The negro was in jail awaiting trial for attempted criminal assault.

Fifteen other lynching suspects also were arrested and released on their own recognizance. These determined steps to bring to justice the perpetrators of the outrage, are in sharp contrast to the familiar official inaction in such cases—by which the authorities tacitly condone, if they do not approve, the offense.

For example, no such report comes from Mississippi, which witnessed a lynching on the same day. And it will be recalled that after a horrible mob murder in that State two years ago—in which the torch was applied to the victim—Governor Bilbo weakly explained that he could do nothing in the face of overwhelming public sentiment. That was virtual acknowledgment from the Chief Executive that the mob spirit was uppermost in his State! So long as that attitude shall prevail, Mississippi is likely to be plagued with lynchings.

South Carolina officials have a precedent for their relatively bold course, however: By a show of like determination, Governor Robert A. Cooper put a stop to an epidemic of lynchings in that State back in 1921. Except for a relapse in 1926, South Carolina had been almost free of the evil—one lynching in 1922, one in 1924, none in 1927, 1928 and 1929.

It may be merely a coincidence that Georgia has not suffered a single mob murder since Judge Reed of Coffee County sentenced nine lynchers to State's prison—the leader for life and eight accomplices for four to twenty years each—in November, 1926. In that instance the victim was a white man. Previously, Georgia had stood at or near the top of the shameful roll. Now South Carolina may set a similar example.

The Way to Revive Lynchings.

Commercial Appeal
4-29-30

Slowly but surely lynchings and other violent expressions of the mob spirit are being eliminated from the record of the country. In the 1928, 11 persons were victims of lynchers and last year the number was reduced to 10, of which three were white and seven negroes. The 10 lynchings occurred in five states, thus furnishing a clean bill of health to 43 of the nation's commonwealths.

It makes no difference how many or how few lynchings there are, their superfluity is measured by their number. It is true that 10 are a great reduction from the record of a few years ago, but, even so, they are 10 too many. However, the continued reduction points the finger to the day in the not far distant future when every one of the 48 states can show a clean record as to mob violence.

The only way to prevent this certain and soon eventuation is for the federal government to take a hand in the matter and complicate the situation. It is possible, now and then or here and there, that some strong provocation may cause an outburst of the mob spirit and delay or set back temporarily the day of the lynchless nation. But sentiment is set against mob violence, and, if let alone, the authorities of the various states will settle the matter within a few years.

The only possible chance for a revival of the lynching spirit lies in the passage of such federal legislation as the Dyer act, which would interfere with the solution being made by the states and might cause an outbreak of the crimes for which lynchings is invoked through conveying to potential criminals the thought that they would be protected in provocative crimes by the national government. Lynchings will be eliminated if the states are allowed to handle them. They may be revived, if the states are subjected to federal interference.

Two Lynchings

Two lynchings in a single day cast a black mark on the 1930 record of the South. In Mississippi, a Negro accused of killing a white boy was captured by a mob of 250 men. He was told to run, and as he fled, 100 bullets pierced his body. In South Carolina, a 50-year-old negro accused of criminal assault was taken from a jail, hanged and his body riddled with bullets.

So far, no serious effort has been made to arrest members of the Mississippi mob, and probably none will be. In South Carolina, there has been a half-hearted official investigation. We have frequently stated that unless governors of the Southern states take steps to bring lynchers to justice, the South will continue to suffer from the savagery of mob rule.

THE LYNCHING EVIL

Memphis, Tenn.

To The Commercial Appeal:

Judging from two important happenings of the past few days, it would seem that we are in for a little more fun and frolic at the expense of our standing in the family of nations. I refer to two very recent lynchings—one at Rosedale, Miss., and the other at some point in South Carolina. I was born and reared in a backwoods section of Yazoo County, Miss., near the hamlet of Benton, the home of that venerable sage and scholar, John Sharp Williams. I say this to avoid any impression that I am an ex-northerner or something of that kind. I speak as one who knows the south from observation and contact as well.

Memphis Tennessee

From the standpoint of area, finance, mineral wealth and numbers in population, America is really a great country, but when you come to that very precious asset so necessary to the orderly existence of any natin, respect for law and order, she is simply not there.

By a great margin, the negro race has suffered more than any other group of our population when we go to consider lynching statistics, despite the fact that he constitutes only one-tenth of the total. Despite his centuries of service to this country, as slave, soldier and citizen, there are yet many among us who would hate him and deprive him of so much as the creature comforts of life, to say nothing of his rights under the constitution.

Regardless of the estimation in which a nation is held by other nations, her true status must always be determined by the caliber of her citizenship, and especially the respect shown for the laws enacted for her own guidance. There is a saying that "A chain is no stronger than its weakest link," and you are safe when you bet "all the steel in Pittsburgh" that this is true. It does not require a knowledge of science and philosophy to know this either.

While the facilities for the education of the negro are generally inadequate, he has made substantial progress in the acquisition of learning since his liberation. As long as there is a high percentage of illiteracy among the negroes, or any other group, the country or nation must content itself to pay huge dividends one way or the other.

The negro is a citizen of this country because the white man made him so. To be more original, he is living in this country because the white man brought him here. He is, therefore, entitled to the same protection under the law that the white man enjoys. As an American citizen, I think we have about camouflaged race relations long enough. Any one with any sense at all, with normal optics and ears, knows that much of the propaganda spread through the country from year to year by highly enthused optimists concerning race relations is not true. They say we have no race problem. If not, then, what is it?

We may sing our melodius songs and preach our pulpit masterpieces to visible and invisible audiences, but there is one thing certain—unless we recognize the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, all these empty gestures will in the end avail us nothing. Let us get together and take an assessment on the true value of our consistency and try to "be ourselves." Respectfully,

A SELF-IMPOSED EDUCATIONAL TAX
(Norfolk Journal and Guide)

The report of the Rosenwald Fund for 1929 shows that Southern rural Negroes raised out of their private resources $306,909 as their contribution toward the erection of 326 Rosenwald schools during the year. This amount represents a heavy, yet courageously met sacrifice the South's double-tax system for providing Negro educational facilities imposed upon these people in a single year. But as impressive as these figures are they fall considerably short of representing the actual financial burden outside of direct payment of taxes that colored people of the rural South shoulder annually in order that their children may have educational advantages that even approximate those which public taxation provided for white children.

For instance, it is this time of the year that Negro parents in Southern states, especially ~~and~~ North Carolina, are stinting themselves and otherwise making heroic efforts to provide through their Parent-Teacher leagues sufficient funds to extend their legal five and six-month school terms to six or seven months in the counties where the white children have school terms that outrun the colored by sixty to ninety days.

It is a striking spectacle: these county school leagues making desperate efforts during this month to keep open for an additional four or six weeks their schools which began in October and November and are scheduled to close between the first and middle of April. The figures are not available at the moment, but it is certain that this laudable but unfairly imposed effort adds several thousand dollars annually to the cost of Southern rural colored parents in the education of their children, in addition to their impressive contributions to the Rosenwald building program. And all of this raising money represents an extra tax Negroes levy upon themselves to have educational facilities that are admittedly measurably inferior to those the Whites enjoy purely from public taxation.

There are more lunchings in the south than in other parts of the country because the crime, which almost inevitably occasions lynching, is peculiar to the south. The lynching in Indiana indicates that people may be expected in any community to take the law in their hands whenever such a crime is committed. The people of the south are not less civilized than people of other sections, as some have tried to prove by lynching statistics. On the other hand, it is conclusive that those who provoke lynchings are less civilized where most lynchings occur.

Memphis, Tenn

It is interesting to observe that it was necessary for the governor of Indiana to call out state troops and declare martial law for the protection of all negroes in the vicinity of Marion following the lynching. No such emergency arises in the south. When a crime such as the Indiana negroes were lynched for occurs in the south, the guilty are strung up and no innocent person is molested.

In the south the indignation is against the perpetrator of the crime. In the north if the criminal is a negro, he is not only lynched, but the affair becomes a race question.

In studying the record of lynching, it would be well to seek its solution in the prevention of crime. When the crime is eliminated lynching will come to an end, and not before, all argument for the supremacy of the law notwithstanding. Marion, Ind., gets into the newspapers with a lynching story that is gruesome and barbarous. Negro men held for killing the companion of a girl and for assaulting the girl were put to death in the court house yard at Marion under the most appaling conditions and circumstances. The Associated Press says the women were very active as members of the mob. The whole thing is of course unfortunate and horrible. It shows that there is nothing sectional in the work of mobs of this character. This latest outrage against justice did not take place in the South.

Two companies of the Indiana National guard are now stationed at Marion in that State to aid in policing the city. And what is the trouble in Marion? The trouble there is that the community has had an experience in mob lawlessness and there are fears either of a new outbreak or of reprisals for the lynching.

On Wednesday night a young man and a girl were parked on a country road near Marion when four Negroes approached the automobile and ordered the young man to throw up his hands. The Negroes then shot the youth to death and one of them assaulted the girl. They were arrested on Thursday and placed in jail at Marion, and on Thursday night a mob of a thousand or two persons stormed the jail, secured two of the Negroes and hanged them on the courthouse square.

The first attempt to enter the jail was frustrated and the would-be lynchers were dispersed by tear gas bombs thrown by Sheriff's officers. One wonders why these officers could not also have frustrated the second attempt, which seems to have met with little or no resistance. The mad mob, further maddened by its failure to secure all four of the accused Negroes, maintained a menacing attitude throughout the night and other Negroes confined in the jail were spirited away for safe-keeping. The mob prevented attempts to cut down the bodies of the two men who were hanged until after daylight Friday morning.

A Coroner's Jury viewed the bodies and returned a verdict that the Negroes "met their deaths by hanging by a mob composed of persons so far unknown." The "so far unknown" encourages the belief that the responsible authorities of Marion and Grant County and Indiana will make a sincere effort to apprehend the lynchers and that their leaders will be found and brought to account. It is to be hoped that is what will happen. The four Negroes were guilty of a heinous crime and deserved to die, but they should have died at the hands of the State and not at the hands of a mob. There is and can be no defense of mob lawlessness in any section of the country as long as there is law to deal with those who commit crimes.

There were nine lynchings in the United States last year. That was nine too many, but it was one of the fewest if not the fewest number of such outrages to occur in any year since lynching records have been kept and seemed to warrant the hope that the mob was disappearing. But already there have been several more lynchings this year than last, and the year is little more than half gone. Still, despite this apparent flareback, the hope persists, and not without reason or justification, that the day of mob lawlessness is drawing to a close.

MORE LYNCHING

The lynching curve is rising again. As many persons were killed by mobs in this country during the last six months as in the whole of last year. An increase of 100 per cent in a year is a pretty serious thing, even if the total indicated for 1930 is not so great as the usual customary a few years ago. We like to feel that we are gaining in civilization, and mob-murders are barbarism.

There is hope, though, even in this shocking situation. It is found not only in the greater horror which the general public has come to feel for these murders, but in the courageous stand taken by public executives in states frequently desecrated in the past by such crimes. Recent utterances from the governors of seven states—Virginia, Kentucky, Louisiana, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Texas—answering the public statement of a southern senator who upheld lynch law, have condemned lynching without reservation. Their position is supported by the manly action of several sheriffs in recent months, risking their own lives in defying mobs and upholding the honor and dignity of the law when the easy thing would have been to yield.

The Marion Lynching

The country as a whole, and without recrimination, takes sober thought of the recent exhibition of lynch law in Marion, Indiana.

There were in this story all the elements in which Southern mobs have long tried to find justifiable defense for the same uncouth and barbarous custom of taking the law into their own hands.

The same call to anger against another race touches the same brute rage, no matter what side of Mason and Dixon's line.

The fact in all such cases remains the same. The beastiliness that retaliates in kind against a beastly crime puts itself on a level with the brute, North or South, it makes no difference.

In Marion, as any other place, it goes without saying that the better people of a community so disgraced take no part in such outrages.

A feeling of race superiority, if no more high or noble reason and restraint, forbids their falling to the level of the criminal they would punish.

They realize also that it is a low level of mentality and an utter lack of finer sensibility, of imagination, and of justice and respect for law that allows any people to reach such vulgar depths of vengeance as is measured by mob violence like this.

The best people, as we know have no share in these barbarous outbreaks. But the time is past when the people of any part of a community can escape responsibility for such things. Whether they take actual part in them or not, they rarely prevent them and never punish their perpetrators.

More is asked of people of intelligence than of those of lesser minds and duller sensibilities.

It is left for those who realized the brutality of mob law and who feel the disgrace they bring on every community that countenances them, to see to it that an end is made of them.

And by every chance that brings the unspeakable experience home to the people of the North, we that much more can discuss such violence as a national shame and the more surely unite our efforts against it.

Our civilization is put to the blush as long as such things are accepted.

Our sincerity is in question as long as we do not put an end to them.

It is no excuse to say that the worst element is guilty. All the more is the best element of a community in honor bound to stop it.

In studying the record of lynching, it would be well to seek its solution in the prevention of crime. When the crime is eliminated lynching will come to an end, and not before, all argument for the supremacy of the law notwithstanding. The Indiana lynching is a fair illustration of the temper of the people everywhere and the steps they take to punish the guilty regardless of sectional lines, when confronted with the same situation.

It will be interesting to observe subsequent developments in the Indiana case. One of the chief bases of criticism of Southern communities in similar outbreaks is the comparative failure of prosecution of members of the mob. Perhaps the Indiana community will show up with a complete clean-up of the mob, with all active members identified, tried, convicted and sentenced. But it is to be doubted.

The fact is that human nature is pretty much the same all over this country. There are crimes which make less lawabiding citizens of a community desire to take the law into their own hands to punish the perpetrators, and it matters little whether the scene is in the South or the North.

Lynch law is dangerous in any community. In fact it is but a step removed from anarchy. Methodists Rebuke Lynching

"Politicians who stir up race antagonism in order to win votes - - - should be regarded as enemies of society" and they "do more than any other group to destroy friendly co-operation between the races and to set them at each others' throats." That is the expression in a statement adopted by the missionary conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in session at Lake Junaluska, N. C. "The statement was adopted without dissent, by an audience numbering several hundred, gathered from all parts of the Southeast."

It will be noted that even those few politicians who defend lynching for a single cause are careful to bring out incidentally sometimes that they are members of the Christian church, and that church the Southern Methodist.

It is a singular paradox, but it is true, that there are politicians in the South who do not hesitate to seek votes both as Methodists and as excusers of lynchers.

The statement of the Southern Methodist Conference, unanimously adopted, represents the overwhelming opinion of the Christian people of every denomination, Protestant and Roman Catholic, of all sorts and conditions and of all races.

There is no politician in South Carolina claiming a church connection who would dare to defend lynching for any cause or in any circumstances in a gathering of his fellow churchmen.

The Southern Methodists rebuke the defenders of lynching.

WHILE A PORT ARTHUR negro, who had been rescued from mob violence by courageous officers, was being executed at Huntsville the other night in the due process of law, two other negroes were being lynched at Marion, Ind.

A mob of 2,000 persons in this Northern town stormed the jail and took the prisoners out and hanged them while the sheriff and his deputies were offering virtually no opposition. Not a gun was fired, and it seems that not even fire hose or tear gas was used to dispel the mob.

Northern deplorers of lynching are beginning to realize that the mob spirit is not confined to the South, but there are still many of them who write and speak as if these outrages were to be expected only in the Southern states. This affair in Indiana was a typical lyunching, just as violent as anything of the kind ever experienced in the South. The lynching of the negro in July at Emelle will mar a six year's record of freedom from this sort of thing in Alabama. Incidentally many citizens were mortified at this flaring up of the mob spirit. Of course, the lynching was wholly unnecessary. The accused was in custody and all the processes of the law could have been set in motion to administer justice to him. The mob cheated the law, ursurped the functions of the courts, put a blot upon the record of the state, committed murder and brought discouragement to law-respecting people all over the country who have been gratified at the growing reduction in these crimes of violence and had hoped the lynching evil would be completely eliminated. The grand jury has now further besmirched the good name of the state by condoning the outrage and making no effort to apprehend the perpetrators. As a by-product of the outbreak, three other negroes were done to death, and the whole debacle has been passed over by those sworn to uphold the law and invoke its penalties.

A HOPEFUL SIGN.

No longer can the members of lynching mobs expect immunity from punishment with the old-time confidence, according to a statement issued by the commission on inter-racial co-operation, which sees in the arrest and pending trials of a large number of suspected lynchers the one encouraging aspect of the recent lynching epidemic.

"No less than forty-nine men are now awaiting trial in connection with the three lynchings in Walhalla, S. C.; Sherman, Texas, and Chickasha, Oklahoma," says the commission. "In each of these cases arrests were made with commendable promptness and the authorities appear determined that justice shall be done if possible.

"In the Walhalla case seventeen men are under indictment, including the mayor of the town, and the state has retained special counsel to assist in the prosecution. The prompt and vigorous action of Governor Richards in this case, as well as his efforts to prevent the later lynching at Union, were most commendable.

"A total of seventy indictments were returned against fourteen men in the Sherman case, based on evidence secured by a military court which started its investigation immediately after the outbreak. These cases have been ordered tried in Dallas, the better to guarantee an impartial hearing. Reports from Chickasha indicate that nineteen suspects are being held in jail for preliminary trials, which is set for July 8. A number of these are held also on federal charges growing out of the lynching.

"The significance of these facts is evident when it is remembered that a few years ago the arrest and trial of lynchers was practically unknown. The first important break with the old order appears to have occurred in Georgia in 1922, when in three different lynching cases twenty-two men were convicted and imprisoned for long terms, whereas in the preceding forty years, with several hundred lynchings in the state, there was record of only one indictment and not a single conviction. Since that time the lynching record in Georgia has diminished almost to the vanishing point.

"Whether in the recent cases we shall have convictions as well as arrests will depend largely on public opinion. That the guilty should be convicted is of the utmost importance, not at all as a matter of vengeance but as a vindication of orderly government and a deterrent of those who might hereafter feel disposed to attack it by outbreaks of mob violence."

The Lynching Record.

It is distressing to note that during the first six months of this year the number of lynchings in the United States practically equaled the number during the whole year 1929. Since the beginning of the second half of the year another death from mob violence has occurred. At the present rate we are going to have the most unenviable record in this respect during 1930 that we have had in several years.

"Deplorable, however, as the situation appears from a mere recital of the figures this year as compared with last, there is nevertheless no reason to be discouraged. If we go back eight or ten years we will soon find that even the adverse record for this year is a very wholesome and gratifying improvement over conditions that obtained a decade ago. We are persuaded that in almost all sections of the South there is a far more militant and intelligent sentiment against lynching than there has ever been. More and more the people who were formerly indifferent to this threat against law and order are becoming aware of the menace that lies 'in countenancing mob vilence."

More and more we are realizing the utter futility of lynching. It does not solve any problems. It never has and it never will. It is not the victims of mob violence who are the worst sufferers. It is the community and state that permits such ghoulish and barbaric exhibitions that loses most. In the great majority of lynchings there is really little to palliate the offense. These crimes are an assault upon our institutions. They imply an utter lack of confidence in the machinery which has been set up for the enforcement of the law. They are a condemnation in advance of trial of the courts of our land.

If only people would remember that in practically every case the victim of the mob would certainly be punished through the orderly processes of the law there would be far less sympathy for this vengeful method of meting out primitive justice. We hardly know of a case in the annals of mob law where anyone with friends, standing or influence, no matter what his offense, was ever the victim. We confess in sorrow and in shame that there are far too many miscarriages of justice in our courts. But the mob never vents its revenge upon the beneficiaries of these cases. Hence there is no logic whatever in the argument sometimes made that the mob is the only avenue through which certain offenders can be assured their just desserts. It is well nigh impossible as experience has demonstrated to convict or punish the members of mobs. Our remedy for this evil, therefore, lies largely in education. We must arouse our people to a higher sense of civic duties.

FEDERAL LYNCHING LAW LOOMS

With the statement that lynchings during the first half of the year 1930 have surpassed the total for the entire year of 1929, comes the announcement that the Association for the Advancement of Colored People will seek the passage of an anti-lynching law by the national congress.

Several such suggestions have been made within the past few years, but with the gradual diminution in the number of lynchings little interest has been engendered in the proposal.

It is difficult to conceive of a federal anti-lynching law which could pass the tests of the courts. Matters of local policing are reserved to the states and the lynchings which occur are over and done with so speedily that the claim that a mob is in insurrection and a rebellion against the government cannot be substantiated.

The federal government has its hands full right now with enforcing the laws against liquor. It would be idle to create another army of federal agents to guard against possible lynchings.

There are some crimes which almost always will arouse a populace to take vengeance in its own hands. That statement is not a defense of lynching, it is a statement of fact and all the sentimentalizing will not change it.

If the Association for the Advancement of the Colored Races, which is the organization now calling for the federal law on lynching, will bend its efforts to eliminate those members of the colored race who in ninety per cent of the cases are the objects of lynching, the lynching total will drop to practically zero.

The passage of a federal law on the subject would do more harm than good.

HOW LONG WILL THEY HOLD?

Lynching, which has been on the decline for a number of years, shows a startling tendency to increase, according to figures for the first six months of 1930 as released by the Department of Research of Tuskegee Institute. To-date there have been nine cases of mob violence as compared with four for the corresponding period of 1929; and equal to the record of 1928.

The Tuskegee figures show the victims of this year's lynchings were predominantly negro, there being eight of that race to one white man. Texas leads the procession with three, and South Carolina runs a close second with two. The remaining four are divided between Oklahoma, Florida, Georgia and Mississippi.

At a period when respect for the law is at the lowest ebb in the history of the American people, this noticeable increase in mob violence is sufficient to cause considerable misgivings. The Tuskegee researchers with commendable fairness, include in their records those cases where armed mobs visit death upon an alleged law violator, and where racial issues are either involved or implied. A closer scrutiny, however, would reveal that there are other forms of law defiance that might well be grouped under the classification of lynching, and where there are no racial prejudices concerned.

The levees of law respect are none too secure against the possibility that they be bursted by the waves of lawlessness they hold in check.

THE LYNCHING RECORD

The South generally has reason to be ashamed of the fact that in the first six months of 1930 there were nine lynchings, five more than during the first six months of last year. Indeed the South will have reason to be ashamed until the time shall come when lynchings have passed away entirely.

For the first six months of 1930, Texas leads in the record of horror with three lynchings, South Carolina had two, and Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma one each.

North Carolina has a right to be proud of the fact that her name is not listed among the blemished states. There has been no lynching for several years in North Carolina now. This is explained in part by the growing public sentiment against lynching and in part by the prompt action of county and state officials in taking steps to prevent a lynching when the danger is near.

Governor Gardner's firmness in ordering the Charlotte National Guard to the Cabarrus jail, where three accused Negroes were held, a few days ago is an example. The outspoken stand which Governor Gardner ordered Cabarrus officers to take, and the dispatch with which troops were provided, no doubt prevented a lynching.

Texas and South Carolina can do well to study the methods which North Carolina has employed in preventing lynchings.

Records kept at Tuskegee Institute, a leading Southern school for negroes in Alabama, show nine lynchings for the first six months of 1930. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in annual session in Springfield, Mass., places the six months record at twelve. Texas is credited by the latter organiation with four, while the Tuskegee Institute records three against that state.

Fortunately, North Carolina is not listed among those states which have to answer for that type of violent death during the first six months of this year; and it is to be hoped that such a record may still exist when the last month of 1930 has passed into history.

On the other hand, there have been threats of mob action a number of times in this state in the past six months. Eastern North Carolina has not been without them. It would seem that the number of such crimes as most often lead to lynchings has shown unusual increase this year.

Most potent in preventing lynchings is prompt and efficient handling of the cases by the officers of the law and the courts. Eastern North Carolina has much to pride herself on in the efficiency of her courts.

Comment From the Press

A " SOUTHERN STATESMAN"

The question of whether lynching is justifiable is figuring in the United States senatorial campaign in South Carolina, unbelievable as it may seem Senator Coleman L. Blease, up for relection, discussed the subject in a campaign address.

"Whenever the Constitution comes between me and the virtue of white women in South Carolina, I say to hell with the Constitution," Blease is quoted as saying. When he was governor, he added, he did not call out the militia to protect negroes against mobs, and asked that when a suspect was caught that he be not notified until the next morning.

It would be difficult to equal such a statement for sheer barbarity and demagogism. It is a deliberate invitation to the people of South Carolina by an acknowledged leader, who boasts that he has held more political offices than any other man in the history of the state, to supersede normal legal processes with lynch law and mob violence. And there has been plenty of that in the South in recent weeks.

We cannot believe that such savagery reflects the views of the people of South Carolina, As a matter of fact, Blease's opponent in the senatorial race is now engaged in prosecuting 17 men accused of lynching a negro, and has asked heavy penalties for them.

Obviously men like Blease have no place in the Senate or in any other public office. It will be interesting to observe whether the decent people of South Carolina are willing to bear the stigma of having him again represent them.

BLEASE'S DEFENSE OF LYNCHING

Senator Cole Blease, of South Carolina, has done harm to the cause of law and order by his defense, in a campaign address, of the practice of lynching. He has done harm also to the reputation not only of his own State, but of the entire South.

Blease has made lynching an issue in the Senatorial campaign in South Carolina, and he is on the side of lynching. Moreover, according to a dispatch from Charleston, lynching has developed as an issue in the gubernatorial campaign in that State.

In an address at Union, scene of the recent lynching of a Negro for an attack on a white woman, Blease declared that Negroes who commit such crimes should be lynched, and that when the Constitution of the United States stands between the protection of the honor of the South's women, "to hell with the Constitution."

Such inflammatory utterances as this can only do harm. Blease's advocacy of lynching can only serve to stir up passion and prejudice which can have none but evil consequences.

Senator Blease is no more zealous for the protection of the white women of the South than any other Southerner. Nor is he any more desirous of seeing such crimes punished. But such crimes, like all other crimes, should be punished by law, and not by mob violence.

Blease's statement has not been allowed to go unchallenged in South Carolina. Mrs. Clelia P. McGowan, of Charleston, chairman of the South Carolina Committee on Race Relations, has issued a statement in which she declares that the use of the phrase, "the white women of South Carolina," as a cloak for mob violence, has been repudiated by women of virtually every Southern State. "The women of the South are not afraid to stand by the Constitution of the United States," the statement declared.

We believe that Mrs. McGowan's statement is representative of the feeling of the majority of Southern women, and of the majority of Southern men. We have always believed that the spirit of mob violence is confined to a relative few in the South, and that it is condemned by the great majority.

Lynching is a criminal and barbarous practice, and deserves no defense. More and more it has been recognized as such in the South, and this section has made remarkable progress in putting down this form of mob violence. But much of the good work that has been done can be undone by such men as Cole Blease. Blease is a demagogue of the worst type, and he has never been above inflaming people for his own selfish purposes. Blease thought that his defense of lynching would win him votes among those who are easily inflamed. He thought he was saying something that would be popular. We trust he will find that he was mistaken.

ANTI-LYNCHING LAWS

In the statement [illegible] the National Association [illegible] the Advancement of Colored People on the lynching record of 1930, there is food for thought, especially on the part of the Southern States that have for years had to fight to prevent the enactment of a federal anti-lynching act. It will be recalled that at one time it seemed as if the Dyer act, a drastic measure clearly violative of State rights and aimed at giving the federal government control of the lynching problem, might pass and it is possible that the comparative good record made in the few years prior to this one was a factor in inducing Congress to forbear.

The association, pointing to the fact that in the first six months of 1930 there were as many lynchings as in all of 1929, charges that State government cannot cope with the situation and that it will be necessary for the federal government to step in and take charge of it. The statement may be but the beginning of a new movement to push a federal anti-lynching bill through Congress and in view of the influence brought to bear in the Parker nomination and other recent incidents, such a movement might meet with more success than has been the case in the past.

The situation is such that it is more than ever important that in every lynching in any State, the State authorities act vigorously to discover and punish the guilty persons. Justice has always required such a course, but to it is now added expediency. Only by proof that the States are fully capable of dealing with lynchers as they should be dealt with, as of course the States are, can a federal anti-lynching movement be checked. If lynchings continue to go on in the South at the rate set in the first half of 1930, and if those that occur continue to go unpunished, it will be hard to present sufficiently strong arguments to prevent Congress from imposing on the country a form of federal interference that will not only prove an outrage in its own field, but will mark a new step in the steady encroachment of the federal government on the rights and powers of the State.

THE USUAL VIEWPOINT

Recent lynching of a Negro by a South Carolina mob is used by a New York tabloid as the basis for a vitrolic attack upon the South. The burden of the editorial is that Southern mobs, when things grow dull, stimulate their jaded nerves by stringing a Negro to a convenient tree.

There is nothing unusual in such attacks by Northern journals, which arise either from bias or ignorance or wont to distort the facts to suit themselves. However, the aforementioned tabloid blare is conspicuous in that it displays on the part of the writer a gross ignorance not only of the South, but of current news events, and an entire lack of knowledge of his subject.

With a mob, this newspaper has not the slightest sympathy. It yields to none in its opposition to mob violence. Conceding that lynchings occur more frequently in the South than in other sections of the country, we nevertheless submit that racial prejudices are no more violent in the South than elsewhere. It is purely a matter of geography. In the South race problems and race prejudices revolve around the Negro. In Chicago it hinges upon differences with foreigners, mostly from the Southern European countries. In California, it is the Oriental, who furnishes the fireworks, and in blase New York it is among other things the Southern White man.

However, the most uncalled for insult in the tabloid editorial is that it indicts the entire South for the offense of one or more States. By making its tirade all-inclusive it takes in North Carolina as well as South Carolina; Virginia as well as Texas.

Other commonwealths may speak for themselves. We speak only for our own State, but we challenge the New York tabs to show that a Negro's life is not as safe from mob violence in North Carolina as in New York We challenge them to show that as many Negroes are not lynched within the confines of his own city as in the State of North Carolina.

Charity demands that it be admitted that these are facts of which the newspaper referred to is ignorant. The general range of knowledge in the less informed circles of New York is strictly prescribed. It does not pierce even the more notable sections of the metropolis.

The newspapers that cater to this class speak the same language, share the same ignorance.

It would have been surprising had the South-hating tab taken a different view.

Texas Led All

This is a news editorial, keeping the record straight. Nine lynchings were reported in the United States during the first six months of 1930, as compared with five for the same period of 1929. Texas led all other states with three. South Carolina had two and Florida and Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma had one each. Eight of the persons lynched were negroes and one was white. Five of the victims were charged with assault, two with slaying, one with bombing a house and one with attempted assault.

Speaking of Texas with its four lynchings there were 4926 convicts in the state prison system on July 1, and the prediction is made that next fall when the court of criminal appeals reconvenes, the prison population will grow as convictions below are confirmed. There is a prison problem in Texas. There is a system that is as antequated as the seven hills of Rome. Why should the system grow cotton on its thousands of acres of land in direct competition with thousands of Texas cotton growers, land owners and tenants, who have been selling the fleecy staple far below the cost of production and who are facing a future which is not inviting in the markets of the world?

It is said that there are a thousand convicts who are entitled to the benefit of the parole law. These convicts have been orderly, they have obeyed the rules and regulations, they have atoned for their misdeeds; now why shouldn't mercy be shown them, clemency be granted and these unfortunate wards of the state sent home to their dependents to begin the battle of life anew and to provide the necessaries of life for those who have been living from hand to mouth or on the charity of kindly neighbors during the term or terms of incarceration of those convicted of violating the statutes of the commonwealth?

Why should the tax payers feed them when they are willing to work for their own feed and provide shelter and food and clothing for their dependents?

This does not apply to incorrigible criminals. It has no reference to those who are classed as dangerous criminals at all times. There are men who should be kept behind the walls for life; there are hundreds convicted of minor offenses who should be salvaged and given an opportunity to walk in that road called Straight.

South's Lynching Record Condemned By Robert Taylor

55

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 1. (AP)—Lynchings in the south were condemned in a telegram dispatched to Governor Dan L. Moody of Texas by Robert Gray Taylor, chairman of the committee on race relations of Philadelphia yearly meetings of Friends, it was announced today at the annual convention of the national association for advancement of colored people.

The governor was called upon to set aside the Fourth of July as a day of mourning and sorrow and to seek the cooperation of governors of other southern states. The telegram also commended the sheriff of Beaumont, Texas, for his action in preventing a lynching Sunday.

In his message, Mr. Taylor termed lynching as the supreme expression of anarchy and declared that in the eyes of the civilized world, this country has acquired a repudiation as "a hotbed of anarchy". The telegram was read at the closing session of the convention. The text:

"The decent law abiding people of America are shocked at the record of 12 lynchings in our country this year. Lynching is the supreme expression of anarchy and it is that system which deprives human beings of life without due process of law guaranteed under the constitution. It is probably the worst crime known.

Governor's Sincerity Is Not Questioned

"We do not question your sincerity in attempting to blot out this crime. But this we do know; that such acts of murder in cold blood as have been witnessed in your state and in six others during this year are tending to give our nation, in the eyes of the civilized world, a justly merited reputation for being a hotbed of anarchy.

"We know your problem is a difficult one, that the best citizens of Texas and the south are ashamed and disgusted with it. It must be stopped and it is your duty as governor of Texas to stop it in your state.

"We suggest you issue a challenge to all the people fo Texas to set aside the Fourth of July as a day of mourning and sorrow; that all places of worship be opened and that you urge all your people to meet in silent and reverent prayer; that you appeal to the president of the United States and the congress for the immediate passage of an anti-lynching law at this session; or if impossible, that a special session of congress be immediately called for the purpose of passing such an act as an aid to you and all others who wish that this shame be blotted from our history.

"The other six states are: North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Oklahoma. We suggest that you appeal to the governors of these states for like action and hearty cooperation.

"We wish to commend the action of the sheriff of Beaumont in your state in aggressively resisting an attempted lynching Sunday. This seems to show that the use of ordinary police power in the hands of strong and determined public servants with the cooperation of state executives can blot out lynching in this country provided the decent people back up this kind of action.

"May the peace of God be with you in this hour of great national humiliation and may God strengthen you to do justice toward all people. While we concede failure to live up to this aim, we affirm our traditional position that all men are the sons of God—that there can be no inequality between sons of one common father and that the sons of God include, negroes, Catholics, Jews, and all other people, irrespective of race, creed or color."

The telegram was sent yesterday.

U. S. Intervention to Prevent Lynchings Urged.

Springfield, Mass., June 30.—(AP)—Commenting on the fact that 12 lynchings, or double the number of the entire 12 months of 1929, had occurred in the six months ending today, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in its convention here today issued a statement saying.

"There is little, if any, prospect that known members of the murderous mobs who dethroned the courts and orderly government in this country and who disgraced us before the civilized world will be prosecuted or punished. State government again has broken down in the face of this form of murderous anarchy and the conclusion will become inevitable for many law-abiding, decent citizens of both races that it will be necessary for the federal government to step in and preserve trial by a jury, a basic constitutional right, for its citizens.

"The sending of a brass band to England by the governor of Texas will not obscure the fact, known to all the civilized world, that Texas this year leads the roster of infamy with four [illegible] murderous outrages, one of them committed in the presence of members of the Texas rangers and involving the roasting alive of a human being who was confined in jail awaiting trial."

The Walker medal, presented annually by the association to the member of the race who has done most in the preceding year for Negroes through activities of the association, was presented today to T. Gillis Nutter of Charlestown, W. Va., a member of the legislature of that state.

Florence Kelley of New York, representing the National Consumers League, and Robert G. Taylor, chairman of the Race Relational Committee of the Society of Friends, urged that branches of the association to organize politically to effect the defeat of senators who voted for the confirmation of Judge John J. Parker as Supreme Court justice.

NEGRO PROTEST ON LYNCHINGS IS UNANSWERED

Moody Says Reply Useless As Mobs Can't Be Controlled

By United Press

AUSTIN, July 4—Governor Dan Moody has received a lengthy telegram from the Society for the Advancement of the Colored Race, containing a vigorous protest against the lynching of negroes in Texas. Two negroes have been killed, by mobs in the state in 1930.

The governor will not answer the protest, however. He doesn't feel that it calls for an answer from him.

"We are opposed to lynchings, just as they are," was his comment. "Lynchings result from outbreaks of feeling that cannot be controlled."

BROWNWOOD, TEX.
BULLETIN

TOO MANY MOBS

THE MOB SPIRIT, once permitted to come to fruition in a lynching, spreads over a state like an epidemic of disease in a small community. Less than two months ago the worst instance of mob outlawry in the history of the Southwest occurred in North Texas at Sherman, and since that time there have been three other lynchings and two or three attempted lynchings in Texas, in addition to one lynching in Oklahoma. In the country at large there have been twelve lynchings this year, the same number as for all of last year; and Texas, be it remembered, has provided four of them.

It isn't worth while to review all the old excuses for mob outlawry—the delay of the courts, the uncertainty of justice,—because to do so is to apologize for the mob and to encourage the mob spirit.

The major reason for the lynching of any accused person by a mob of infuriated citizens is that officers whose duty it is to prevent mob outlawry have not done their duty. A fairly good illustration of the point comes in the news of the day from Beaumont, where a negro was identified as the perpetrator of a series of fiendish crimes. A mob sought to take him from the protection of officers who were holding him for legal trial, but the mob couldn't get him. Sheriff W. W. Covington had armed guards around the jail, and instructed them to shoot anybody who attempted to storm the prison. The crowd soon began to dwindle, and it was dispersed entirely when the sheriff walked over to the leader of the would-be lynchers and slapped him.

No mob is going to attempt to storm a jail and lynch a prisoner when it knows the prison is defended by a fearless sheriff who is determined to do his duty. When a mob succeeds in snatching a prisoner out of the hands of the officers and in lynching him, it is prima facie evidence either that the officers were wholly inefficient, or lacked courage to do the duty they had sworn they would do.

LYNCHERS LOSE OLD IMMUNITY

Commission Points to Prosecutions Pending.

Special To The News-Sentinel

ATLANTA, Ga.—No longer can the members of lynching mobs expect immunity from punishment with the old-time confidence, according to a statement issued by the Commission on Inter-Racial Co-operation, which sees in the arrest and pending trials of a large number of suspected lynchers the one encouraging aspect of the recent lynching epidemic.

"No less than 49 men are now awaiting trial in connection with the three lynchings in Walhalla, S. C., Sherman, Texas, and Chickasha, Okla.," says the Commission. "In each of these cases arrests were made with commendable promptness and the authorities appear determined that justice shall be done if possible."

There were nine lynchings in the United States in the first six months of 1930 compared with five in the same period last year, officials of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute announced. There were three in Texas, two in South Carolina, and one each in Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma.

NOT IN SYMPATHY WITH LYNCH LAW.

The United Press, listing a few isolated instances in which lynch law has prevailed in the South within recent months, went to the Governors of several of these States and asked them what they thought of lynch law. It is to be noted that none of these agreed with Senator Cole Blease who has said "whenever the Constitution comes between me and the virtue of the white women of the South, I say to hell with the Constitution."

Seven Governors were questioned and seven agreed that every agency of every State must be utilized to check the mob spirit and wipe out lynch law.

The statements were issued by Governors John Garland Pollard, of Virginia; Max Gardner, of North Carolina; John G. Richards, South Carolina; L. G. Hardman, Georgia; Flem D. Sampson, Kentucky; Huey P. Long, Louisiana, and Dan Moody, of Texas. The statement of Governor Gardner is representative:

"I regard lynching and every other form of mob violence not only as morally wrong in every instance, but as fundamentally destructive of the rights of every citizen. Under our system of government every man, irrespective of race, condition, or the crime he has committed, is entitled to a trial by jury, to be represented by counsel, and to have his guilt and punishment judicially determined in the light of law of facts."

This statement really expresses the sentiment of the majority of our good citizens as well as the sentiment of our Governors. A majority of the people do not want lynch law, They know full well that such a theory as Senator Blease has offered is contrary to good government They know it does nothing to stop crime. It has been the accepted policy of thousands of our people for generations, yet it hasn't stopped criminal attacks.

Senator Blease knows full well that the Constitution is full able to protect the virtue of our women. The Governors know it. The good citizens know it. The chief problem in such instances is to teach the masses that two wrongs never make a right, and that they don't strengthen the law or afford greater protection for themselves when they take the law into their own hands.

Stern measures may be necessary to bring such teaching, and that's the reason it is important to get the views of our Governors, for they alone can give such measures. When they stand firm the law is strengthened, and each test which proves a victory for law enforcement is another link in the chain which will eventually bring death to Lynch Law.

The Lynching Crime

NOT the least shocking news of the day deals with lynchings in two Southern States. A mob of 250 men stormed a Mississippi jail, led out a hapless Negro charged with the murder of a white youth, handcuffed their victim to a river levee and shot him to death. Further north, in South Carolina, the disgraceful feat was duplicated. Here, too, the fury of the mob was directed against a Negro man. In this case, however, the victim was accused of the unpardonable atrocity.

In no instance is lynching an offense which may be condoned by good citizens. It is revolting to the sensibilities of civilized men. In the procedure is revealed such irresponsibility as marks the participants unfit for partnership in the State. The very act of lynching is a scornful gesture toward orderly government. It is an affront to those institutions which are set up to the end that men may be punished in a judicial manner for their sins against society. Any person who takes a life, or is an accessory in the taking of one, without the sanction of the law, is himself a murderer and is subject to the penalty for that crime.

Lynching bees cannot but bring reproach upon the South. Apologists seek to excuse them on the ground that social conditions here are different from those obtaining in other sections of the country, but that is merely begging the question. It is true, of course, that the best and more responsible people of the South, believing firmly, as they do, in the orderly processes of government, neither participate in lynching bees nor condone them. That, too, however, excuses this class only in a degree. It is the business of these best and more responsible people to teach the thugs, through drastic action, that such mob murders as were committed Wednesday in the States of South Carolina and Mississippi will not be tolerated.

The lowliest person, be he white or colored, is entitled to his day in court after a charge has been preferred against him. He should enjoy all the protection the government can afford any prisoner, and every opportunity to plead his case before an unbiased jury. Only under such conditions can the State fulfill its destiny. Mob rule, if it continues, will head the community for the barbarism which characterized our uncivilized ancestors. It should be stamped out as the most subtle and effective influence at work in the undermining of government. Send a half dozen lynchers to the gallows or the electric chair and this dismal business would be rooted out of our modern life.

RECORD
COLUMBIA, S. C.

APR 26 1930

The Oconee Lynching.

Allen Green was killed by a mob in Oconee County. The shame of it is upon South Carolina.

Sheriff Thomas is reported to have a fractured skull as the result of the fracas preceding the taking of his prisoner from the jail. Sympathy will be felt for the sheriff if he is seriously injured. His discretion will be questioned for putting himself in position to receive a clubbing, when he could have defended himself and his prisoner without getting such direct injury. His discretion is also to be questioned for not having taken greater precautions for the protection of his prisoner. In the absence of that why did he not report the arrest of Allen Green with information as to the crime to the Governor so that the prisoner could have been sent elsewhere? His conduct should be the subject of investigation after all steps are taken to arrest the mob who "with handkerchiefs over their faces" took the Negro from the jail.

There is no sympathy for Allen Green if he was guilty of the crime charged. He deserved death, but death at the hands of the law, which he was in fair way to receive. But there is deep sympathy for South Carolina. Every court house in the State should be hung with mourning. Every sheriff who feels in his heart that he would not willingly lay down his life for the protection of the honor of the State as represented by the full care of any prisoner entrusted to him should resign his office. That is what he is paid for, and paid many times that of the policeman who daily carries his life in his hands, or the private soldier who in Nicaraugua, or Haiti or on a battle front lays down his life upon the word of command, though he may not know what it is all about. A sheriff who will not do this is a dastard and a hireling unworthy of his hire.

The Governor deplores the blot on the State and has acted promptly in sending detectives to aid local officers. His honor and that of the State are at stake and he doubtless will not be content with half way measures.

Solicitor Harris seems to be acting promptly and well. It is a supreme crisis in his life, and it will be to his everlasting glory when he meets the situation with fearlessness and an eye single to duty.

There will be some measure of atonement if Governor Richards, Solicitor Harris and the local officers with unswerving fidelity to the highest attributes succeed in bringing to justice these who were unmindful of the sacredness of laws and unconscious of honor due their State.

A Grayson County, Texas, mob frustrated in an attempt to capture and lynch a negro prisoner, carries its point by setting fire to the courthouse. The negro was burned to death. Previously the mob had tried to dynamite the courthouse.

It must be said for the state rangers and the county peace officers that they took a determined and vigorous stand against the mob. Several times the rioters were dispersed by tear bombs. Every effort apparently was made to fight the flames.

The rangers appealed to Governor Moody for help. The governor sent this message: "Hold him if you can, but do not shoot anybody." The governor is seeking a third term. A mob that resorts to fire and dynamite forfeits every claim to coddling at the hands of the officers of the law.

It is the duty of Governor Moody and the Grayson County authorities to bring the instigators of the mob to justice.

SHERMAN, TEXAS, May 13.—(AP)—A threat against the negro population of Sherman, scene of last Friday's rioting by a mob that destroyed the courthouse to take the life of George Hughes, a negro charged with attacking a white woman, was made today in the form of typewritten warnings tacked on several residences in an outlying negro settlement.

Another warning was found at the business place of a Sherman contractor who employs a number of negroes, advising him he must discharge his negro workers within 36 hours.

Col. L. S. Davidson, provost marshal, advised the negroes and the contractor to disregard the warnings. He said the military court of inquiry had some leads on the latest activities and was prepared to make a thorough investigation.

The officer reiterated his statement that the lives and property of negroes would be protected and said the Guardsmen would shoot to kill if it became necessary to insure such protection. Guards in the negro district were augmented and orders were issued to shoot any one caught attempting incendiarism.

Texas Rangers, assisting military officers, continued their roundup of alleged rioters, making three arrests and bringing to 33 the number taken into custody. Those arrested today were held for incendiarism and inciting to riot.

Military authorities still were of the opinion that martial law, declared Saturday night could be lifted by the end of the week unless there were disturbances more serious than the posting of anonymous warnings.

LYNCHINGS DECREASE

Further [illegible] against the ravages of mob law was scored this week when the Commission on Race Relations of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America reported that a total of ten lynchings occurred in 1929 in five states as compared with eleven lynchings in five states in 1928.

Of last year's lynchings, four were in Florida, three in Texas, and one each in Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi.

Seven of the victims were negroes, three whites. In addition to the actual lynchings, there were 27 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. In this category were listed cases where prisoners were removed or prison guards augmented.

Four states in which lynchings occurred in 1928 had clean records in 1929.

Four Lynchings in Four Months

From February 1, when a Georgia mob broke a three-year record for that State to furnish the first lynching of the present year, until April [illegible]3, no other lynchings were reported. But on the latter date the armistice ended. Within twenty-four hours a Mississippi mob seized a Negro charged with killing a boy and after tying him to a tree fired several hundred shots into his body, and a South Carolina mob fractured the skull of a sheriff guarding his jail, took out a Negro prisoner accused of attempting to attack a white girl, fastened him to a tree and shot him to death. Less than a week later Tampa, Fla., reports that the body of John Hodaz has been found swinging from a tree, pierced by many bullets. He had been taken while en route to jail in custody of a deputy sheriff, by eight men who disappeared with their victim. The body was not found until two days later.

Thus after nearly three months during which the country was free from lynchings, Mississippi, South Carolina and Florida have supplied cases in rapid succession. The localities are far distant from each other, the offenses with which the men were charged are all different and no reason appears to suggest any connection between the three save only in the presense of the jungle spirit of revenge close under the surface and ready always to come out to wreak its savagery. The man Hodaz was a native of Hungary, 40 years old, who had served in the navy. He was charged with dynamiting two houses, in one of which a woman was seriously injured. A feud with the two families dating from an earlier robbery charge against Hodas and the flogging of another man by four persons who suspected him of knowing where Hodas was hiding, indicate much bitter and uncontrolled feeling in the community. Such a situation, suggesting a breakdown in local authority, ought to interest the Governor of Florida. Few States resent more quickly criticism from without, but no State can hold the country's esteem which permits examples of mob spirit to go unpunished.

One [illegible] convincing arguments that [illegible] be presented for the abolition of [illegible] punishment was furnished at Sherman, [illegible] on Friday, by the infuriated, frenzied mob [illegible] burned down a $60,000 courthouse for the [illegible] purpose of burning alive an imprisoned [illegible] who was being held there on the charge of [illegible] a white woman.

His illegal execution was as horrifying an ex[illegible] as had been the atrocious torture and murder of any victim of the Middle Age inquisitions. The Texas mob, swayed by hysterical emotion, became as cruelly ferocious as any wild beast of the jungle, eager to torture and tear human flesh to pieces, clamoring, insanely, for a taste of blood.

The men guilty of this degrading atrocity are murderers. There crime is no less serious than that of the man they killed.

These men are killers because they had been taught to kill. Tell a man of little intelligence that the State has a right to kill legally, and he will assume the right, when his passions are aroused, to kill without the sanction of the law.

The tragic part of it all is that these modern inquisitors thought honestly that what they were doing would help to preserve law and order.

Their arguments and their alibis are precisely the ones we use when we murder a criminal in the electric chair.

Texas has, in the matter of lynching, a particularly unenviable record. Only one State, Florida, with four lynchings last year, has shown itself less civilized.

Half of all the lynchings in the United States during 1920 occured in these two States.

Cleveland Williams, who was accused without trial of writing anonymous notes to a woman, was seized on September 1, at Calvert, Texas, by a mob which riddled his body with bullets. The mortally wounded negro was tied to the back of an automobile and dragged through the streets until he was dead.

Two months later, Marshall Ratliff, a white man, under sentence to death for a bank robbery, was taken by a mob from the jail at Eastland, Texas, and hanged. The rope broke before he was dead, and his killers waited 15 minutes for a second rope and then hanged him again.

With even greater ferocity was perpetrated the mob murder of last Friday. Followers of Gandhi in India will read with horror of the "savages" in Texas.

THE SHERMAN AVENGERS.

The horrible vengeance taken by a mob at Sherman, Texas, on Friday for a criminal assault upon a white woman by a negro man, resulting in the burning of the courthouse and the cremation of the negro, is one of the most atavistic events of recent years.

The press reports of the affair show the desperate efforts of the officers of the county and state to prevent the infuriated people in the mob from wreaking their revenge upon the negro for his unspeakable crime. The officials and guardsmen in charge of his protection while actually upon trial in a regular court cannot be held responsible for what happened. They seemed sufficient in number and determination, but the fury of the maddened mass that fell upon them could not be stemmed and defeated.

The adherents to law and order may deplore and denounce these volcanic outbursts of murderous rage, overriding all the instrumentalities of regular justice and the powers of government, but there is one great and irreversible fact ingrained in the psychology of the southern people that must always be taken into account by those who judge such events as this one at Sherman. That fact is that the white people will not tamely allow their women to be the unavenged victims of the lust and brutality of any negro man. Their always hot passion is to kill the raper without mercy when they can catch him. Criticism of that passion and action from any source appeals only to the deafness of the adder and no one can avert the terrible vengeance but the negro who keeps his lustful hands off an innocent white woman.

STOP LYNCH MURDERS.

The state authorities in South Carolina have taken prompt measures by detection and indictment to trial persons charged with a lynching in that state. If it shall turn out that the grand jury has spotted some who were actually engaged in the mob murder and trial juries are as zealous for impartial law and order, and convict those proven to have been guilty of the crime, South Carolina will have rendered an outstanding and praise-provoking service to just government.

Constitution

The lynching of persons who are in full custody of the law, or could be put there easily for safekeeping and legal disposition, is an uncivilized, lawless and highly criminal act of mob power. It is an act as abhorrent to all just men as it is unnecessary to the obtaining of justice. In every case within memory it has been as cruel and unjustifiable as the act of a giant in strangling a child in its cradle.

5-29-30

Public sentiment against the act has served in recent years to largely cut down the number of lynchings, but that sentiment is not yet pervasive enough and strong enough to prevent every sudden and murderous ebullition of mobs inflamed by sudden and revolting crimes committed in a community. But where prevention of a lynching fails because of the weightier force of the mob there should follow prompt and intensive prosecution of the murderers leading the mob. The excuse that none of them can be identified is absurd. The perfect identification, conviction and execution of a few mob leaders would soon put an almost total end to these damnably savage episodes in our current communal life.

Gov. Moody Tells London Reporter Riots Aren't A Daily Occurence In Texas

AUSTIN, TEXAS, May 10.—(AP)—"I say, is this the governor of Texas?"

5-11-30

Thus came the voice of a correspondent of The London Daily Mail, 5,000 miles away who was calling Gov. Dan Moody to ascertain particulars of the riot at Sherman, Texas. The call was received by Moody at 5 a.m. today.

After querying the governor about what was going on, the correspondent added:

Montgomery

"Well, well! Is this a common occurrence in Texas?"

Assured by the governor that it was not, the correspondent hung up with "thanks and cheerio."

Another Lynching

Lynching of a negro near Rosedale, Miss., is creditable neither to the south, the state, the mob nor any individual. For several years the lynching rate in southern states had been going down. Time will come when lynching will be recognized everywhere in the south for what it is—murder combined with contempt for law. Lynching is barbarous. Civilized though we may call ourselves, if we countenance mob murder we are far from the right to be proud of our civilization. Another lynching. Another black mark on the records of a proud section and a great state.

WHY SUSPICION IS STIRRED IN LYNCHING CASES

Notable circumstances about many of the lynchings in the southern states are these: usually it is the sheriff and his men who make the arrests and usually the mob gets possession of its victims under conditions that make the public wonder at the officers' guilelessness.

These circumstances characterized the latest lynching bee in Georgia. The sheriff captured the negro sought for attacking and murdering a girl, secured a confession from him, and then ran right squarely into a vengeful mob with his prisoner. The officer was injured slightly in the encounter and the negro was executed by the mob.

The state officer whose duty was to show the chief concern over the mob outbreak said he would look into the case and decide what action, "if any" to take. It seems that an investigation is to be held.

We predict its absolute futility. There will be no indictment, if the matter runs according to the usual. The mystery of the negro's death will remain a mystery. Nobody will identify the men who acted as his executioners.

There's no blinking the fact that lynching has been virtually the public's will in many southern communities in cases of this sort. We are not saying that this is true in the particular Georgia case under consideration. When the crime results in summary action by a mob, the county is saved the cost of a trial and witnesses are preserved against appearance in court. Is it to be wondered at, then, that the suspicion sometimes arises that the sheriff on occasions is not altogether averse to delivering his guilty charge to vengeance, thereby simplifying matters? It is such a suspicion that makes incumbent upon every honest, dutiful officer to prove that he used all the discretion and force at his command in the protection of his prisoner.

LYNCHING IN GEORGIA.

With the new year little more than a month old the South again has witnessed another atrocious lynching following close upon the heels of a crime equally as terrible. Jimmy Levine, Ocilla, Georgia, Negro confessed attacker and slayer of the 14-year-old daughter of a white planter, last Saturday morning, was taken from Sheriff Tyler in the heart of town and carried to the scene of the crime where he was beaten fearfully, his throat cut and his body burned on a pyre of blazing logs.

In the half-light of early morning, the sheriff says, he recognized none of the mob of 30 or 40 men who took his prisoner from him. Thus the immediate investigation ordered by Governor L. G. Hardman appears to have only remote chance of bringing any of the mob to justice. Since Sunday no progress has been announced by Solicitor General Robert S. Foy, in charge of the probe. The case has all the earmarks of another instance of unpunished mob violence, without the slightest defense to be made of the unspeakable crime.

The Negro had confessed to his offense against society. He was being taken to jail where he would have awaited a certain justice through due process of law. Yet, as in every other lynching case, a self-appointed group took the law into their own hands and committed a crime as serious as that of the wretch whose life they took, at the same time disgracing the name of their native State.

The South has made great progress in its rise above such practices as this in recent years. Where a hundred or more were lynched in similar fashion a quarter century ago, only 10 or 12 were murdered by mobs last year. It is to be hoped that the futility of such exhibitions in a civilized age will soon cease and an enlightened body of citizens will not only allow the law to take its course in the punishment of such foul crimes as the Negro committed, but will give the agents of the law their support in enforcing justice. Mob violence is a relic of an unenlightened age and must wither under the glare of modern opinion and civilized repugnance of such crimes.

The Decline of Lynching.

(From the Chicago News.)

In the last decade, according to a report just made by the commission on interracial co-operation, the lynching evil has been so effectively combated that the annual number of victims of mob violence has decreased by 85 per cent. This affords striking proof of the power of public opinion.

Mere condemnation of lynching would not have accomplished the results noted in the report. But demands that the negro be granted justice and fair opportunity have been re-enforced by acts and policies embodying those abstract principles. Educational facilities for negroes have been extended and improved everywhere, although much remains to be done in that field especially in the south. The study of race relations in colleges and schools has developed sympathetic knowledge and understanding. The southern press has done splendid work in fighting abuses that were survivals of years of slavery and reconstruction and in energizing officials disposed to be negligent. Interracial committees have been organized in many communities to combat ignorance, poverty, disease and corrupt politics.

It is clear that the lynching problem is being solved in the most backward districts of the south. But, as recent writers have pointed out, insufficient attention has been paid to what may be called "near lynching"—that is, discrimination, direct or indirect, against the negro in the administration of justice. In some instances, it is affirmed, grand juries, trial juries, prosecutors, witnesses or judges have displayed prejudice and distrust based solely on race and color.

The friends of law, order and equal rights must attack with vigor the rank abuses that survive. The methods of attack are the same as in the case of lynching—education, publicity and consructive interracial co-operation.

Law And Mob In Georgia

WITH ALL the provocation present for the alleged justification of mob violence, the Irwin County, Georgia mob can be said to have taken thoroughness for its slogan in the unlawful killing of the Negro Levine, charged with attacking and killing a 14-year-old white girl. The mob took the prisoner out of Sheriff Tyler's hands and, departing on its business, fired a volley into the Sheriff's car, wounding the representative of the law.

A slow-moving investigation seems to be under way, with the report issued yesterday that no members of the band had been arrested or officially identified.

This assault on law constitutes the usual story, for one thing, of the inadequate police protection in small towns or in the countryside. That is, admittedly, a difficult problem. Unfortunately, there is a graver problem, and that is the temper, the spirit, the citizenship itself in any county when it is confronted with the alternatives of law or lawlessness in dealing with flagrant crimes.

If it can be said for Irwin County that a majority of the people deplore mob action, it remains to be seen how effectively that majority will move toward the punishment of the mob.

FEWER LYNCHINGS

Last year there were ten lynchings in this country. In [illegible], less than 40 years ago, there were [illegible] lynchings. Comparison of these two records and study of the public [illegible], with their slow but steady decline in lynchings show that progress in this matter is real.

There are probably several reasons for this improvement. Education and agitation against lynching, stiffening of public opinion and therefore of public officials—jailors, sheriffs, prosecutors, judges—have had considerable effect.

Lynching should not exist in a civilized community where legal justice moves promptly and surely. To condemn lynching is not to condone other crimes. Humanity decency and justice are worth striving for. Their achievement in one field foreshadows their achievement in others. Thoughtful Americans hope that other crimes of violence may be checked as lynching has been.

A Punishment Equal to the Crime

The governor has called an investigation of the lynching of the negro near Ocilla last week and the newspapers, especially those in the north who do not understand will have their say about the matter.

But regardless of investigations and newspaper criticisms, just as long as innocent women and girls of the old Southland are criminally assaulted, the party committing the crime, regardless of whether he is white or black, will, nine times out of ten, be lynched as a sure method of meeting out sufficient punishment to the crimimnal for the crime he has committed.

The laws of the land have become so entangled and so messed up that regardless of what crime a person commits, if he has sufficient funds to employ a lawyer he can prolong his case and carry it from one court to another until public sentiment has passed and then get a sentence to the penitentiary for life and later get pardoned or paroled.

The laxity of the law has made life too cheap and modesty and virtue a play thing in the hands of too many criminals, or would be criminals, to make things pleasant.

We cannot uphold the lynch law—but nothing is too bad for the criminal who proves to be so henious as Jimmy Levine, the negro lynched near Ocilla last week.

There is some satisfaction in knowing that he cannot get a new trial, nor can he prolong his case in the courts of this land. As he ravished and killed even so was a like penalty meted out to him—and the old unchangeable law again makes us realize that "as ye sow, so shall ye reap."

Probe In Lynching To Open Thursda

OCILLA, Ga., Feb. 3.—Irwin county authorities today had instructions to report to Governor L. G. Hardman the results of their investigation of the lynching of Jimmy Levine a negro, who was seized by a mob after being arrested for attacking and killing a 14-year-old white girl.

"Any action of the state will depend upon what the sheriff and the solicitor-general report to me," the governor said in Atlanta in announcing that he had asked information from Solicitor General R. S. Foy and Sheriff W. E. Tyler."

Sheriff Tyler, who was injured slightly when the mob of some 500 persons took Levine from him, said he was accosted shortly before daylight Saturday and there was not light enough at the time to recognize members of the mob. The sheriff had arrested Levine at Mystic, Ga., after an all-night hunt and said the negro confessed the crime to him.

At the sheriff's office it was said that no arrests had been made in the lynching investigation. Solicitor Foy, of Sylvester, said he was engaged in court duties elsewhere and would be unable to come here to open an inquiry until Thursday.

Judge R. Eve, of the Tifton circuit of the Superior court, said he planned to consult with Mr. Foy today regarding the investigation.

THE LYNCHING EVIL

Editor, Virginian-Pilot:

The lynching of Jimmy Levine at Ocilla, Ga., is only another effort made by the enemies and outlaws of the American Government to prove to the rest of the world that mob violence and lynching will still continue in the face of constituted government. To cut a human being to pieces and burn him alive is more terrible than the acts of savage beasts. How can we teach other nations how to measure out justice when such injustices are being forced upon people of our own household?

If a person is charged with an offense, let him be white or black, the law should take its course. Let us denounce lynching from our pulpits, from our homes, schools, highways, byways, and everyway until it is banished from the face of America.

APPEALS FOR NEGRO BEACH

Editor, Virginian-Pilot:

Members of the colored race have been serving in a domestic capacity for the white race for a long time and I think it is high time for the white people to wake to the fact that the sooner they join with us and make our living environs more healthy, our service will thereby be increased. To provide us with a bathing beach would keep down many epidemics.

Why should City Council, with power vested in them to act for the municipality in such matters, subjugate the rights of the Negroes to a hostile committee of five?

I hope the members of council that stood for right, justice, law and order will not take water at such a critical time and on such an important question. All we ask of the City Council is treat the Negroes as citizens.

Can you suggest any remedy for the unemployed of this city?

Out of work at 40 years of age and with a family to support. No prospects of securing employment because of my age. God, what an experience to be turned down repeatedly with the same excuse—too old.

Yes, out of work and my place filled by a machine that can neither eat, drink nor sleep and it has no feelings. The machine can work quicker and more accurately than I—but it is only a machine and I am still a human being with all my faculties.

There is a small army of unemployed in this city, at present time. Surely there must be some solution to this problem but in the meantime human beings must suffer.

Perhaps Dr. Osler was right. Certainly it would seem that a man out of work at 40 has reached the deadline. Is there no hope?

OUR CIVILIZATION ADVANCES

Dr. Moton's report on lynchings for 1929 shows that this form of barbarism has all but disappeared from the South. It is terrible, of course, that ten persons should have been put to death by mobs in the last twelve months, seven of them negroes; but the record is the best the United States has had since the records of these atrocities have been compiled.

In 1892 there were five lynchings a week. Between the years 1885 and 1901, inclusive, the number of lynchings of whites and negroes averaged 157 a year. The total number of lynchings recorded for these seventeen years was 2678, 891 of the victims being whites and 1787 negroes. In 190' the total number of lynchings dropped below 100 for the first time It went up to '04 the next year but since '904 the number of lynchings has never been above 87 and the total has been going down more and more rapidly in recent years. It went up to 30 in 1926 but dropped to 16 in 1927 and in 1928 there were only 11 lynchings.—Asheville Citizen.

SAULSBURY, N. C., Feb. 15.—With a steel cow charm, Mrs. Laura Wood, 60, was lynched near Barber Junction, a few miles from here on February [illegible]. According to advice from International Labor Defense Workers, the mother of four stalwart sons was strung up by a mob of drunken fiends, because she had been accused of stealing two hams from a neighboring white farmer.

While enroute to the scene of this most recent vestial outbreak, the I. L. D. investigators overtook three of the sons on the road who led them to the scene of the lynching and the freshly made grave in which they were permitted to lay her outraged corpse to rest. After much persuasion, according to the investigators, the sons gave the investigators the chain with which their mother had been strung up. A widespread campaign is being conducted by the International Labor Defense workers, white as well as black, to have the working masses of Dixie revolt against the lynching wave which recently has murdered James Levine, burned at Ocilla, Ga., and Chester Fugate, white, in Mississippi. The death chain of Mrs. Wood has been sent to New York by the local workers of the I. L. D.

Looks as if some of the boys are taking Anderson of The Macon Telegraph to ride because of his utterance on the lynching the negro at Ocilla. Tut, tut, boys, don't take that too seriously. It has been popular in Georgia in the past few years to deplore lynching and soft soap the "enlightened?" element of the north with all that kind of stuff. Anderson has no more sympathy with that stuff than he has with the moon. We have never subscribed to the idea that lambasting lynchers deterred rapists but rather think tha: it encouraged rape. When all that stuff is read in the papers the rapists has an idea that he might get away with it. There is much logic in what Anderson says in fact great logic what all of them say bu: that logic is knocked hell-western crooked when the question is put to a man "suppose it was your daughter or wife?" and then goodbye logic, patriotism, state records and everything else. Should a thing like that happen to the writer we would never call tha: neighbor friend any more that refused to help us catch the man that did the deed. Nor will any other man feel different. And as we feel so does Anderson of The Telegraph. Down in his heart he would lend aid to his neighbor on a thing like that as quick as any man. He honestly thinks that to deplore lynching is to combat mob violence. We don't. He feels that if such is not discouraged that the crime of mob violence will spread and take in other less heinous offenses. Maybe he is right, there is room for that belief based on pas: history. The murdered girl is the more dominating in Anderson's mental picture than the lynched brute. He can edit as much as he darn pleases, he is a Georgia cracker right on. He can't change his spots any more than the leopard. So why bark at him.

"Not a Lynching People"

"We are not a lynching people." The News and Courier wishes that all the people of South Carolina would read the letter of H. T. Morrison, of McClellanville, in The News and Courier last Tuesday, in which he properly resents the suggestion that a "mob" was formed in McClellanville when a negro killed a white man and fled. The men of McClellanville assisted the officers in the capture of the slayer, they had no other purpose than to help in the enforcement of law, the "community dates back to colonial days" and "its record is clean." Mr. Morrison is the intendant of the town, incorporated four years ago.

It is always a reflection on the people of a community when officers are compelled to run away from it with a criminal. When an intent to lynch is thwarted it is creditable to officers, but the stain is not taken from the community. Mr. Morrison has shown a fine and correct understanding. The News and Courier regrets that it was misinformed so that the word "mob" was used, and it has pride as well as pleasure in emphasizing that one of the historic communities of Charleston county resents the implication that its members would engage in a lynching.

Preventing Violence

Sheriff W. A. Neely, of Hardeman county, has set an example which, if generally followed, would eradicate the blot of lynching in the south. A few months ago, a negro attacked a girl near Bolivar. Outwitting two large mobs, Sheriff Neely, by automobile and train, succeeded in landing the negro in the Shelby county jail.

The trial of the negro was called for Bolivar this week. Sheriff Neely, realizing that there was danger of mob violence, asked for state troops. Under guard of the militia, the trial proceeded, the negro was convicted and sentenced to the electric chair. He had previously confessed.

The only lynching in Tennessee during 1929 could have been prevented by similar action. At the time, The News criticized the state officials for negligence. We are glad to see that they took precautionary steps at Bolivar. Sheriff Neely, for his determined efforts to preserve order and for his courage, deserves the thanks of the people of the entire state.

Letters From The People

When the thousand members of the band who lynched James Irwin took the law into their hands last Saturday they did some things unimaginable. They did some things unspeakable. They did some things unlawful and all of them unwillfully. Not a man in the crowd would have done the same thing under different circumstances.

The horror of a lynching shall remain in the hearts of every person who had any contact whatsoever with thi sthing always. To merely imagine a dead human burn at the stake is horror itself, but on the other hand—

To see that little girl in death with the half smile upon her lips. One clear eye half closed, the other stabbed out by a dull knife, her breast slit by the same dull knife, great gashes on either side of the throat and the whole of the body mutilated by brute force and brute lust, our viewpoint seems to change as to the justice that the brute deserved. That little girl who had just begun to realize that life is worth living went through more hell in the last minute of her existence than James Irwin could have gone through in twenty years of torture.

Furthermore it has been said that James Irwin could have reecived more justice but the idea mocks itself. He tried himself when he passed the little girl on the road and jumped off the wagon to go back and kill her. He tried himself and lost the case, it seems. He confessed his guilt by running twenty miles through the night with the howl of that lonely pack of hounds on his heel and he committed himself for execution when he forgot to kill himself just before they caught him. Compared to the crime he committed James Irwin spent his last two hours in paradise contrasted with the justice he deserved.

Dear Sir:

I have just read your editorial in the Star in regard to the recent lynching in Irwin county.

You have expressed my sentiment in regard to the matter and I believe that your attitude will be admired by Irwin county citizens and others outside the county.

My father moved to Irwin county about 43 years ago when I was a small boy. I have lived in the county ever since. I have had the privilege of serving as juror during several sessions of Irwin Superior Court and in that capacity as a rule I have met with a body of men who did not flinch from duty in their deliberations.

Certainly there are some people in Irwin county who are criminally inclined as there are in other Georgia counties. I believe that we can measure arms with many other Georgia counties when it comes to a matter of good citizenship, especially Fulton and Bibb counties, from which has come two scathing editorials. One from a Methodist preacher, editor of The Wesleyan Christian Advocate and the other from Mr. Anderson editor the Macon Telegraph.

No doubt some of the mob who participated in the lynching of Jim Irwin were of the lawless element.

On the other hand I believe that some of our most law-abiding citizens during the heat of passion and without due consideration in an unguarded moment took the law into their own hands.

And as you say Mr. Editor just so long as such diabolical crimes are committed, we may expect mob violence.

I am a subscriber to the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, also the Atlanta Tri-Weekly Journal. I wish to have your editorial published in those papers if you will permit. Let me hear from you. You may publish this article if you have space.

DECREASED LYNCHINGS

Tuskegee

One of the hopeful signs of the times is the report that there were only [illegible] in the United States in 1929.

Not many years ago any one of several western towns could have equalled that number and it would not have been a high figure for several other states.

The decrease in lynchings which is a sign of advancing civilization may be attributed to many causes.

Primarily, possibly there is a greater spirit of tolerance toward the negro who in many instances is improving himself by education.

The enforcement of law has extended now to practically all parts of the nation and there is no section where man may feel that he can evade the law without suffering its penalties.

Also tens of thousands of negroes have migrated to the north and these migrations usually were accentuated following a lynching.

The men who took the law in their handes found that by driving the negro in this manner out of the country they were creating a labor problem which reacted as a boomerang and hurt themselves more than anyone else.

Peace officers, also, are showing a greater determination in guarding prisoners. In the past year out of 83 attempts to take prisoners from officers only six were successful.

Moreover, there is such a nauseating reaction from such frenzied attemps to administer justice without giving a man the formal guaranties of trial that there is a growing aversion to the mob spirit and its possible tragic mistakes.

THE LYNCHINY NEAR OCILL

The sequel to the Irwin conty crime was to have been expected. A 14-year-old girl was attacked and killed, and her body thrown into a creek. The scene of the attack in a field near the girl's home bore evidence of a struggle. The girl's assailant had dragged her body over a fence and thrown it into the water.

So we are not surprised to hear that a crowd of several hundred persons took by force from the sheriff the man suspected of the crime, and put him to death. The negro is said to have confessed his crime, and the lynching was the culmination of an all-night man-hunt. The girl's jawbone had been broken and her throat slashed.

The result would probably have been the same thing if a white man had been arrested. Indeed, there have been cases recently of lynching where the victims were white. This was not a "race outbreak," as we understand it.

Of course we cannot defend the crime of lynching. It is always open to condemnation. Where people are frenzied, mistakes may be made; we do not know in the present instance that any mistake was made.

But it is wasting breath in times like this to censure an indignant people, whether their victim was white or whether he was colored. The whole thing is deplorable—tragic.

In contrast to this two white men have been found guilty of murdering two aged Oconee county negroes. They are to be sentenced to the electric chair on Monday.

We commend this action of the court. It is worthy of all praise.—The Savannah Press.

No "Informal Lynching"

Instead of giving the South all credit for reducing its lynchings, some of our Eastern critics have contended that "informal lynchings" have taken the place of mob rule; that white men kill negroes in the South without conscience and without punishment. Members of our editorial staff have made an investigation and have found that the charge is untrue.

In Tennessee, for instance, the number of whites killed by negroes exceeds the number of negroes killed by whites. Statistics for Chattanooga, Knoxville and Memphis prove this. Furthermore, while homicides among negroes are numerous, the usual case is that of a negro who has killed a negro. We believe that the South is reducing this tendency, too, by improving the living conditions for the negroes.

What some of our critics cannot believe is that the average negro and the average white person in the South are inclined to be friendly toward each other. While it is regrettably true that some states of the South have failed to punish white men for killing members of the negro race, there is no homicidal trait in the make-up of the Southerner that would permit him wilfully to slay any person, white or black.

We are glad to have been able to produce statistical evidence to disprove the charges of "informal lynching" which have been brought by the New York World, the New York Nation and others. Only one negro was killed by a white man in Chattanooga last year, and he was a burglar. No negro was killed by a white man in Knoxville. It takes all sorts of killings to make up Memphis' record of homicides, and in that city negroes were killed by whites and whites were killed by negroes. Inspector Griffin's statistics, furnished The News, show that most of the negro homicides were committed by negroes.

The South is not only solving its lynching problem, it is solving its homicide, its almost extinct peonage, convict labor and child slavery problems.

(Charleston News and Courier.)

"We are not a lynching people." The News and Courier wishes that all the people of South Carolina would read the letter of H. T. Morrison of McClellanville, in the News and Courier last Tuesday, in which he properly resents the suggestion that a "mob" was formed in McClellanville when a negro killed a white man and fled. The men of McClellanville assisted the officers in the capture of the slayer they had not other purpose than to help in the enforcement of law, the "community dates back to colonial days" and "its record is clean." Mr. Morrison is the intendant of the town, incorporated four years ago.

It is always a reflection on the people of a community when officers are compelled to run away from it with a criminal. When an intent to lynch is thwarted, it is creditable to officers, but the stain is not taken from the community. Mr. Morrison has shown a fine and correct understanding, the News and Courier regrets that it was misinformed so that the word "mob" was used, and it has pride as well as pleasure in emphasizing that one of the historic communities of Charleston county resents the implication that its members would engage in a lynching.

THOUGHTFUL AND COMMENDABLE ACT

The prompt action of the solicitor and other officers of Hertford county, North Carolina, in removing a Negro prisoner from the jail at Winton to the state prison following a murderous attack upon a respectable white woman last Saturday morning without a doubt prevented another offense more tragic and appaling even than the crime committed in its far-reaching effect upon that splendid community. One can well imagin the indignation of the populace and find excuse for their flaming anger. But no one could hav forgiven the county solicitor and the law officer including the sheriff and his deputies, had the permitted the law to be cheated by the mob. T man accused of the outrage will now be dealt wi in an orderly fashion and if found guilty, made pay the penalty of his crime after all the sa guards of the law have been thrown about h rotect him if he is innocent. At the same good name of the people of Hertford will remain unsullied and there will be no new blot upon the escutcheon of the Old North State.

There is said to be a disposition to criticise the deputy sheriff who handled the case and effected the arrest of the culprit supposed to have committed the crime. Others may for the moment fall under the ban of the hotheads who believe in summary judgment in crimes of this nature, but after the first shock is over and the people have cooled off the public in fairness and justice will accord to these faithful officers the credit due them. They stood for law and order and conformed faithfully to their oath of office regardless of consequences to them personally. It is that type of public official that helps us differentiate ordered government from the law of the jungle. Fortunate indeed is the community which has men with the courage and the will to uphold the law and the ability to grasp an emergency and rise to it unhesitatingly.

This newspaper contends that practically every successful outbreak of lynching mania can be circumvented by timely action like that taken in Winton or the pointblank refusal of officers of the law to surrender to the inflamed populace those committed to their charge in the name of the state. We had a similar demonstration of courage and fealty to the oath of office in Isle of Wight county, Virginia, a few years ago when that bailiwick was saved from a lasting disgrace by the removal of the perpetrator of a horrible crime from the scene of his deed. Time has vindicated their action just as it will vindicate that of the officials of the North Carolina county.

The south must show the country that it is master of itself and that it is able to enforce the law and to protect the humblest citizen guilty of the foulest crime from the wrath of the mob. Aside from the sacredness of human life lies the greater and more transcendant issues involving the ability of society to protect itself from its enemies within and of the state to compel respect for its laws on the part of those who would set up courts of their own to dispense justice without judge or jury.

AND STILL ANOTHER

"If Georgians can manage to hold their temper until after midnight, another year will have passed without a lynching in this state. It will have been the third. Our last manifestation of physical brutality was in the latter part of 1926. The conviction of those who engaged in that mob, plus the sentiment against lynching and the determination not to tolerate it or the cowardice of public officers who permitted it, have entirely eliminated the evil in this state.

"Nor have we had a flogging in Georgia. It is possible that in some remote back section a little group of men have taken the law into their own hands, but if so, no public report has been made of it. That also has been due to the conviction of those who participated in the last flogging in Georgia.

"Our record for the past three years is something we may be proud of. It is no easy thing to stamp out an evil that had existed for more than sixty years; an evil that, although regarded by the great majority as a relic of barbarism, was still defended by a minority as a necessity."

The above editorial comment clipped from The Macon Telegraph gives to the respectable citizen of this State something to think about.

Do you not feel a sense of pride in the fact that lynchings have not taken place in Georgia for three years and that floggings have ceased? It does not matter who you are or where you are, is it not true that you can look the world in the face with a clear conscience? Do you not feel justice and honorable conduct are just a little firmer entrenched among our people?

There is always a way to remedy undesirable things without resorting to barbarism. Georgia is not worse off because we have had no lynchings or floggings recently. She is better off and you know it.

MRS. WIGGINS NOT LYNCHED.

Attorney General Brummitt has taken exception, and rightly so, to a report from New York listing the slaying of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, textile union member, as a lynching. Mrs. Wiggins was fatally shot when a truck she was riding on was fired upon in an anti-communistic demonstration.

If Mrs. Wiggins' death was a lynching then the death of Chief Aderholt, of Gastonia, must be similarly listed, for he was fatally shot in a demonstration at union headquarters in South Gastonia.

But the association making the report apparently is favorable to union agitation and for this reason more than because of any justification, sought to list the death of Mrs. Wigggins as a lynching. The association didn't mention the death of Chief Ade.holt, yet each death was linked with labor disputes and if one is a lynching the other is a lynching.

If we are to list the death of Mrs. Wiggins among the lynchings of the year then we must likewise list all gun slayings in the United States. We must cover all outbreaks in Chicago, New York, Memphis, Marion and other cities and towns where such events occurred. It is not fair to pick out one mob demonstration such as the one which resulted in the death of Mrs. Wiggins and overlook others which were just as deadly and similar in makeup and character.

There was really no lynching contemplated in this State during the year. Our people are overcoming the desire to take the law into their own hands and where they havn't completely conquered the desire, the full force of the State has been ready to control them.

Lynching To Die Within 10 Years, Alexander Thinks

Lynching will be a lost crime by 1940—something for scientists to study and the rest of us to remember with unbelief—and you can thank, among others, radio, good roads and the gentlemen of the press.

So reasons Will W. Alexander, director of the commission on inter-racial co-operation, reviewing the commission's 10-year war with the mob.

"In 1919, when the commission was born, 83 persons were lynched," said Alexander. "This year the records show but 10, and those in only five states.

"During the decade 314 lost their lives at the hands of mobs, 298 in the first five years. The figures are startling when one finds 1,726 lynched between 1885 and 1894, our earliest records. All told, 4,377 persons have been lynched since 1885, a good sized town."

Lynching is almost galloping to extinction, Alexander declared. "Ten years from now we will be wondering how it ever happened."

"Mob slayings are chiefly a rural art these days," he explained. "Only in the most backward regions, the last to be penetrated by progress, are lynchings found. The radio is penetrating them faster than they were ever penetrated before and good roads are bringing travelers from other parts. By contact the backwoods is acquiring civilization at a swift clip."

The press has been a leading factor in the decline of mob law, the commission head said.

"It has helped us rip away the taboos that have veiled the barbarism. Once it was immodest even to mention lynching in the south. No evil thing can flourish in the light and the press has thrown the spotlight on the mob.

"No longer is the lyncher a hero. For one thing, the various women's organizations are after him. Women in every state in the south have denounced the old defense of lynching—that it was necessary to protect southern womanhood. That is not the kind of chivalry they want, they decided."

The commission has field workers in every state who, as soon as they learn of a mob in prospect, immediately inform the proper officials. In many towns groups of leading citizens operate as a sort of vigilante society against lynchers, a constant guard to warn officials, said Alexander.

"We are getting co-operation from officials, due to public opinion, that never came before, and stringent measures to protect prisoners are not uncommon. One state, North Carolina, has not had a lynching in five years."

"Sheriffs who protect their prisoners with unusual violence are awarded a medal by the commission, which is presented by the governor or a leading citizen.

"Rising educational standards have played more than a minor role in the struggle for law and order, Alexander said.

"What is happening, I think, is that the two races in the south are learning to live together," he said.

NO HARM DONE CLASSING KILLING AS LYNCHING.

Time and other agencies which keep account of the lynchings in the United States reported that North Carolina had a lynching in 1929. The state, more or less officially, protested. It had no lynching, and has a clear record for some years, the publicists were advised. Back came the notification that the killing of Ella May Wiggins was listed as a lynching.

What else should it be called? An accidental death? The fatality was due to a mobbing of the party in which the woman was a member. True, she was not the particular object of attack, but merely one of a number. The mob probably didn't know her as an individual and was not bent upon hanging her or burning her at the stake. It wasn't that kind of a lynching, but it was a lynching by the standard definition of the term.

The state is not degraded by the listing. The killing of the woman was an ugly incident that is not made uglier by calling it a lynching.

WIGGINS WAS NOT LYNCHED

Association Report Untrue.—Nearest Thing to Lynching However.

Raleigh, Jan. 1.—Under no interpretation that can be placed upon the term can it be established that there has been a lynching in North Carolina during the year 1929, or, in fact, since 1921, according to Attorney General D. G. Brummitt, the report of the Association for the Advancement of the Colored Race to the contrary, nothwithstanding.

Time, New York magazine, published a statement on December 2 which contained the information that there had been a lynching in this state in 1929. Mr. Brummitt wrote a correction to the statement which that magazine published two or three weeks later, giving the report of the Association for the Advancement of the Colored Race as its authority.

The alleged lynching it developed, was the death of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, shot while in a truckload of people headed for a communistic meeting in Gaston County, supposedly by an anti-communistic group of people. This killing cannot be termed a lynching, Mr. Brummit contends, any more than the shooting of Chief of Police Aderholt, of Gastonia, or the killing of seven gang men in Chicago by another gang.

Black's Law Dictionary, page 737, he points out, defines lynching or lynch law, as follows: "A term descriptive of the action of unofficial persons, organized bands, or mobs, who seize persons charged with or suspected of crimes, or take them out of the custody of the law, and inflict summary punishment upon them, without legal trial, and without the warrant of authority of law."

A. R. Newsome, secretary of the N. C. Historical Commission wrote Dr. R. R. Morton, president of Tuskegee ~~Institute~~ and the letter was answered by Milton N. Work, director of the Negro Year Book. Dr. Work wrote: "Our records show that there has been no lynching in North Carolina since 1921. We have no record of any lynching in North Carolina during the year 1929."

Assistant Attorney General Frank Nash recalls that the body of a negro was found in a river in or near Mecklenburg County, but there is no evidence of lynching in that case, which has not been cleared up. It may have been straight murder or even suicide or accidental death. That, Mr. Nash said, is probably the nearest thing to a lynching in the State.

SOUTH CAROLINA SHOULD BE PROUD OF THIS RECORD

That there were no lynchings in South Carolina in 1929 should give every true lover of the State pride. Of course, this is no more than it should be, but the fact that a year passed without mob rule making its threat against organized Government should make every citizen do his utmost to see that such a record is continued through this and coming years. But if this calamity does come to the State, it is the duty of every citizen to bring to justice those who would not only thus attack the individual but the Commonwealth. The fact that each year finds a decrease in lynchings in the United States as shown by the following figures furnished each year by Dr. Moton, President of Tuskegee Institute, is a most hopeful sign:

Ten persons, seven Negro and three were lynched in the United States in 1929, according to a report made public today by Dr. Robert R. Moton, Negro educator and principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial institute.

This was one fewer than in 1928, six fewer than in 1927, nine fewer than in 1926, seven fewer than in 1925. Lynching by states in 1929 was reported as follows: Florida, four; Kentucky, one; Mississippi, one; Tennessee, one; Texas, three.

Offenses charged against the lynched persons were reported as follows: Criminal attack, three; writing insulting notes, two; murder, one; wounding man in altercation, one; wounding officers of law, two; charge not reported, one. Six of the persons lynched were taken from the hands of the law, five from jail and one outside jail.

Doctor Moton also reported that there were 27 instances during the year in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Three of these were in Northern states and 24 in Southern states. In 24 of the cases, the prisoners were removed, or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In three other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers.

A TYPICAL LYNCHING

The particularly brutal lynching at Jackson, Ky., of Chester Fugate, a Breathitt county tenant farmer, is new evidence to support the theory that lynching is not an effort of angry men to correct the errors of justice but simply a sadistic outdoor sport.

Fugate is said to have killed his landlord after a dispute over payment for some labor. He had been arrested and was in jail with every reasonable prospect of being tried and punished. The mob, however, broke into the jail, seized Fugate, shot him in various places and threw him down an embankment into a ditch, where he was found in a dying condition. The mob, in other words, decided that there had not been a lynching for some time and there was a helpless man who would make as good a victim for its bestial lust as any other.

One could perhaps grasp the point of this lynch mob if its victim had been accused of the unspeakable crime which arouses men to unreasoning rage, or if officials had neglected their duty to arrest him or a court had acquired him in spite of conclusive evidence. But none of these excuses exists. Fugate is charged with an ordinary murder following a dispute about money, a murder involving neither southern womanhood nor the failure of the processes of justice.

The frightful attack upon this man strips the lynch mob bare and reveals it as nothing but a body of lowgrade morons who delight in cruelty and torture—the replica, in short, of almost every lynch mob in a disgraceful history of violence.—From the Baltimore Sun.

THE LYNCHING NEAR OCILLA

The sequal to the Irwin county crime was to have been expected. A 14-year-old girl was attacked and killed, and her body thrown into a creek. The scene of the attack in a field near the girl's home bore evidences of a struggle. The girl's assailant had dragged her body over a fence and thrown it into the water.

So we are not surprised to hear that a crowd of several hundred persons took by force from the sheriff the man suspected of the crime, and put him to death. The negro is said to have confessed his crime, and the lynching was the culmination of an all-night man-hunt. The girl's jawbone had been broken and her throat slashed.

The result would probably have been the same thing if a white man had been arrested. Indeed, there have been cases recently of lynching where the victims were white. This was not a "race outbreak," as we understand it.

Of course we cannot defend the crime of lynching. It is always open to condemnation. Where people are frenzied, mistakes may be made; we do not know in the present instance that any mistake was made.

But it is wasting breath in times like this to censure an indignant people, whether their victim was white or whether he was colored. The whole thing is deplorable—tragic.

In contrast to this two white men have been found guilty of murdering two aged Oconee county negroes. They are to sentenced to the electric chair on Monday.

We commend this action of the court. It is worthy of all praise.—The Savannah Press.

Another Lynching In Georgia

The deplorable affair last week near Ocilla, which terminated in the lynching of a negro, is another blot on the good name of our state. This is the first one since 1926 but when such crimes are committed, as the one that led to this lynching, it is hardly worth while to expect other consequences. Our northern brethren of the press will have something now to howl over, but we dare say that if the same crime had been committed in any northern or eastern state, even in staid old Massachusetts, the result would hardly have been different.

Investigations have been ordered by the governor, but what will be done is only conjecture.

LYNCHINGS

Official neglect and local religious indifference are charged with the major responsibility for the continuance of lynchings in America, in the opinion of the national commission on interracial cooperation. The commission holds that preachers and officers of the law can end lynchings whenever they determine to do so, and in the meantime cannot escape definite responsibility.

The recent upsurge of mob violence, claiming five victims in the south in as many weeks, is immeasurably depressing to lovers of justice and to patriotic Americans jealous of their country's good name.

Upon the officers of the law and the ministers and other moral leaders in the community rests the ultimate responsibility for the lynching habit. This placing of the responsibility on the moral leaders is, in a way, unfair, for they long have held that respect for law is a major consideration, but the responsibility continues to rest with them so long as a people continue to slip back occasionally to the jungle law. Newspapers are far from immune in this placing of responsibility and it is quite probable that they rightfully can be called leaders in the attempt to turn citizens from the primitive and beastly methods of mob rule.

The sad fact that most lynchings in this day of burned jails could have been prevented had officers of the law not surrendered to the mob confronts us as the latest lynchings are studied.

At Sherman, Tex., the sheriff, the police, the famous Texas rangers and finally the National Guard were all on the scene, and all failed to make any effective resistance. During the final hours of the mob's work, while it blasted its way into the court house vault and burned the victim's body in the street, there seems to have been no very laudable attempt to oppose the fury of misdirected m members.

At Wahalla, S. C., threatening mobs ga ered on two nights preceding the lynchi yet no effort was made to remove the priso or to provide adequate protection for the j

At Chickasha, bringing the shame nea home, very grave charges are being made t officers of the law again failed to do all th might have been done to scatter a riotous mo composed of youths, bent on taking the la into their own hands. These charges should be sounded out.

It is gratifying to note that lynchings have declined from eighty-three in 1919 to ten in 1929, but any lynchings are too many. There is an apparent growing vigilance manifested by officers, a unanimity with which the press bitterly condemns mob violence and religious bodies are staunch in their pleadings. These agencies should be stirred to greater action. Mob violence must be put down—if not by educational means, then by the sterner measures available to the officers of the law.

BROTHERS UNDER THE SKIN

Declaring that the lynching of a negro prisoner, charged with assault of a white woman, at Sherman, Texas, was "a crime of murder, anarchy and treason," the Macon Telegraph has wisely expressed the views of many leading jurists and authorities throughout this country. There can only be one thing added, and that is that the Texas mob also entertained the thoughts of teaching other negroes the penalty of such a crime, but the lesson was costly.

The Telegraph says:

> What lynching really amounts to, in its relation to the established order and to our constitutionalized processes, was well illustrated by the mob in Sherman, Texas, that was determined to do a negro to death because he had assaulted a white woman.
>
> The Negro had already been caught; had already pleaded guilty to the crime; had already been sentenced to death and in a few days would have been killed by the state in its electric chair at Austin. But mere death, even though it be horrible, death that leaps through the body on the wings of searing voltage, was not enough for this mob. It was bent also upon inflicting torture.
>
> The officers of the state, acting in accordance with their oath, endeavored to prevent the mob from taking the Negro. They believed also that he should die, but that he should die according to law. That is a point the lynching mind does not comprehend. It holds those who decry lynchings to be endeavoring to save the lives of the brutes who commit crimes for which men lynch. That is not true at all. Death is death and the ultimate punishment. The lyncher does not hold that. His distorted mind somehow conceives killings by illegal methods to be more deadly than killing by law.
>
> These lynchers in Sherman were so determined upon killing their victim with their own hands that they were willing to burn the court house, which, after all, is the symbol of their liberties, because it is an institution that grew out of the freedom of their ancestors won from blood. The courts are the core of our system of government.
>
> Had an American court house been attacked by a mob of Bolshevists, a great tremor of horror would have gone through the country. Had an American court house been burned to the ground by Communists, a million orators would have sprung to eloquence over night. Yet, these people in Sherman Texas, who participated in the lynching of the Negro, burned the court house, attacked their peace officers, destroyed the property of fellow citizens, declared open revolt against government. They are brothers under the skin to the men who overthrew the government of Russia. Their crime was not only the crime of murder, but also of anarchy and of treason.
>
> Lynching is always that and nothing less.

THE DANGER OF LYNCHING

On the night of May 3 a young white woman, Miss Elizabeth Powell, of Battleboro, was attacked and her male companion, Frank Crickmore, wounded in the throat with a shotgun said to have been in the hands of negroes. Owing to the severe wounds of the man he was not questioned closely, but the young lady told officers that two negroes committed the assault upon herself and wounded her companion. The surrounding territory was combed by posses of men for several days and had two negroes been found who could not have given satisfactory details of their movements on the night the crimes were committed, they would have undoubtedly been lynched by infuriated citizens.

Early yesterday officers of Edgecombe county arrested Walter E. Brantley, young white man, as the alleged assailant of Crickmore. It was intimated that other arrests would follow.

Surely the arrest of Brantley was not made without sufficient evidence to connect him in some manner with the horrible crimes. His arrest, however, right or wrong, does not dispel the horrible thought of the mistake that might have been made. The law is sometimes slow—but it is best at all times.

CLIPPED EDITORIALS

Mob Law and Jury Systems.

Judd Mortimer Lewis in Houston Post-Dispatch:

"Mob law is sometimes necessary in South Caroline," says the caption of an editorial in the Greer (S. C.) Tribune, and the editorial goes on to say: "It's nice to say 'let the law take its course,' and we believe in orderly justice, provided justice is ever meted, but these newspapers and every other citizen of South Carolina know that the majority of criminals come up to the bar of justice and through some hocus pocus, loophole, technicality, bond delivery or whatnot, gets away or else is given a term of years and later pardoned by political manipulation with the governor and becomes a repeater."

We do not agree with the headline. In Texas we have had death sentences commuted to life imprisonment when the criminal richly deserved to go to the chair. We have a case before the courts now where a man was sentenced to death for murder, his sentence was commuted, he escaped and took the life of an officer of the law, was resentenced to death, was found to have become insane, was found to be sane, was tried for sanity, the jury disagreed, and now the law doesn't seem to know what to do with him.

A young man was convicted of criminal assault in Palestine and drew a suspended sentence of five years, one has just been convicted in Houston of criminal assault and given a five-year suspended sentence. One would think the culprit would at least be ordered to remain at home nights for a week or 10 days. A man has just recently been convicted in a Texas court of having brutally hacked a young woman to death, and he is sentenced to three years in the penitentiary; out of two juries which tried him 17 thought he should have been executed, three thought he should have a life sentence, three thought he should be imprisoned for three years and one thought he should be acquitted. The tail wagged the dog and those who favored the three years won, and the state and decency lost.

Our jury trials seem to be a farce. If we can not so remodel our rules of court procedure as to enable our courts to approximate the efficiency of English courts, we should like to see them changed so that the findings of a majority of the jurors sitting on a case would be mandatory on the balance of the jury. Under no circumstances should a mob administer punishment for infraction of the law. Under no circumstances should a mob attempt to minister justice until the courts have had an opportunity to do so and failed. A mob is blind unreasoning passion running riot. The mob does not always get the real culprit. No mob has ever lynched a juror so far as we know. The abuses of justice under which all states as well as South Carolina suffer

by mobs.

Why Lynching Continues

IN FOUR weeks mobs in Southern states lynched four Negroes charged with serious crime. Saturday another mob at Chicaksha, Okla., ineffectually opposed by militia and a detachment of troops from Fort Sill, fatally wounded another victim after setting fire to the jail in which he was held for trial.

In a statement issued just before the Oklahoma lynching, the Commission on Inter-racial Co-operation bluntly declared that official neglect and local religious indifference are responsible for the continuance of these lawless killings.

The whole statement appears below, as a warning and a plea all the more timely because the affair at Chickasha bears so much resemblance to the others cited in the law's strange impotency in dealing with the mob. After making its own investigations of the first four of these lynchings the Inter-racial Commission spoke as follows from its Atlanta headquarters:

> The recent upsurge of mob violence, claiming four victims in the South in as many weeks, is immeasurably depressing to lovers of justice and to patriotic Americans jealous of their country's good name. Upon two groups, we are convinced,—upon the officers of the law, and the ministers and other moral leaders in the community,—rests the ultimate responsibility for the lynching habit.
>
> Practically every lynching means that some officer has neglected his duty or surrendered to the mob. Reasonable vigilance would have prevented most of them. The two latest lynchings illustrate this fact. At Walhalla, S. C., threatening mobs gathered on two nights preceding the lynching, yet no effort was made to remove the prisoner or to provide adequate protection for the jail.
>
> At Sherman, Texas, the sheriff, the police, the famous Texas rangers, and finally the National Guard were all on the scene, and all failed to make any effective resistance. During the final hours of the mob's work, while it blasted its way into the Courthouse vault and burned the victim's body in the street, the mob seems to have been wholly unopposed. These cases are typical of most.
>
> The responsibility of our religious leaders is equally obvious. Few will doubt that the preachers of the South, if they would, could build a Christian sentiment that would no longer tolerate lynchings. Yet, for the most part, they have nothing whatever to say about it. The occasional exceptions are notable. Meantime our American lynchings probably do more than anything else to discredit Christianity at home and abroad. We submit that so long as lynchings continue, no preacher can escape a share of the responsibility unless he has delivered his soul in an honest effort to make such things impossible.
>
> Colored preachers, in turn, should do their utmost to encourage their people in good citizenship and in co-operation for the maintenance of law and order. Neither the crime of the victim nor that of the mob may be condoned. Each should be fitly punished, but lawfully and after due process.
> It is gratifying to note that lynchings have declined rapidly in the past eleven years, from 83 in 1919 to ten in 1929, a decrease due to an awakened official and public conscience. We commend heartily the growing vigilance manifested by officers of the law, the unanimity with which the press condemns mob violence, and the opposition to it voiced by the great religious bodies. The horrors of the last few weeks should stir these agencies, the ministers, and all straight-thinking citizens to continue and intensify the fight to rid America of this cancer of savagery and anarchy.

It can hardly be amiss to add this reflection to what the commission has to say about the work of the ministers: let the nation have for the space of a few years one-half the ministerial zeal directed against lynching that is now devoted to Prohibition, and lynching will virtually disappear.

Texas Condemns Lynching

IN much of the comment by newspapers and individuals in other States on the recent outbreak of savagery in Sherman, it is inferred, if not actually stated, that Texas newspapers condoned the affair, and that popular sympathy in the State was with the mob. Nothing could be further from the truth, and it is both unfair and unfortunate that outsiders should be badly misinformed. The leading newspapers of Texas almost without exception promptly condemned the outbreak as an inexcusable and damnable piece of anarchy, and called for the punishment of every man implicated in the crime of burning the court house and killing the prisoner. No newspaper in any other State has been more vigorous in denouncing the affair than have the Texas papers. The Post-Dispatch promptly added its voice in condemnation of the act, following its time-honored policy of opposing mob violence and of demanding that lynchers be brought to the bar of justice. The great mass of Texas' citizenry deplores the Sherman trouble as much as do the people of any State, and it is a great mistake to suppose that any considerable number of Texans indorse such conduct. The processes of the law have been set in motion to mete out justice to a number of the alleged members of the mob now in custody, and all responsible Texans are hoping that every one of the prisoners who is proved guilty will be punished to the last limit of the

Lynching---Why

By Dr. Thornwell Jacobs,
President Oglethorpe University

Attention is called to the fact that over 4,000 persons have been lynched in America since 1885, or nearly 100 per year, and that the State of Georgia has the "honor" of occupying the top place on the lynching row, having lynched 24 white persons and 433 negroes between the years 1889 and 1927.

That America is the most murderous and the most lawless of all civilized countries we know by statistics, but that it is going to take a revolution in our habits of thought to change the situation, very few people stop to consider.

Unfortunately, we blame the symptoms rather than the disease, and, while we continue to do so we are not likely to get anywhere in curing our patient.

What we need is a thorough diagnosis of the situation and a therapy that will reach the seat of the trouble. And 'the seat of the trouble is this—that America wants to be lawless.

Lord Hewart, Chief Justice of Great Britain, reminds us that "law can enforce successfully only that which the community has agreed in thinking right."

The community has not yet agreed in thinking lynching of certain types of criminals to be wrong.

I doubt very much whether anyone would care to say that lynching, under every conceivable situation, is inevitably wrong.

The telegram said:

"We, a group of white women drawn from religious, educational and political groups assembled at Atlanta to consider shocking resurgence mob violence during current year appeal to you as chief executive your state. Decrease in lynching noted during past ten years largely due to aggressive and determined attitude of governors, sheriffs of southern states. During this year notable examples courageous and prompt action on part of governors preventing lynchings encourages belief every governor has power and influence largely to erase this crime from record of his state. We pledge ourselves support governors, sheriffs, judges upon whom responsibility rests."

The message was sent to governors of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Arkansas and Indiana.

After calling attention to "the very regrettable reversion to the awful crime of lynching" the resolutions state "we go on record as condemning the crime of lynching and respectfully but insistently call upon the legal authorities of the state and nation to use every lawful means at their disposal to protect prisoners in their custody."

The resolutions express "our very deep gratitude" to the city of Macon and to the editor of the Macon Telegraph "for the strong stand they have taken for law enforcement."

Good For Thomas

Since we were so strongly critical of Thomas County because of her recent lynching, we desire now to do her the justice of pointing out wherein she has enforced the law with commendable vigor.

Two white men, Henry Price and C. V. Moore, were charged with having assaulted a Negro woman. The testimony, in brief, was that they went to her house, knocked down the doors and entered. She ran out. They caught her and assaulted her in a field between her home and the home of Lacy Mitchell, a Negro to whom she was running for help. Mitchell came up as the young men made off. A small crowd gathered about the young Negress and as she was telling her story, the two men who had assaulted her walked up casually and asked what was the matter. She identified them with such satisfaction that they were convicted, although, Mitchell, her star witness, had been murdered in the meantime. The judge sentenced them to a year in the penitentiary.

It could be pointed out, of course, that there ought not to be any color line in justice; that assault, under the law, is a felony and is as grave a crime when a white man commits it as when a Negro commits it. They have the same black hearts, the same bestial desires. Their offense against the law is equally great. Only the color of their skin is different. A white felon ought to be given the same punishment as a Negro felon. But the difference in sentence is not the important factor in this case. The important thing is that there was any conviction at all. Whether it is full justice or not to give white men a misdemeanor sentence for which a Negro felon would receive death, or a lynching, it is at least a measure of justice that white men could be convicted on such a charge where a Negro was concerned.

Up To Georgia's Governor

Nearly two months after George Grant was killed in Darien, Ga., in circumstances which originally were described as a lynching, the Solicitor General of the Atlanta Superior Circuit Court has informed Governor Hardman that Grant was not lynched, as the term is ordinarily understood, but was murdered in his cell by two or three men who got in there despite the local authorities and National Guard troops who—theoretically, at least—were guarding the jail. The Solicitor General thinks that the loss of Grant's life is due to divided responsibility between civil and military authorities. In the mass of charges and countercharges which have kept this curious case alive enough has been said to cut the edge off the Solicitor General's announcement. But his findings gain importance because they are official and because he will report them to a grand jury.

So far, so good. But the choice item in the Atlanta report is yet to come. The Solicitor General represents the civil authorities. The Adjutant General represents the military authorities. In the circumstances, with the civil authorities charging divided responsibility and hinting broadly that the soldiers did not come out of the incident with flying colors, the military authorities would naturally bridle up. The Adjutant General has done so to the extent of remarking that if anybody wants to know who killed this prisoner, he can give the proper information. "Two or three people have come to Atlanta recently," he reveals, "and have told me who killed the Negro in the jail. If the Solicitor General will call on us we will be able to help him. . . . If he wants to know he can easily find out."

How long the Adjutant General has been going around with this information in his head oblivious to the fact that, assuming he is telling the truth, it is exceedingly valuable information, does not appear in the dispatches. One would think that such an official, possessing, as he says, precise knowledge as to who murdered a citizen of Georgia, would have given it to the proper authorities without further ado. But obviously anyone who thinks so would be badly mistaken. The quarrel between civil and military authorities must be settled before the State can do anything.

If Governor Hardman is the kind of executive a State has a right to expect, he will take this situation in hand. He is both the chief executive officer of Georgia and the commander of the National Guard. Three weeks ago the sheriff at Darien answered his inquisitors with the statement that "I don't know who killed and I don't care." Apparently plenty of know who killed Grant and some of are willing to talk about it. Does anybody

GEORGIA DOES 10 PER CENT OF LYNCHING

However shameful it appears to law-abiding Georgians, it is a startling fact that Georgia has the top place on the lynching row, having lynched 24 white persons and 433 negroes between the years 1889 and 1927. This number totals more than ten per cent of the 4,000 persons lynched in America since 1885.

These figures no doubt include the lynchings for the past three years. The year 1930 has seen more deaths from mob rule than any other similar length of time in many years.

It is said that America is the most lawless and murderous of all civilized countries, but we hate to admit our own state, the Empire State of the South, holds the unenviable position of leading in lynchings.

The presiding elders are Revs. J. H. Brittain and J. H. Britt that made their reports today. Despite conditions, it was found that reports were an increase over that of last year. Some of the pastors reporting today were Revs. C. W. Crawford, Chattanooga; J. G. Hollis, Nashville; J. T. Bass and P. J. Coleman, Nashville, and J. H. Davis, St. Luke.

Among the general officers addressing the conference were Doctors H. P. Porter, Jackson; T. H. Copeland, Hopkinsville, Ky., and J. A. Martin, editor Sunday school periodicals, Atlanta. The Rev. Luther Stewart, Hopkinsville, Ky., preached tonight.

Under the leadership of Bishop Hamlett, the conference went upon record condemning lynching.

The conference runs through Sunday.

Doctors G. D. Kendrick and J. W. King, physicians of Nashville, addressed the conference at the evening session. Dinners are being served at the church.

Women Denounce Lynching

We never did suspect that ~~Southern women~~ as a rule felt that they were being "defended" by mob rule and lynching, in spite of the fact that pictures and stories of lynching scenes have reported a number of women in the crowd encouraging the men. The real Southern woman, we are sure, could never reconcile brutality and lawlessness with a defense of her honor. Now representatives of women's organizations of the South have put themselves on record as repudiating lynch law and refusing to allow mobs to excuse their actions on the grounds of "defending Southern womanhood." These women, meeting in Atlanta, opposed lynching in "every form and under all circumstances" and declared that "We are profoundly convinced that lynching is not a defense of womanhood or of anything else, but rather a menace to private and public safety and a deadly blow at our most sacred institutions." The intelligent woman can see that sane and regular law enforcement and respect for the law as such means more to her defense than any cowardly group of men bent on taking things into their own hands could ever mean. This open stand on the part of Southern women illustrates the growing conviction in the South that lynching is a barborous throw-back, a dangerous thing to tolerate and a practice which has no sanction in law or morals.

Women On Lynching

A group of Georgia women meeting in Atlanta has just issued a denunciation of lynching. That strikes us as being a much more profitable business than trying to force exaggerated figures on a census bureau. For, of the 23 lynchings recorded this year, eight took place in Georgia. The height of this unsavory eminence can be realized when one learns that the next competitor is Texas, with four lynchings.

Since the main defense of mob law is the protection of womanhood, there is a special force in this disavowal from women who know that the lyncher is in very truth the most vicious debaucher of the spiritual values of our life. Even a stagnant public opinion must respond to such a challenge from such a source. Georgians will, under the circumstances, have to stir themselves out of the moral lethargy afflicting them.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

NOV 21 1930

Women Hit Lynching.

If we are ever to remove the stigma of mob law from our section and our nation it must come as the result of aroused public sentiment. We are not going to make very much headway in our campaign against this barbarous custom until we have successfully appealed to the consciences and reason of the people. Every agency that is intelligently endeavoring to educate and arouse public sentiment is making a contribution to ultimate victory.

One of the most notable statements on the subject has recently been issued from Atlanta where a group of twenty-one women prominent in the religious, educational and social life of the South, struck a smashing blow at lawlessness and expressly repudiated the mob's ever ready excuse that lynching is "a defense of womanhood."

Charging that lynching "represents the most complete breakdown of government and the triumph of anarchy" the resolutions closed with these vigorous statements:

"We would call attention to the fact that lynching is not alone the crime of ignorant and irresponsible mobs, but that every citizen who condones it, even by his silence, must accept a share of its guilt. We therefore call upon our public officials to use every power at their disposal to protect from mob anarchy the laws they are sworn to defend; upon our religious leaders to cry aloud against the crime until it ceases to exist; upon parents and teachers to train up a generation incapable of such relapses into barbarism, and upon all right thinking men and women to do their utmost in every way for the complete eradication of this crime."

If this program is followed the results are bound to be gratifying. The difficulty of convicting members of mobs is well known. It was recently demonstrated in Texas where the state found it impossible to obtain a jury for the trial for members of a lynching party because of public sympathy for the mob.

Only through an enlightened and aroused public sentiment will we ever be able to wipe this stain of mob anarchy from the escutcheon of the South. Public sentiment is too powerful a factor in popular government to ignore its influence even in the halls of justice. There is sure to be a salutary change in the sentiment of our people on this question, resulting from such utterances as we have quoted herein.

THE SHERMAN LYNCHING CASES

When the cases of the alleged members of the Sherman mob were called for trial at Dallas this week, examination of talesmen revealed such a degree of sympathy for the accused, and such an unwillingness to convict them, that the trial judge changed the venue of the cases to Travis county. That means another delay. It is very doubtful whether it brings the proceedings any nearer to a satisfactory conclusion, from the state's standpoint, for no one can say that public sentiment in Travis county, or any other Texas county, differs very much from that manifested in Dallas county.

Those who feel that Grayson county's ugly challenge to law and order should not go unanswered by the state can derive some satisfaction from the fact that some of the accused have been in jail ever since a few days after the lynching and that they must remain in jail while the case is shunted from one county to another. If they are actually guilty of participation in the affair, their prolonged stay in jail is a partial measure of punishment. Perhaps it is as good a way as any to deal with the cases, to have one postponement after another. There are, of course, grave objections to that procedure. For one thing, it does not discommode those of the accused who could make bond. For another, it is quite unjust to those who were wrongly accused. But if there are any guilty ones among those in jail, they are probably in a state of mind where they will think twice before joining another mob.

The short session of congress is going to witness a determined effort to pass the Dyer anti-lynching law, which virtually turns prosecution of lynching cases over to the federal government. Sentiment for such a law is increased by the failure of Texas to administer punishment in the Grayson case, one of the most disgraceful in all the ugly history of lynch law.

Texas, incidentally, isn't the only state where it is difficult to bring lynchers to justice. At Marion, Indiana, where two negroes were lynched last August, the grand jury not only failed to indict but commended the sheriff and his deputies for refusing to fire on the mob.

NEW YORK, May 9.—(ANP)—In its eighth annual Honor roll of states free of lynching, the Commission on Race Relations of the Federal Council of Churches shows that forty-three states had a clean record in 1929. While this number shows no increase over 1928, when 43 states were similarly recorded as free of the lynching evil, it shows a decided increase in comparison with the second year of the keeping of the honor roll, 1923, when only 39 states were free.

The states free of lynching over a period of years, as reported by the Federal Council's Commission on Race Relations, are as follows: States that have NEVER had a record of a lynching: Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont; states that have no record of lynching since 1886, Maine and New Jersey; states having no record of lynchings for the past twenty-five years: Michigan, Nevada, Indiana and Iowa; states that have no record of a lynching for the past fifteen years: Idaho, Maryland, Pennsylvania and South Dakota; states that have no record of lynchings for the past ten years: Arizona, New York, North Dakota, Montana, Oregon and Wyoming; states that have no record of a lynching during the past five years: California, Colorado, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, Washington, West Virginia, Oklahoma, N. Carolina, Illinois; states that have no record of a lynching during the past two years: Alabama, Ohio, Utah, Georgia, South Carolina, and Virginia; states that have no record of lynching in 1928: Arkansas, New Mexico, Louisiana and Missouri; total states free of lynching in 1928, 43; total states still having lynching in 1929, 5; total number of lynchings in 1929, 10; decrease over 1928 in number of lynchings in 1929, 1.

LYNCHINGS ON DECREASE

NEW YORK, April 27.—(AP)—A clean record for 43 states was shown in the eighth annual roll of states free from lynchings made public today by the commission on race relations of the Federal Council of Churches. There were ten lynchings last year as against 11 the year before.

Mob executions last year were listed as follows: Florida, four: Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi, one each, and Texas three. Seven of the victims were negroes and three were white.

Only five states — Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont — have never had a record of a lynching.

Ten Lynchings Last Year

Church Council Reports Seven Victims Were Negroes

Seven Negroes and three white persons were lynched last year in five states of the Union, it was reported yesterday by the Federal Council of Churches commission on race relations. Four of the lynchings were in Florida, three in Texas and one each in Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi. There were eleven lynchings in 1928.

According to the 1929 records of Dr. Monroe N. Work, of Tuskegee Institute, officers of [redacted] lynchings last year, three in the North. In twenty-four cases the prisoner was removed or guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the other three, armed force was used to repel the lynching party.

Church Council Reports Lynchings During 1929

Ten lynchings occurred in five States in 1929, seven of them white and three colored victims, according to figures made public yesterday by the Commission on Race Relations of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. Four of the lynchings occurred in Florida, three in Texas and one each in Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi.

Besides the actual lynchings there were 27 cases reported in which, according to Dr. Monroe N. Work, of Tuskeekee Institute, "officers of the law prevented lynchings."

In four States in which lynchings occurred in 1928 there were none reported last year. They were Louisiana, Missouri, Arkansas and New Mexico.

NO LYNCHINGS REPORTED IN FORTY-THREE STATES

NEW YORK, April 27 (AP).—A clean record for forty-three states was shown in the eighth annual honor roll of states free from lynching, made public today by the commission on race relations of the Federal Council of Churches. There were ten lynchings last year, as against eleven the year before.

Mob executions last year were listed as follows: Florida, four; Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi, one each, and Texas, three. Seven of the victims were Negroes and three were white.

The honor roll showed only five states—Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Vermont—that have never had a record of a lynching.

LYNCHINGS IN 1929

In its eighth annual honor roll of states free of lynching, the commission on race relations of the Federal Council of Churches shows that forty-three states had a clean record in 1929. While this number shows no increase over 1928, when forty-three states were similarly recorded as free of the lynching evil, it shows a decided increase in comparison with the second year of the keeping of the honor roll, 1923, when only thirty-nine states were free.

The honor roll shows a total of ten lynchings during 1929. New Mexico, which dropped from the roll in 1928, has been restored, and Florida, Kentucky and Tennessee have been removed because of lynchings in 1929. The number of lynchings for 1929 shows a reduction of one since 1928, when there were eleven victims. Of the ten persons lynched in 1929, four were in Florida, one each in Kentucky and Tennessee, one in Mississippi and three in Texas. Three of the victims were white and seven Negro.

According to the 1929 records of Dr. Monroe N. Work of Tuskegee Institute, there were twenty-seven instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, three in northern states and twenty-four in southern states. In twenty-four of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In three other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers.

"So long as the evil of lynching is still within our borders", said Dr. George E. Haynes, the federal council's secretary for race relations, "there is need for ever-increasing vigilance on the part of the religious forces of this land in order that respect for law and order may be preserved and protection of life guaranteed to every citizen".

The state free of lynching over a period of years, as reported by the federal council's commission on race relations, are as follows:

States that have never had a record of a lynching: Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont.

States that have no record of lynching since 1886: Main and New Jersey.

States that have no record of lynching for the past twenty-five years: Delaware and Wisconsin.

States that have no record of a lynching for the past twenty years: Michigan, Nevada, Indiana and Iowa.

States that have no record of lynching for the past ten years: Arizona, New York, North Dakota, Montana, Oregon and Wyoming.

States that have no record of a lynching during the last five years: California, Colorado, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, Washington, West Virginia, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Illinois.

States that have no record of a lynching during the last two years: Alabama, Ohio, Utah, Georgia, South Carolina and Virginia.

States that have no record of a lynching in 1929: Arkansas, New Mexico, Louisiana and Missouri.

Total states free of lynching in 1928: Forty-three.

Total states still having lynching in 1929: Five.

Total number of lynchings in 1929: Ten.

Decrease (over 1928) in number of lynchings in 1929: One.

Negro Attacks White Woman

Martin Maryland Placed In Kilby Prison

Advertiser

Montgomery Ala.

Martin Maryland, 24-year-old negro, arrested by City Detectives A. A. Enzor and W. A. Davis at 10:30 last night, was positively identified by J. H. Hanna, 21 North Decatur Street, as the man who attacked a young white woman in the first block of North Decatur Street an hour earlier, the officers said. The negro is said to have dragged the woman behind the Scottish Rite Temple, inflicting severe bruises and lacerations.

J. H. Hanna, who heard the woman's screams, rushed from his house as the negro fled toward Dexter Avenue. Closely pursued by Hanna, the negro ran south on Decatur to Washington, turned east and was lost in the capitol grounds. Hanna told police that he had seen the negro in the vicinity only five minutes before the alleged assault, and that he had seen him several times in the neighborhood.

According to the woman, she was walking up Dexter Avenue and just had turned into the first block of North Decatur when she saw a man loitering in the shadows near the building. Another woman was walking a few feet ahead of the man, who made motions as if he were going to assault the first woman, she said. As she approached the man, whom she described as a tall negro, he suddenly reached out and grasped her roughly, dragging her into the darkness behind the building, the victim told police.

Persons on a porch across the street said that approximately two minutes elapsed from the time the woman screamed until the negro came running out from behind the building. A physician was hastily summoned who administered to the woman.

Motorcycle Officers Deese and Mainor were the first to arrive from police headquarters, followed by Chief of Detectives Paul Rappoport and Capts. Troy Murrell and Ralph King. All police officers were ordered to pick up any negroes corresponding to the description furnished by the victim.

Shortly afterward Detectives Davis and Enzor were patrolling the vicinity near Smythe and Clopton Streets, four blocks from the alleged attack, when they picked up Maryland. Mr. Hanna was summoned and he immediately identified him as the negro.

After being docketed at headquarters, Maryland was placed in the County Jail and later removed to Kilby Prison for safekeeping.

The victim of the attack is 25 years [illegible] married, it was reported.

Special Grand Jury To Convene Today

A special session of the Montgomery County Grand Jury was ordered by Judge Leon McCord to convene this morning at 9:30 to investigate an attack by a negro, Martin Maryland, 24, upon a young white woman Sunday night in the first block of North Decatur Street. The negro, arrested by city detectives an hour after the alleged crime, was removed from the county jail that night to Kilby Prison.

J. H. Hanna, brother-in-law of the victim, who rushed from his house at 21 North Decatur when he heard the woman's screams and who pursued the negro several blocks, identified Maryland Sunday night at police headquarters. Yesterday afternoon the young woman was carried to Kilby Prison where she also identified Maryland as her assailant.

A warrant charging criminal assault was sworn out for Maryland in the Court of Common Pleas yesterday morning by Chief Deputy Sam Stearns. If the negro is indicted by the Grand Jury he will probably be arraigned today and his case set for Thursday, officials said. The law requires that there be at least one day between arraignment and trial.

Alonzo Williams, negro, sentenced to a term of from 15 to 20 years in the penitentiary a few days ago by Judge McCord for an attack on a white woman in Oak Park died at Kilby Prison last night from an operation performed in an effort to remove metallic substances including a key and two safety pins, from his stomach according to Deputy Warden Frank Boswell, Jr.

When admitted to the prison Williams complained of ailments, Warden Boswell said and four days ago an X-ray was made which showed the key and pins. An operation was performed in an effort to remove them but the negro did not recover, he said. The body was turned over to relatives.

The alleged attack by Williams on the white woman occurred one Saturday night and a special Grand Jury was summoned to convene the following Monday. The negro was indicted and on Wednesday he pleaded guilty to assault to rob and was sentenced to 15 to 20 years thus climaxing one of the swiftest actions of justice known in recent years here.

Charged by a special session of the Montgomery County Grand Jury, with criminal assault upon a white woman Sunday night, Martin Maryland will face a trial jury in Circuit Court Thursday morning. The indictment was returned early Tuesday morning when the negro was brought from Kilby for arraignment. John P. Kohn and Ben Hardeman were appointed by the Court to defend the negro.

The crime for which the negro must stand trial was committed Sunday night near the Scottish Rite Temple. The attacker was chased for several blocks by J. H. Hanna who was unable to capture the culprit. Later in the evening Maryland was arrested and identified by Mr. Hannas as the negro he had chased. Mr. Hanna was said to be a brother-in-law of the negro's victim, but an Advertiser representative was advised last night that he is not related in any way to the woman attacked by the negro.

When arraigned in court yesterday the negro, through his attorneys, entered a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity. A special venire has been drawn from which 12 men will be selected to hear the evidence.

After deliberating only three minutes, a jury in Circuit Court last night acquitted Martin Maryland, negro, indicted for an offense committed Sunday night against a young white woman of this city. The verdict, based on the failure of the State to connect the defendant with the crime, came after Solicitor W. T. Seibels had told the jury upon close of testimony, "I cannot conscientiously ask you to convict this negro in the face of the evidence presented."

Immediately following the verdict, Judge Leon McCord cautioned the audience against leaving the room and Col. James A. Webb of the Alabama National Guard, was placed in charge. The negro was escorted from the courtroom and was soon safely on his way to Kilby Prison, where he was to spend the night, it was said.

John P. Kohn, Jr., and Ben Hardeman, counsel for the defense, consumed less than 10 minutes in their talks to the jury, during which they declared, "It is the duty of all white men to protect their women, but in this case the heinous crime has not been fixed upon this defendant, in our opinion. The guilty person has gone."

With two motions, one to carry the jury to the scene of the alleged crime, and another to deliver a directed charge to the jury, both of which were overruled by Judge Leon McCord, attorneys for Maryland announced that the defense testimony was completed at 7:30 o'clock.

Over thirty witnesses, all of them except two being negroes, were put on the stand by the defense, while the State, with Solicitor Seibels brought out 12.

A National Guard detachment of five officers and 65 men, under command of Lieut. Col. James Webb arrived from Birmingham on special buses early in the morning and stood guard in and around the courthouse through the day. At 10 o'clock, when the courtroom was crowded to capacity, Judge McCord announced that by agreement between counsel the public would be excluded. Less than a hundred persons, including court officials, deputy sheriffs and newspapermen, heard the trial.

By 12 o'clock a jury of 12 had been selected from the 65 veniremen summoned and testimony was begun.

Ella Harris, negro woman, who said she lived on North Decatur Street near where the crime was alleged to have happened, and who testified that she saw a man seize a woman and throw her down to the sidewalk last Sunday night, was the first witness put on the stand by the State.

Victim Says She Fainted

The next witness was the woman alleged to have been assaulted. She told the jury that on that night she was walking down North Decatur Street when a negro man grabbed her throat and dragged her behind the Scottish Rite Temple. She then lost consciousness, she declared, and came to in time to see the negro leave her and run off. She was not able positively to identify Maryland as her assailant.

J. H. Hanna, star witness for the State, said that he heard the woman's screams and ran to her assistance. As he approached, he said, the negro ran out from behind the building, across Dexter Avenue and East on Washington Street closely pursued by Hanna. Hanna lost the negro in the capitol grounds, according to his testimony.

Hanna also testified that after the negro had been captured by police, he identified him at police headquarters. In examining Sheriff Scogin, Solicitor Seibels brought out that Hanna had come to the sheriff that same night about 12 o'clock with a request that he (the sheriff) arrest a negro by the name of Silas Dillard, as that was the negro whom he chased into the capitol grounds. Hanna, on cross examination, denied this.

Nine other witnesses, including three convict trusties at the Capitol, were introduced by the State to substantiate its testimony. Hanna was the only witness who swore that Martin was the negro who was alleged to have attacked the woman and fled.

Witnesses for Negro

Contending that Maryland left his boarding place at 44 Smythe Street about 7 o'clock on the Sunday night in question, and that he went to church where he remained until after 10 o'clock, defense counsel brought witness after witness to the stand to attest these facts. The details of Maryland's conduct during these hours was outlined with only slight differences between the statements of various witnesses.

Order prevailed in the courtroom throughout the trial and the work was carried on in an efficient and speedy manner. Judge McCord allowed no unnecessary argument over inconsequential technical points.

Excluded from the courtroom, hundreds of curious spectators lined the sidewalks and streets outside the courthouse. Two Guardsmen patrolled the sidewalks and four men were stationed at the main door. Upstairs one had to go through a rigorous examination to gain entrance to the courtroom.

'I Didn't Do It'

Declares Defendant Wh Judge Sentences Him

Returning a verdict of guilty after two and a half hours of deliberation, a jury in Circuit Court here yesterday convicted Mose Daniels, 19-year-old negro, of criminally attacking a young Montgomery white woman and decreed that he should die in the electric chair. The jury reported at 6:30 p.m. and in less than 15 minutes, surrounded by members of a National Guard Company from Birmingham, sheriff's deputies and state law enforcement officers, Judge Leon McCord summoned the condemned negro before the bar and sentenced him to death in the chair on July 11, 1930.

When asked if he had anything to say why the sentence of law should not be passed upon him, Daniels replied, "I just want to say that it ain't right to kill me for something I didn't do." After a few brief remarks to the judge the negro was escorted from the packed courtroom under heavy guard, loaded into one of the two National Guard buses and carried back to Kilby Prison.

Signs Death Warrant

Gibson Nettles, foreman of the jury, signed the negro's death warrant. Other members of the jury were David R. Findley, Robert E. Gorrie, W. M. Lucas, W. P. McGehee, Jr., Charles F. Bennett, A. Pugh Broadway, Cecil W. Cook, Thomas H. Florence, L. L. Prince, Joseph Ross and George A. Wright.

The case was first on the docket when court opened at 10 a.m. Testimony was completed at 1:15 p.m. and after state and defense counsel had presented arguments, retired at 2:30. Judge McCord instructed them to elect a foreman, go to lunch and resume deliberations at 3:30 p.m.

Solicitor W. T. Seibels asked for the death penalty, frequently referring in his closing argument to the "hot chair at Kilby." The state's conviction was obtained largely on the strength of an alleged confession made by Daniels after he was arrested and placed in Kilby Prison. Sheriff John L. Scogin, Deputy Sam Stearns, Deputy Warden Frank Boswell and Solicitor W. T. Seibels all testified that the negro confessed to the crime in their presence at Kilby. Seibels was placed on the stand as a defense witness.

Seibels Testifies

Daniels was represented by A. J. Pickett, Jr., Eugene Loe and N. T. Spann appointed defense counsel last week by Judge Leon McCord when the negro was arraigned. They requested Solicitor Seibels to testify as the first witness for the defense. He told the jury that he with several others talked with Daniels at Kilby shortly after his arrest, and although Daniels did not confess to attacking the woman, he did tell them that he met her the night of the alleged crime behind the Scottish Rite Temple on North Decatur Street and that she took a drink of liquor which he brought her.

Later on in the course of the trial, Solicitor Seibels declared to the jury that the fact that Daniels admitted meeting the woman was enough to send him to the chair.

Daniels denied on the stand that he ever confessed to the crime and insisted that he went to church with his wife on the night of the attack. The defendant's counsel [illegible] testimony of two other negroes in an effort to establish an alibi for Daniels.

Although the trial was open to the public, a company of 50 National Guardsmen from Birmingham patroled the corridors, guarded the doors and stood watch where the trial was in progress in the courthouse. Gov. Graves Sunday night directed Lieut. Col. James A. Webb to detail 50 enlisted men and six officers to be on duty and avert any disorder during the trial. Sheriff Scogin requested the troops from the Governor.

Many On Guard

Chief Walter K. McAdory, of the State Law Enforcement Department, also detailed a squad of his men to assist the soldiers. Sheriff Scogin had all of his available deputies on duty at the courthouse also. The National Guardsmen picked the negro up at Kilby and a few minutes before 10 a.m. unloaded in front of the courthouse. Gov. Graves went to Kilby during the morning to direct transfer of the prisoner from custody of the warden to that of the guardsmen.

Daniels is also indicted for an attempted assault on another Montgomery white woman. It was on the day of this attack that he was arrested at his home in Highland Park, and later questioned concerning the former alleged attack.

The courtroom remained crowded to capacity all day, but perfect order was maintained by soldiers and others officials. At 6:30 p.m. when the bailiff reported that the jury had reached a verdict, Judge McCord ordered that no person should leave the courtroom until after the defendant was escorted from the room. The jury then came out and when the verdict was read, there was no demonstration.

Daniels showed no visible signs of emotion as he heard his death sentence spoken.

Mose Daniels, Pleading For Life Before Governor, Denies Assaulting White Woman

7-1-30

Mose Daniels, negro, convicted in Montgomery Circuit Court of criminally assaulting a white woman, and sentenced to be executed July 11, yesterday denied his guilt in the course of a special hearing granted him before Gov. Graves and members of the State Board of Pardons. Daniels also denied making any confession regarding the crime with which he was charged, following his arrest and removal to Kilby Prison, stating he was at home at the time of the assault.

At conclusion of the hearing, Gov. Graves directed that a transcript be prepared at once, of the testimony at the negro's trial; that Circuit Judge Leon McCord be asked for a statement regarding the case, and that similar requests be transmitted to Solicitor W. Temple Seibels, and Deputy Warden Frank A. Boswell of Kilby Prison. The Governor desires the transcript which is to be paid for out of his contingent fund, for the use of himself and the pardon board members.

Taking the stand at the trial of Daniels, the Montgomery solicitor testified that at Kilby Prison, Daniels told him he met the woman he was charged with attacking, on the night of the attack, and brought her some whisky which she drank. The solicitor did not say the negro confessed to the attack, but said he claimed to have met the woman for the purpose of bringing her some whisky. She stated she did not know her attacker's identity. It is understood Deputy Warden Boswell was present when this statement was made to the solicitor.

Daniels, who is under indictment for attempting to attack another white woman in the Oak Park neighborhood, in broad daylight about a week after the crime of which he was convicted occurred, voluntarily denied the charge of attempted assault, declaring he accidentally ran into the woman while fleeing from some young white men who had been engaged in pitching ball and who "took out" after him.

Counsel who defended Daniels at his trial did not appear at the hearing. Neither did the solicitor. Before making a statement on his own behalf, the condemned negro called various relatives to testify for him. The first of these was his wife who said on the night of the assault of which her husband was found guilty, he went with her to church and was with her there from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock, and afterward was with her the rest of the evening and night; also that he reached home that evening about 7 o'clock.

Gussie Lewis, negro girl, testified she went with Daniels and his wife to the church but did not go in. She added, however, that she saw the wife in the church but did not see Daniels with her. The assault was committed at about 8 o'clock in the evening.

A negro man who claimed to be a great-uncle of the condemned, said Daniels was at his house at 8 o'clock and went to bed at that hour. The mother of the condemned also claimed Daniels was at home early on the evening of the crime and remained there. She begged that her son's life be spared.

In a ruling on a motion for an appeal to the Supreme Court and a stay of sentence for Mose Daniels, negro, sentenced to die in the electric chair July 11 for attacking a Montgomery white girl, Judge Leon McCord in Circuit Court late yesterday declined to suspend the sentence, but declared that the appeal would be noted on the court records. The final sentence of Judge McCord's ruling reads, "I conclude and so decide that the defendant is entitled as a matter of right to have his appeal noted, but I am without the power to suspend his sentence."

Seal Finklestein, who did not defend Daniels at the trial but has been retained as counsel since then, signified his intention of carrying the matter before a Supreme Court judge this morning after hearing Judge McCord's decision Tuesday.

This last minute motion for appeal to the Supreme Court came as a surprise move in the efforts to save Daniels from the chair. The time to ask suspension of sentence to appeal is immediately after the trial and sentence, and this is the first case of its kind to come before Judge McCord. A prisoner has six months to make an appeal but heretofore notices of appeal have been filed on the day of sentence.

Daniels was convicted in Montgomery Circuit Court June 9 and his attorneys did not file a notice of appeal. The pardon board has had Daniels's case under consideration and yesterday unanimously declined to recommend clemency. Solicitor W. T. Seibels appealed to the board not to interfere.

Finklestein filed his motion of appeal in Circuit Court Tuesday morning and Judge McCord issued a ruling, the text of which follows:

Special term of the Alabama Supreme Court was called yesterday afternoon to convene this morning at 9 o'clock to consider and decide the question whether pending appeal to that body, sentence of death imposed on Mose Daniels, negro, following his conviction of criminally assaulting a Montgomery white woman, shall be temporarily suspended. The special convening of the court was made necessary because of the fact that that tribunal is at present in recess, the regular term having closed on June 30. Formal certificate of appeal will be filed as soon as the high court reconvenes.

Montgomery, Ala

Question to be decided by the Supreme Court was presented yesterday by Seal Finkelstein, counsel for Daniels, following action Tuesday by Circuit Judge Leon McCord, who in disposing of a petition for a suspension of the negro's sentence pending appeal, held while admitting the right of appeal of the defendant, that he could find no legal authority under which he could set the sentence temporarily aside. At the time sentence was passed defense attorneys did not give notice of appeal. Mr. Finkelstein had no part in the defense of Daniels at the negro's trial, but has since been employed to appeal the case.

Daniels is under sentence to be executed in the electric chair at Kilby Prison early tomorrow morning. The State Board of Pardons Tuesday, unanimously declined to recommend clemency. Gov. Graves stated yesterday evening he will take no action in the case while it is pending in court.

Kilby Warden Sure Of Attacker's Guilt

Stating there is no doubt in his mind of the guilt of Mose Daniels, negro condemned to die in the electric chair early [illegible] morning for criminally assaulting a white woman here, Deputy Warden Frank A. Boswell, Jr. of Kilby Prison in a letter to the state board of pardons says that in his presence, Daniels confessed to the crime.

Mr. Boswell's letter was in reply to a request by Gov. Graves and members of the state pardon board that he as [illegible] the negro's confession, furnish them with a statement concerning it. Statements regarding the case were also asked of Judge Leon McCord and Solicitor W. T. Seibels. Solicitor Seibels has replied as follows: 'I recommend that the law be enforced and verdicts of juries based on the evidence be permitted to stand without interference either from your honorable board or the Governor."

No communication had been received from Judge McCord up to late yesterday afternoon. Transcript of the testimony at the trial of Daniels, which the pardon board and the governor directed be made, was delivered at the capitol yesterday and will be read by each board member and the chief executive.

The transcript was ordered and the requests for statements issued following hearing by the governor and the board, of Daniels's application for executive clemency. At this hearing Daniels claimed he was not guilty, that he was attending church with his wife when the crime was committed and that he did not make any confession.

Admitted Grabbing Woman.

Deputy Warden Boswell, in his letter first tells about city officials coming to Kilby Prison where Daniels was taken following his arrest and questioning the negro. Mr. Boswell says Daniels admitted to these officials in his presence, that he did grab the woman; that before stating the facts Daniels made several conflicting statements, and that after stating the facts the negro said he was drinking and "that it was whisky that made him do it."

After this, the deputy warden said, he took a negro "trusty" who works at the capitol and who saw the woman's attacker as he fled from the scene of the crime out to Kilby. This "trusty" had testified at the trial of another negro for the same crime who was acquitted, that the defendant was not the negro he saw running down the street on the night of the attack. Mr. Boswell said the "trusty" looked at Daniels, asked him to put on his hat and when he [illegible] stated Daniels is the negro man he saw running.

The white man for whom Daniels worked also visited the prison, the deputy warden says and stated there that he had received several reports of Daniels [illegible] at white girls.

Negro Changed Story.

According to Mr. Boswell, Daniels first claimed the woman, attacked, hissed at him on the street and stated she would meet him behind the Scottish Rite Temple and that there they drank a half pint of liquor together. Later, however, it is stated, the negro repudiated this saying the woman did not hiss at him, did not drink any whisky, but that he was drinking and that he was going to tell the straight facts "and wanted us to help him."

Daniels, thereafter it is added, took a pencil and made a drawing to illustrate the various places he went on the evening of the crime; told how he caught the woman and attacked her; how he was afterward chased by a man; which way he ran from the scene of the attack, of seeing several prisoners ("trusties") during his flight, one of them standing on a step; how he hid in some shrubbery in front of a hospital, going from there to his home and from his home to church.

Mr. Boswell says Daniels made his statement thinking it would help him, as he had stated the truth would always pay and that he would help himself by telling the truth, though no hope of reward was held out to him. The crime might have remained an unsolved mystery had Daniels not confessed, it is stated and in view of the circumstances of the confession that the condemned man thought it was going to help him, and his age between 18 and 19 years, Daniels should in the opinion of the writer be shown some consideration.

The woman who was the victim of the attack denied any conversation with her assailant about liquor or of drinking any, and stated she did not know the identity of the attacker.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 16—(A. N. P.)—Robert Curry again escaped what seemed to be certain death when a jury found him guilty of attempting to assault a 16-year-old white girl and rendered a verdict which set the punishment at from two to twenty years.

The alleged attack occurred May 12 in Overton, and when Curry was taken to the home of the victim her father, W. W. Crissan, attempted to shoot him. Only the quick action of the officers in knocking the revolver from the irate white man's hand and overpowering him saved Curry's life. Immediately following his arrest the prisoner was rushed here for safe keeping and the scene of the trial was transferred to this city.

The Crissan girl appeared in court and identified Curry. A short defense was made following a lengthy statement by the prosecutor, and the case was turned over to the jury, which rendered the verdict after deliberating for about two sours.

Curry will be kept here in jail until he can be removed to the state prison at Kilby.

GUARDS, SHERIFF SCORED BY GRICE IN DARIEN PROBE

Neither the Georgia national guard nor Sheriff Poppen, of McIntosh county, is to be held blameless in connection with the lynching of George Grant, negro, at Darien, September 8 last. Solicitor-General John Thomas Grice, of the Atlanta circuit, told The Constitution Tuesday night. His statement followed a preliminary investigation of the circumstances connected with the slaying of the negro after he had been lodged in jail.

Mr. Grice, talking from his home in [illegible] after a busy day in Darien developing leads which he expects to lay before a McIntosh county grand jury early in December, said he did not regard the situation as hopeless in so far as determining who killed Grant is concerned, but added that evidence sufficient to identify the slayer or slayers of the negro apparently is being concealed.

Exoneration of Sheriff.

"Has your investigation enabled you to exonerate the sheriff of McIntosh county?" the solicitor-general was asked. His reply was:

"I prefer not to answer that question at this time."

Later, however, in the conversation, he said he did not believe either the national guard troops, which were ordered out by Governor Hardman and commanded by Colonel W. R. Neal, of Savannah, or the sheriff was blameless in connection with the lynching.

"The sheriff," Mr. Grice said, "claims he was sick when he heard that a deputy of his had been killed.

"Of course," the solicitor-general explained, "there were some extenuating circumstances—to be considered with respect to the activity of both the soldiers and the peace officers.

Probe Develops.

"However," he added, "the investigation I made there today developed such information that I cannot concur in the report of General Homer C. Parker, adjutant general, in which he maintained the action of his men was not subject to any criticism.

"I haven't discovered who killed the negro Grant," Mr. Grice said, "but I have gathered some threads which I propose to lay before the grand jurors and will let them examine some witnesses under oath. I have no authority to make such an examination of persons who might have information pointing to the guilt of the man, or men, who lynched the negro, but the grand jury does have that authority."

Negro Slain in Jail.

Grant, alleged to have shot and wounded a peace officer who tried to arrest the negro and a companion in connection with a series of Darien burglaries, was caught in the swamps of McIntosh county by a posse and severely clubbed—according to Colonel Neal's report—before being delivered to the jail and placed in the custody of Sheriff Poppen. A few minutes after he had been locked in a cell, he was shot to death.

10-15-30

Published reports that the Georgia national guard troops would contend that a peace officer killed the negro were followed by an investigation ordered by General Parker. This probe brought from Colonel Neal a report which absolved the troops of any complicity in the lynching.

Meanwhile, Governor Hardman directed the solicitor-general to make an independent investigation of the lynching and report to him. A preliminary report by the solicitor-general was being prepared for the governor Tuesday night, and is expected to reach Atlanta Thursday.

NEGRO TO FACE TRIAL FOR DARIEN KILLING

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Oct. 14.—(AP) Dave Chapman, a negro, was ordered held for trial on a murder charge today in the killing of Robert L. Freeman, county police chief, slain in a swamp near Darien, Ga., in a gun battle with two negroes suspected of plotting a bank robbery.

The killing of Freeman was followed by the arrest of several negroes, one of whom, George Grant, was shot to death in the Darien jail under circumstances which have not yet been explained.

Atlanta Ga

The police chief was shot as he led a posse into the swamp to arrest two negroes who shot and wounded R. J. Anderson at a Darien bank. The negroes fired on the officer as he found them loitering in the rear of the bank early on a September morning.

Special Officer Anderson said at the preliminary hearing for Chapman today that he could not identify positively the defendant as Grant's companion. He said, however, that Chapman answered the general description of one of the negroes sought.

Grant was captured in the swamp and returned to the Darien jail under escort of Georgia national guardsmen who were sent to Darien to preserve order. After he had been placed in jail he was shot to death. The adjutant general of the Georgia national guard conducted an investigation as to the behavior of his militiamen at Darien. A few days ago the adjutant reported to Governor Hardman that the conduct of the guardsmen at Darien was above reproach. No civil investigation has yet been made into Grant's death.

Solicitor General Grice, at today's hearing requested that Chapman be held for trial and the request was granted by Judge Horace Simmons. Chapman was represented by an attorney.

WARLEY TAKEN BY SHERIFF

Madisonville Authorities Take Warrant For Editor Because Libel Suit Judgment Not Paid.

News

President J. R. Ray Comes to Rescue

3-5-30

Louisville Ky

An echo of the Madisonville affair in which Messrs. I. Willis Cole and William Warley, editors of the Louisville Leader and Louisville News, respecstively, were fined $250 each for alleged libel of a Madisonville Judge in the Fleming-Bard case, was heard here last Saturday when a deputy sheriff appeared at the home of the editor of The News with a capias warrant. A "capias warrant" is authority for the officer to "bring the body." The deputy, Mr. Doyle, was very nice about it and did not try to humiliate the editor but escorted him to the Sheriff's office to await the arrival of friends—if any. In the meantime Mr. Warley got in touch with Mr. Joseph R. Ray, president of the First Standard Bank, who was surprised to learn that the so-called "Fighting Bill" was in durance vile, and unless speedy aid was rendered would soon be in Tom Dover's bastile. So Mr. Ray called for the chief deputy and asked the total costs held against the prisoner, and on learning it rushed a check right over, thereby releasing the editor. Subsequently Mr. Warley made the necessary note to the bank, repaying Mr. Ray's kindness, which was quickly and gladly signed by Messrs. F C Dillon and Walter Williams, Jr. Mr Warley publicly expresses his appreciation of the interest taken in this matter by Mr Ray, who did not hesitate to come to his rescue and thereby save him from any humiliation as the time spent with the deputy sheriff was less than fifteen minutes.

Mr. Cole, fearing a sililar annoyance raised his "fine" some time ago, but it is known to him adn others that Mr. Ray had said, "Neither of these men shall go to jail in default of these fines."

uplic appreciation is also extended Messrs. Dillon and Williams because they did not hesitate to sign the note guaranteeing the payment of the money to the First Standard Bank. The actions of these gentlemen are what makes men like Cole and Warley keep on fighting race battles. It is encouraging to know people are behind you when you are trying to serve them.

The most discouraging thing that has slapped the editor of The News in the face was the action of the local NAACP. in refusing to relieve these editors of this burden and annoyance. The Executive Committee discussed the situation, one speaker saying they were fighting for the race and were the victims of prejjudice because of their fight and ought not have to pay the fines themselves. Though other members agreed with him apparently they nevertheless refused to assume any other obligations as the NAACP was in "enough debt." This , despite the fact Messrs. Cole and Warley had been presidents and members of the exesutive committee of the NAACP and were even on the notes to pay for cases in which the NAACP had defended persons totally unknnown to them. The NAACP is a great organization and this paper would not try to fight it or criticise it, but this editor cannot forget the local organization's indifference to his and Mr. Cole's fate, when it rushes to the aid of others whom they know not and about whose guilt or innocence there may be a doubt.

But this editor is not discouraged. As long as we have the J. R. Rays, the W F Turners, the H E Halls, the J O Blantons, the A D Porters, the W L Saunders, the Eli Forbes and scores of others who encourage us by word and deed, we will carry on.

One more word: Mr. Ray did a mighty fine thing for the editor of this paper in a critical moment. The money he put up has to be returned. Mr. Dillon and Mr Williams shall not have to pay it. William Warley has to pay it, and he is not asking for charity with which to pay it. All he asks is that the hundreds of people who owe for their payer Pay Up. If they will pay us we will pay all we owe.

NEGRO ACQUITTED OF RAPE IN MONROE, LA.

Herald Commonw.

First Such Victory For That And Many Other Far Southern States

5-31-30

New York, May 28.—For the first time in the history of Louisiana courts, and probably of many other far southern states, a Negro has been acquitted, at Monroe, of a rape charge which usually brings brutal lynching without any trial whatever.

Baltimore Md

This report comes to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue, from Hugh T. Layne, white attorney retained in the case by the Monroe branch of the NAACP under the presidency of C. H. Myers, the National office contributing $125.00 toward the expenses of the legal battle.

Mr. Layne writes to the NAACP: "It was one of the hardest fought legal battles Louisiana has ever known, the result of which was an acquittal, the first verdict of its kind in such a case, that has ever been rendered in a Louisiana court, and in so far as I can learn, the first of its kind in many states in the South.

"The handling of the case was a delicate proposition, and one had to know just how far to go and to stop and it took all the adroitness that could be marshalled in the premises.

"It is one case of fair play for the colored race and so unusual, I feel that the precedent has been established, to a degree, that from now on cases will be greatly affected and guided by this decision, for it is now well circulated and known here in the South even in this short period."

The colored man, Jack Roce, defended and acquitted in this case, is generally thought to have been "framed." Mr. Layne, after accepting the case and investigating, expressed his strong belief that the colored man was entirely innocent, a belief which the jury later shared.

The victory in this case is hailed as the more epochal by the NAACP, inasmuch as that part of Louisiana has been notorious for its evil treatment of colored people and has been a headquarters of the Ku Klux Klan. Mer Rouge, about twenty miles from Monroe, was the scene of terrible murders some years ago.

This is the third great victory won by the NAACP in Louisiana in the past year. The first victory brought about the conviction of two white men, at Eros, for the brutal and unprovoked murder of two colored women. The second victory, in New Orleans, resulted in the passing of death sentence upon a white police officer for shooting a colored girl who had resisted his advances.

NEGRO IS ACQUITTED OF ASSAULT CHARGE

Found Not Guilty of Attack on Woman After Court Visits Scene

Earl Coleman, 24-year-old negro, was acquitted of a criminal assault charge by a jury Thursday morning in Judge J. Arthur Charbonnet's section of the criminal court. The verdict was returned at 2:12 a. m. after a deliberation of 30 minutes.

The negro was tried for attacking a 27-year-old white woman. The trial started Wednesday morning and was brought to a close after midnight. The jury, judge, defense and state's attorneys, and the negro, the latter heavily handcuffed, visited the scene of the attack on Toledano street near Broad street. The trip, made at 1 a. m., was asked by the defense to enable the jury to view illuminating facilities of the place.

The defense attorneys were Lawrence H. Pugh and Walter I. Lanier of Thibodaux, and Philip S. Pugh of New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 24.—After viewing at 1 a. m. Thursday morning the scene and inspecting the illumination at the corner of Toledano and Broad Sts., where a 27-year-old white waitress alleged she had been attacked, robbed and criminally assaulted, the jury trying Earl Coleman, age 24, returned to Judge Arthur J. Charbonnet's section of the criminal court and within 30 minutes brought in a verdict of acquital.

Coleman had offered, during the trial, a number of witnesses in establishing an alibi, the principal one being his aged grandmother. The old lady had difficulty in determining minutes on a clock, but proved accurate with the hours.

Two white lawyers from the country town of Thibodaux, Lawrence H. Pugh and Walter I. Lanier, in associating with Philip S. Pugh, also white of New Orleans, staked their reputation of the acquital of Coleman. The white waitress was very positive in her identification of the prisoner, but her testimony was shaken when the lawyers began cross-examining her as to how, in the dark, she could see so well.

After attacking her testimony, defense counsel insisted that the jury visit the scene of the alleged attack. When this was done it was apparent that Coleman had won his case.

In view of the wave of recent lynchings, Coleman's case attracted much attention and evoked much discussion because so many nonwhite men have suffered at the hands of mobs on either the unsupported testimony of some white man or woman, or upon no identification whatsoever. The prosecution had asked that Coleman be given the death penalty.

YAZOO CITY, Miss., April 25.—Emmett Norwood, 23, of Shaw, Miss., on trial in circuit court charged with attack on an eight-year-old negro girl, near Bentonia on Feb. 6, was found guilty this afternoon, the jury only being out a short while.

However, they could not agree on the penalty. It is reported that a majority of the jurors voted for the death penalty. Under the laws of Mississippi if any one member of a convicting jury opposes the death penalty, life imprisonment is mandatory.

The state was represented by District Attorney J. H. Howie and County Attorney T. H. Campbell, while the defense was represented by Judge F. E. Everett of Indianola.

YAZOO CITY, Miss., May 2.—"We, the jury, find the defendant guilty as charged, but cannot agree on his punishment," was the verdict of a jury here on April 25 in the case of Emmett Norwood, 23-year-old white man tried for criminal assault on a 7-year-old Race girl.

5-2-30

Had the girl been white and the rapist a member of our Race there would have been no court trial nor jury disagreement. The man would have been lynched and his body riddled with bullets without establishing his guilt.

Chicago Ill.

The evidence showed that Norwood came from Shaw, Miss., to visit near Bentonia last February. Passing a schoolhouse he encountered four small children, one being his victim. Flourishing a knife, he drove the child into the woods and raped her before her 5-year-old sister.

Norwood was identified by the children. The penalty will automatically be life imprisonment and sentence will be passed at the end of this criminal term of court.

Trying Tom Hill, Negro, Deliberates Seven Hours.

CLARKSDALE, Miss., Oct. 14.—No verdict has been reached by the jury in the case of Tom Hill, 53-year-old negro, charged with assault upon Mrs. Betty Dorris, although the body deliberated from 11 o'clock this morning until 6 o'clock this afternoon, when court adjourned until tomorrow morning.

10-15-30

The case, only one of its kind ever tried in a Coahoma court, was expected to occupy the jury not more than five minutes. However, after seven hours deliberation, it is probable that the jury will be unable to agree.

Mrs. Dorris and her daughter, Mrs. Mattie Busby, recognized the negro, when he [illegible] their home, according to their testimony. Further identification was made the following day. Bloodhounds owned by the county, trailed the black direct from the Dorris home to his own cabin, and the barefoot track of Hill was identical with the one the dogs trailed, according to officers.

Hill was defended by J. W. Hopkins and Billy and George Maynard, who were appointed by the court, when the negro announced he was without funds.

According to reports circulated about the court house, 11 members of the jury stand for the death penalty and one for acquittal.

10-4-30

Nine years ago Williams was convicted of charges of raping a white woman and sentenced to die in the electric chair. At the time there was much doubt on the part of citizens of both races as to his guilt and at the last minute Governor Cooper, at the request of a group of citizens, the trial judge, and others commuted the sentence to life imprisonment.

During his nine years in prison, Williams' conduct has been ideal and he continued to declare that he was innocent of the charges. Efforts were made to secure a pardon for him, but in each instance the success was balked by some tchnicality.

Tuesday Williams' prison record was again laid before the governor and the chief executive suspended the sentence. A report of Williams' conduct on the "outside" will be made monthly and as long as his behavior warrants, he will remain free.

1-29-30

BOLIVAR, TENN., Jan. 28.—(AP)—It took a jury in Circuit Court here less than nine minutes today to find Carey Gunn, 21-year-old negro, guilty of assaulting a white girl and the judge less than one minute to sentence him to death in the electric chair, March 15. The case went to trial at 10 p.m. Testimony was begun at 3 p.m., and a verdict was reached at 5:20 p.m. National guardsmen who protected the negro during the trial left with the prisoner for Nashville soon after sentence was pronounced.

The trial was as sensational as it was brief. More than 500 spectators crowded into the little courtroom. Each was searched for weapons before being admitted by soldiers.

Montgomery Adv

Counsel for the defense was appointed by the court and asked for mercy for the negro. The victim, a 15-year-old school girl of Middleton, testified and pointed the negro out in the courtroom. It was the climax of the trial, and the 100 or more soldiers were prepared for violence.

Gunn attacked the girl late last year, stabbing and assaulting her. Sheriff A. W. Neely, of Hardeman County outwitted two mobs to take him safely to jail in Memphis. There he confessed. Soldiers brought him back here to trial and stood guard over him every minute at request of county officers.

BOLIVAR, Tenn., Jan. 28.—While 75 members of the Tennessee National Guard maintained order, Carey Gunn, 20-year-old negro, was convicted of criminal assault here today and sentenced to die in the electric chair. Gunn was alleged to have attacked 15-year-old Ada Cornelius near Middleton on Dec. 5, slashing her throat with a knife.

The date for his execution was set as March 14 by Judge Baptist.

Judge B. B. Baptist convened court at 10 o'clock this morning. At 2:30 o'clock this afternoon the jury box was filled. [illegible] o'clock the testimony was all in and both sides rested. Counsel argued for 10 minutes and at 10 minutes to 5 the jury pronounced Gunn guilty and fixed his sentence as death.

Plans High Court Appeal.

H. E. Carter, appointed by the court to represent Gunn, announced that he would ask a new trial. Failing in that he will take the case up o nappeal to the supreme court. It will go up on the bare record as no stenographer took a record of the proceedings. Gunn did not testify.

While the guardsmen surrounded the courthouse, manned machine guns that guarded the entrances, and searched every person entering the large Hardeman County courtroom to prevent the entrance here of firearms, the hundreds of neighborhood citizens attracted to Bolivar by the "lawsuit" were orderly and at no time was there a demonstration. Adjt. Gen. C. W. Boyd was in charge of the situation aided by Lieut. Col. R. H. Bond of Jackson, and Capt. Claude Calvert of Memphis.

Court Room Crowded.

The regular panel of 16 jurors and an extra venire of 150 almost filled the courtroom. Many were disqualified because of their conscientious scruples against the death penalty. Judge Baptist handled the talesmen rapidly and no time was lost. The state was represented by Atty. Gen. George C. Watkins and Atty. [illegible] M. Prewitt, who had been retained by relatives of the 15-year-old girl.

On the jury were three brothers, T. A. Ross, Coleman B. Ross and Lee Ross, all from the Pine Top section, Mat Macon, Vester Sanderson, Dave Jones, J. L. Sammons, George Leathers; G. L. Huddleston, Lowe Blalock, A. E. Wynne and W. L. Deen.

The 15-year-old schol girl told a straightforward story of the attack, differing in practically no detail from the confession made to Sheriff Knight by Gunn in the Shelby County jail on the night of his arrest. The five-hour hunt for him and the long night vigil to save his life wa stold by Sheriff A. W. Neely of Hardeman County. The sheriff told of Gunn's confession to him while being brought to Memphis and later in the Shelby County jail.

Prisoner Silent.

"Have you anything to say?" Mr. Carter asked Gunn after the state had submitted its proof.

"No, sir," Gunn replied.

He had dozed through a part of the proceedings and laughed when Mr. Carter sought to involve another negro.

The jury was out but one minute when it filed in with a report— on the first ballot — finding Gunn guilty. The verdict failed to fix the punishment and Judge Baptist was required to repeat his instructions and send the jury back. This delayed the decision by at least five minutes.

At 5 o'clock, Gunn, Adjutant General Boyd and Sheriffs Knight and Neely were on their way back to Memphis escorted by 25 guardsmen and at 7 o'clock Gunn was seated before a heavy meal at the Shelby County jail—condemned to die.

A young negro who had committed the unforgivable offense of an attack upon a white girl was tried within a short distance of Memphis, given all his constitutional and legal rights and convicted duly according to law. Despite the fact that his offense was a most heinous one he was furnished a guard of soldiers so that his rights would be preserved and so that the victory of law and order over mob rule would be complete.

This, of course, is but one of many examples of the new order prevailing in the south. It is indicative of the fact that the old rule of mob justice even in extremely heinous cases is giving way to the role of law. The various organizations seeking to improve racial relations in this country as well as the other bodies that gather statistics concerning lynchings should take note of this and other similar cases.

It would be of service to the anti-lynching cause to furnish figures where the rule of law triumphed over the rule of the mob. More so, perhaps, than the publication of the reverse statistics.

Attorney Is Fined For Not Defending Negro

BEAUMONT, TEXAS, June 30.—(AP)—Because he refused to accept the assignment of the Criminal District Court to defend Rainey Williams, negro, held in jail here on several charges of criminal assault, R. J. Jernigan, Port Arthur attorney, today was fined $250 and remanded to jail for contempt of court by Judge R. L. Murry.

Jernigan's refusal came after the negro, three times threatened by a mob in as many days, had been identified by a Port Arthur woman as her assailant.

The girl's story, told to County Atty. Marvin Scurlock, paved the way for the filing of a seventh charge against the negro, already indicted for six felonies for his alleged attacks on couples parked in automobiles on highways near Port Arthur.

The negro's trial on one of the charges has been set for Wednesday.

Sheriff W. W. Covington and his deputies today continued to guard the jail after mobs had been repulsed Friday and Saturday nights. The prisoner was rushed to the jail here from Port Arthur Friday to evade a mob which was forming at the city jail here.

MAN ESCAPED 3 TEXAS MOBS GIVEN DEATH SENTENCE

Plead Guilty to Raping Colored Girl, White Women Witnesses

BEAUMONT, Texas.—(ANP) By Clarence Williams), Rainey Williams, who escaped three mobs within a period of three days, recently, was found guilty of raping a colored girl on the night of May 1, and sentenced to die in the electric chair for his deed.

This trial was a record-breaking affair. Before the crowd that packed the courtroom could get comfortable, the whole thing was over. Williams had been tried, convicted and sentenced. The jury had little deliberating to do and that little was done in about eighteen minutes.

Just how much defense which would be put for Williams had been already indicated when the attorney, R. J. Jernagin, of Port Arthur, refused to defend the prisoner and his refusal was fined $250.00 and remanded to jail for contempt of court. The white attorney, however, reconsidered the matter and agreed to defend the prisoner.

Raped Colored Girl

Williams was tried for the rape of a colored girl but most the witnesses were the white girls, whom he is alleged to have attacked at various times and for which the mobs sought to take his life. These girls readily and easily identified him as their attacker and one of them confessed that Williams had assaulted her. The others claimed that he had been frightened away by their screams before he could accomplish his purpose.

Little or no defense was made. The witnesses for the state testified and Williams entered a plea of guilty in connection with the affair on May 1, but denied that he was the man who had attacked the white women.

Mob Resisted

His arrest and the subsequent battles between mobs and officers brought Port Arthur, the scene of the crime and the first lynching attempt, in the limelight and then the scene was moved here, where the sheriff and his deputies dealt with the mobs in the manner approved by anti-lynching organizations, that is with tear gas bombs, fists and other weapons.

Many of those who attempted to take the life of the prisoner must have been among the number in the room when Williams was tried. The heavily armed guards and the determination of the sheriff to protect the prisoner had a salutary and quieting effect upon those present and the trial proceeded undisturbed and with perfect tranquility.

The others claimed that he had been frightened away by their screams before he could accomplish his purpose.

Little or no defense was made. The witnesses for the state testified and Williams entered a plea of guilty to charges in connection with the affair but denied that he was the man who had attacked the white women.

His arrest and the subsequent battles between mobs and officers brought Port Arthur, the scene of the crime and the first lynching attempt, into the limelight, and then the scene was moved here, where the sheriff and his deputies dealt with the mobs in the manner approved by anti-lynching organizations, that is, with tear-gas bombs, fists and other weapons.

Many of those who attempted to take the life of the prisoner must have been among the number in the room when Williams was tried. The heavily armed guards and the determination of the sheriff to protect the prisoner had a salutary and quieting effect upon those present, and the trial proceeded undisturbed and with perfect tranquility.

Nearly Lynched, Texas Man Is Convicted

MIAMI, Texas—(ANP)—Jesse Lee Washington was convicted and sentenced to death in the electric chair for the slaying of Mrs. Henry Vaughn, a white woman, several weeks ago.

Due to the tense feeling against Washington, this feeling having been expressed in wholesale attacks on Negroes by whites a short time after the murder. Texas rangers were detailed to guard the prisoner during the trial and to escort him back to the Oklahoma prison where he will be kept until the day of the execution.

Washington confessed to the crime, perhaps opining that death in the electric chair would be less painful than to be tortured to death by a mob.

REFUSE JURY SERVICE IN TEXAS MOB TRIAL

DALLAS, Texas., Nov. 17 (AP).—Sentiment against the punishment of persons accused of burning the court house at Sherman in a riot which resulted in the death of George Hughes, a Negro charged with attacking a woman, balked prosecution of the fourteen defendants today.

Man after man called for prospective jury service declared he would not vote to send the accused to the penitentiary.

Judge C. A. Pippen then transferred the cases to Austin, saying it was evident the State could not obtain a fair trial in Dallas, to which the cases had been sent from Sherman.

The attitude of the prospective jurors was scored by Judge Pippen.

"If you won't enforce one law you can't criticize another man for not enforcing another law," he said.

During the rioting the Negro was locked in a vault in the court house for safekeeping. When the vault was opened after the fire he was dead.

TEXAS MOBBISTS TO BE TRIED IN TRAVIS COUNTY

Dallas, Nov. 21.—(INS)—Out of 77 porspective jurors examined for the trial of Jeff (Slim) Jones, arraigned for complicity in the Sherman riots during which a Negro prisoner was burned to death and the Grayson County Court house was destroyed, fourteen declared that they had scruples against giving him a prison term; and their refusal and disqualification was the reason for the change of venue and the transferring of all of the cases to Travis County by District Judge Pippen last Monday.

Prisoner

Judge Pippen transferred the cases to Austin, some 275 miles from Sherman. A Sherman mob burned the court house May 9, in an effort to deal summarily with George Hughes, who was charged with attacking a white woman. The judge said because of the wide publicity given the affair, in which Negro property was destroyed and matial law declared, he did not believe an impartial trial could be had any closer to Sherman than Austin. The prisoner died in the burning court house.

Judge Pippen said three-fourths of the 7 7 talesman examined stated they would not send Jones to the penitentiary, even though he should be proved guilty, and many of the others stated they would do so reluctantly. They made those statements after state's counsel had described the nature of the indictment.

11-29-30

Saying, that without meaning to give offense, he wished to "talk frankly" to the prospective jurors who had disqualified themselves, Judge Pippen gave his views on their action.

Houston [illegible]

"Practically all of you have said under oath that although the state might prove that these men burned the court house in one of our great counties, you would not convict them.

many of you have heard men say they would not enforce the liquor laws because they were opposed to those laws. They were wrong but they had as much right to take that stand as you had to take the position you took today.

"Let me show you what such action will lead to. It opens the flood gates to every individual. The majesty of the law fails and the dignity of the law falls. You are going to set yourself up as bigger than the law."

Judge Pippen added that he had talked to many responsible citizens of Dallas County and had found to his surprise that sentiment was overwhelmingly against the state's cases.

The transfer to Austin was on Judge Pippen's own motion.

Other defendants indicted in Grayson County in connection with the rioting were Webb Purdom, Jim May, Jess Roper, Cleo Wolfe, Jimmie Arold, Leslie Cole, Roy Allen and J. B. Casland.

NEGRO LYNCHERS TO TRIAL JAN. 19

[illegible], Nov. 29 (AP).—Criminal charges against 14 persons, growing out of the lynching of a negro and burning of the Grayson county courthouse last May, today were set for trial January 19 in Travis county district court. The cases were transferred here from Dallas after Judge C. A. Pippen decided a jury could not be obtained in that county.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

SEEING TEXAS FIRST

From the Cleveland Plaindealer:

LAST May a great many citizens of Sherman, Texas, decided to lynch a negro. A thoughtful sheriff locked the negro in a cell in the courthouse and the citizens not finding their prey, burnthe house. It proved to be an indirect method of lynching for the negro died in the fire.

Fourteen residents of Sherman were arrested and charged with the crime of "rioting to commit arson." It was impossible to obtain a jury in Sherman and the case was transferred to the large city of Dallas in hope of providing a trial.

Now in Dallas the summoned jurymen have declared one after another, that they would not under any circumstances consent to find the defendants guilty. There is a good judge in Dallas, though. and his name is Pippin. He vigorously denounced the attitude of the veniremen, and instead of calling the whole business off and freeing the defendants he transferred the case to Austin the state capital in the hope that Austin may do something about it.

So the fourteen are having a chance to see Texas first. And the men of Sherman and Dallas who decline to consider evidence or to find the rioters guilty no matter how guilty they may really be are setting a sorry example of Texas civilization. One hopes Austin will be more enlightened, or at least a little saner. But the hope is not any too strong.

A MONTGOMERY JURY

Many a man has been lynched in this country on the strength of even less conclusive evidence of guilt than was developed against Martin Maryland, Negro, charged with assault and promptly acquitted by a jury of white men in Montgomery Thursday. Protected by troops, called by the Governor, and put to trial within a few days after another man had committed the atrocious crime with which the luckless Maryland was charged, the Negro was given all the protection that his State could provide. But soldiers and fair-minded court officials are not enough to see that even and exact justice is given in such cases. The defendant must have a good case. He must have a story that will satisfy a jury.

Maryland had such a story. An assault had been committed, but it could not be shown that Maryland did it. On the contrary, it was established to the satisfaction of the jury that Maryland was innocent. It was a plain case of mistaken identity. When this was seen the Solicitor announced that he could not conscientiously ask for conviction, and the jury, agreeing with the Solicitor as to the facts, promptly brought in a verdict of acquittal.

The hapless victim of circumstance had a close call, but not a closer call than the honor of the State. It is greatly to the credit of the State that this man was given adequate protection and the ordinary guaranties of a fair trial so meticulously enforced in his case.

TROY, ALA., May 30.—(AP)—Robert Giles, negro, charged with attempting to attack a young Troy white woman several weeks ago today was sentenced to 19 years, 11 months and 20 days to 20 years in the State penitentiary.

Montgomery, Ala.

Immediately after sentence was passed the negro was taken in charge by a detachment of national guardsmen who accompanied him from Kilby Prison, the State Penitentiary at Montgomery, and the return to Montgomery started.

A large crowd gathered for the trial which was quickly concluded and there were no signs of disturbance. In addition to the guardsmen a number of State law enforcement officers were stationed about the Pike County Courthouse.

J. H. Wilkerson represented the negro and Solicitor Loflin the prosecution. The trial was heard before Judge W. L. Parks.

GUARDSMEN RETURN

Less than seven hours after they left Montgomery for Troy, to carry out their mission of safely delivering Robert Giles, negro, there for trial, a force of Alabama National Guardsmen under command of Capt. John A. Schneider, returned here with the negro who was recommitted to Kilby prison to serve a sentence of from 19 years, 11 months and 20 days, to 20 years, imposed upon him following his conviction of attempting to assault a young white woman at Troy some weeks ago.

The troops engaged in this special duty consisted of soldiers from the Headquarters Company 167th Infantry, Montgomery; Headquarters Company 62nd Infantry Brigade, Prattville, and the 111th Repair Section, Montgomery,—totalling in all between 75 and 100 men. Motor buses leased, were used in making the trip to and from Troy. In addition to the guardsmen, a force of 12 men from the State Law Enforcement Department also went to Troy to aid local authorities in preserving order. They were Officers Bozeman, Linch, Morrison, Kimbrough, Nelson, Shoffett, Cromer, Alford, Smith, Thompson, Baker and Shores.

Leaving Kilby penitentiary at 6:45 o'clock yesterday morning, with Giles in their custody, the Guardsmen reached Troy at 8:55 a.m. Following the trial which began at 9:30, they brought the negro back, arriving at Kilby at 12:10 p.m. No difficulty was encountered on the trip during which everything went very smoothly, and there was no disorder or demonstration at Troy, before, during, or after the trial.

Capt. Schneider To Head Guardsmen

By direction of Gov. Graves, a large force of Alabama National Guardsmen commanded by Captain John A. Schneider, of Montgomery, will take Robert Giles, negro, to Troy, for arraignment and trial today, on a charge of attempting to assault a young white woman there some weeks ago.

The troops under Captain Schneider will be composed of men frfom Headquarters Company, 167th Infantry, Montgomery; Headquarters Company 62nd Infantry Brigade, Prattville, and the 111th Motor Repair Section, Montgomery.

The Guardsmen will remain on duty throughout the trial, under the direction of Circuit Judge W. L. Parks and subject to his orders.

After his arrest, Giles was brought to Montgomery and placed in Kilby Prison, where he has been confined ever since.

In addition to the troops, Gov. Graves has detailed a squad of State law enforcement officers to go to Troy and assist local authorities there today in maintaining order.

How the Guardsmen with the prisoner, will make the trip to and from Troy, was not stated, nor was any information made public as to the time of their departure from Montgomery. Giles is to go on trial at Troy some time during the forenoon today.

In detailing troops to this special duty, and assigning State officers to aid local authorities, Gov. Graves acted upon representations made to him through his private secretary, Arthur Heustess, by Sheriff R. A. Galloway, of Pike County, who was here Wednesday to lay before the Chief Executive the matter of providing adequate protection for the negro during the trial, and taking every precaution against disorder, though he said he did not expect any demonstration or difficulty of any kind.

Gov. Graves was out of town on official business at the time, but Mr. Heustess transmitted to him what the sheriff had to say. The Chief Executive returned to the city and was in his office at the Capitol late yesterday afternoon.

Though feeling was high against the negro following the attempted assault, no violence was attempted at Troy. Giles, however, was removed to Kilby for safekeeping pending his arraignment and trial.

Assault Case Up

Negro To Be Arraigned For Attempt On Girl

Assignment of a detachment of National Guardsmen to duty at Troy, as a precautionary measure against any disorder that might arise during arraignment there tomorrow morning of Robert Giles, negro, charged with attempting to assault a young white woman several weeks ago,—seemed probable following a conference at the capitol yesterday between Sheriff R. A. Galloway of Pike County, Arthur Heustess, private secretary to Gov. Graves, and Gen. F. E. Butler, adjutant general.

The conference was held immediately after the arrival at the statehouse during the late forenoon of the Pike County sheriff. At its conclusion Mr. Heustess said Sheriff Calloway had come here for the purpose of laying before the Governor for consideration, the matter of providing adequate protection for the negro, Giles, during his arraignment. The sheriff, he said, does not anticipate any demonstration in connection with the preliminary hearing, but out of the fullness of precaution, wishes to provide every reasonable safeguard against such an occurrence.

Mr. Heustess said he will submit what the sheriff had to say, to Gov. Graves, who is out of the city, immediately upon his return here late today. No prediction as to what action Gov. Graves will take would be made by Mr. Heustess. He did say, however, that it has been the Governor's policy throughout his administration, to see to it that in every emergency, the administration of justice should go forward in an orderly way, and he is certain the Governor will continue this policy.

Feeling ran high in Troy against the negro at the time of the commission of the offense with which he is charged, but there was no violence attempted. Giles, however, was removed to Kilby Prison where he has since been confined.

It was understood last night that whether troops are on hand at Troy tomorrow or not, that a squad of State law enforcement officers will likely be detailed to assist local authorities there in the preservation of order.

Five Members Of Family In Which Two Were Lynched Held By Grand Jury, Ten Persons Stay In Prison For Protection

LIVINGSTON, Ala., Aug. 28 —Although the action of possemen who abated a mob in the race riot which resulted in the lynching of four colored persons, one a woman, at Emelle July 4 and 5, was criticized as deplorable, not one of the possemen were indicted but five of the colored men whofought for their lives during the outbreak were indicted Wednesday by Sumter County Grand Jury.

Stay In Prison

All of the indicted men were relatives of the victims of the lynchings three of them being at large at the time, but one being captured Thursday.

Those in custody indicted were Ernest Robertson, who was charged with assault with intent to kill and Ben Roberts, who faced a lesser charge.

Tom Robertson and his sons, Ellis and John, those at large at the time, were under indictment charging murder. Tom was taken in the woods near the Mississippi-Alabama line after being in hidding more than six weeks.

Ten members of the Robertson family asked protection of the law after the mob burned their home. They have since stayed in the Kilby Prison, fearing they will be lynched if they leave.

Six Are Killed

The race riot was started by an altercation over a $2.75 second-hand battery, which was taken from Esau Robertson by Clarence Boyd, white tenant boss. Boyd's uncle was shot, Esau lynched and his brother Robert slain. Later the mob lynched a colored man and woman giving vent to its fury.

Another white man was also slain.

Norfolk, Va.

LIVINGSTONE, Ala.—Although they termed the Fourth of July disorders at Emele, in which four Negroes were lynched, as "deplorable," the grand jury investigating the tragedy said it did not have sufficient evidence to return indictments against any white persons involved in the killings, but it did return indictments against five members of the Robertson family connected with the outbreaks, charging three of them with murder.

Tom Robertson was put in Kilby Prison Friday night to go on trial in October for murder, while two of his sons, Ollis and John, still were sought on murder charges in the slaying of Grover Boyd, white storekeeper, at Emele, July 4.

It was the slaying of Boyd, who got into an argument with Esau Robertson over a $4 automobile battery, and the subsequent search for Tom Robertson and his sons that resulted in the death of Charlie Marrs, white posseman, and the lynching of Tom's brother, John Newton Robertson, Esau Robertson, and two other Negroes, one unidentified man and a woman.

The investigation ordered by Governor Bibb Graves of county officialdom following the lynching, has resulted in the imprisonment of a county official for embezzlement and the wholesale resignation of others who were under fire. While it was not stated that these men were quizzed because of their direct connection with the lynching, it is understood that the Governor is far from satisfied with their manner of enforcing the law.

Sumter Grand Jury To Investigate Disorders Which Cost Six Lives

8-17-30

LIVINGSTON, ALA., Aug. 16.—(AP)—A special session of the Sumter County Grand Jury has been called for Monday to investigate the Fourth of July disorders at Emelle which resulted in the death of

Montgomery, Ala.

The special Grand Jury session was ordered by Judge Benjamin F. Elmore, of the 17th Judicial Circuit at the direction of Gov. Graves. The Grand Jury has been assembled, Judge Elmore said, to fix responsibility for the trouble.

Two white men were killed, Grover Boyd and Charlie Marrs. Boyd was shot to death when the trouble first started between a nephew, Clarence Boyd, and members of the negro Robertson family. A mob surrounded and burned the home of John Newton Robertson and shot him to death.

Esau Robertson was lynched shortly after Grover Boyd was killed and the two other negroes were killed by possemen when they failed to obey commands to halt.

The trouble started over a second-hand automobile battery which one of the Robertson negroes had bought from Clarence Boyd. Boyd demanded payment for the battery and the negro promised to go home and get the money. He returned with other members of the family and attacked Boyd.

Ten members of the Robertson family are in Kilby Prison, eight of whom surrendered and asked they be placed in the State Penitentiary for safekeeping. The other two were arrested on warrants charging them with participating in the trouble.

Grover Boyd was shot to death when he went to the aid of his nephew who was engaged in a difficulty with the Robertson negroes. Esau Robertson, son of Tom, was lynched by a mob which formed following the slaying of Boyd, and John Newton Robertson, brother of Tom, was shot to death and his home fired by the mob.

Charlie Mars, a white man was shot in the head and fatally wounded as the mob surrounded the negro's home and two negroes were shot by possemen searching for other members of the Robertson family the next night.

Ernest Robertson was charged with participation in the attack on Clarence Boyd. He was alleged to have struck Boyd over the head with a bottle a moment before Grover Boyd was shot down by one of the negroes.

Ten members of the negro family were brought to Kilby Prison for safekeeping followning their voluntary surrender to State Law Enforcement officers. Two others, John and Ollis, who are charged with participating in the disorders are still at large. They are being sought on charges of first degree murder.

All other members of the family have been released from the State Penitentiary into the custody of a Louisiana plantation owner. No charges were placed against them.

Resolved: Negro Was Murdered, Not Lynched, Georgia's Debate Topic

ATLANTA, GA, Oct. 30.—(AP)—Adjt. Gen. Homer C. Parker today agreed with Joseph T. Grice, of Glennville, solicitor general, that George Grant, negro, was "murdered" in the Darien Jail on Sept. 8, and asked "Why does not Mr. Grice do his duty?"

The Adjutant General intimated he or some of his officers knew who killed Grant after he was locked in jail.

Grice came back with a statement that if Gen. Parker knew anything about the incident, he wanted to know it. He said that if the Adjutant General would not willingly testify, he would subpoena him.

Both sides now have agreed that the negro was "murdered" and not "lynched."

Montgomery Ala.

Gen. Parker said the slayer admitted he had killed Grant and attempted to justify himself because of a pact that he had entered with a deceased official to the effect that either of them would avenge the untimely death of the other at hands of a negro."

10-31-30

Charges made directly after Grant was slain were that he was "lynched" almost under the muzzles of national guardsmen's machine guns. Col. W. R. Neal, of Savannah, who commanded the unit, denied that, and later said the slayer of the negro could only have entered the jail through a door that connected with the sheriff's apartment.

LYNCHING OF NEGRO DENIED BY OFFICIAL

Two Or Three Men Are Alleged To Have Slain Prisoner In Cell

ATLANTA, GA., Oct. 29.—(AP)—Gov Hardman has been informed by Joseph T. Grice, solicitor general of the Atlanta Superior Circuit, that George Grant, negro, was not lynched in Darien jail on Sept. 8, but was murdered by two or three men.

His death resulted from divided responsibility between civil and military authorities, Grice told the Governor, and suggested the manner in which troops were called for service at Darien was not according to law.

He promised to report his findings to the Grand Jury in December.

Grice investigated the slaying of Grant and his report was made public late today without comment from Gov. Hardman. Adjt. Gen. Homer C. Parker said he had investigated the affair as it affected the military.

Grant was killed in his cell while National Guard troops were on duty at Darien, under order of Gov. Hardman.

After Grant was slain, Col. W. R. Neal of Savannah in charge of the troops, said the "persons or person who killed the negro could have entered the jail only through the sheriff's house."

A report of the military was released at the same time today by the Governor

Solicitor Grice Says Facts Do Not Support Theory of Official Murder Pact in Negro's Death.

Intimations by Adjutant General Homer C. Parker that McIntosh county officials know who shot and killed a negro in the county jail at Darien during a recent mob menace drew a denial Friday night from Solicitor-General J. T. Grice, of the Atlantic circuit, and a point-blank assertion by Sheriff A. S. Poppell that such allusions were a "lie."

General Parker's latest comment on the Darien controversy was phrased as an interrogation Friday night and he intimated that it was known that George Grant, the murdered prisoner, was killed by a county peace officer who carried out a promise made to another officer, slain in a battle with two negroes, that the survivor would slay any negro who killed either of the officers entering the pact.

In response to the adjutant general's charge that the slayer of Grant had admitted the murder and sought to justify his act in the eyes of his community by telling of the so-called pact, Solicitor Grice declared that his information does not support such a theory. His statement was made over long-distance telephone to The Constitution.

Sheriff Poppell, in referring to Parker's charges that the slain negro was "beaten almost to death" when he was captured in a swamp, declared that he himself was present and that except for a "tap" on the head with a "small pistol" in the hands of a special bank officer, Grant was not harmed before being placed in jail.

Deputies Wounded.

Sheriff Poppell had but one deputy, Mr. Grice stated, adding that Freeman, who was killed, and John Fisher were the only others who went into the swamp after Grant.

"Freeman was killed, Deputy Sheriff Collins so seriously wounded he was believed dying and Fisher wounded," Grice said. "Obviously, from the information I received at Darien when I investigated for the governor neither of these two survivors could have shot Grant in his cell."

"I feel that the adjutant general must have been misled in some of his information, if I understand his statement," Grice said.

"I certainly know nothing of his intimations or charges. I must decline to enter a controversy with him, but want to assure him and all others that my duty will be done."

Sheriff A. S. Poppell, of McIntosh county, declared the charge by Adjutant General Parker that Grant was beaten "almost to death" when he came out of the swamp "a lie."

"I was present when the negro was brought out," Sheriff Poppell said to The Constitution Thursday night. "It's a lie that he was beaten. There were a hundred people present and the negro was tapped over the head once by J. R. Anderson, who charged Grant with killing Freeman and wounding Collins and Fisher.

"Anderson, who was hired by the city to guard the bank, accused the negro with killing Freeman. The negro said he did not do it. And Anderson tapped him over the head with a small pistol. Grant was not hurt.

"I can't understand why the adjutant general should make such a statement. It's too foolish to deny.

"Why does Parker sit up there saying such things? He ought to know better. If he thinks he can find out who killed Grant why doesn't he come down here and find out."

Sheriff Poppell stated that he did not know who killed the second negro, that his only knowledge of the shooting was when he was asked to get the body and take it to an inquest.

"If they had an agreement, do you think they would tell me? I never heard of such a thing."

Deputy Sheriff Collins is recovering from his wound, the sheriff said. Fisher was the least badly shot, being wounded in the shoulder.

Asking Solicitor-General Grice "if he knows that the slayer of George Grant, negro, in the McIntosh county jail, admitted that he had killed Grant and attempted to justify himself by a pact he had entered into with a deceased official that either would avenge untimely death of the other at the hands of any negro," General Parker in his statement Thursday demanded "if everybody agrees that the case is one of murder, pure and simple, why does not Mr. Grice do his duty?"

General Parker's statement was in elaboration of a statement given The Constitution Wednesday night after Governor Hardman released reports by Solicitor Grice and Acting Adjutant General Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., on the Darien slaying case.

In response to General Parker's challenge, Solicitor Grice Thursday night declared, "I assure General Parker that I am in earnest about the prosecution." He said it is his purpose to bring the matter before the grand jury in McIntosh county on the first Monday in December, and, "if it is necessary to issue a subpoena against General Parker to secure the information he intimates the military department has, I shall certainly not hesitate to do so."

Has Definite Information.

Parker's statement followed what he termed an effort to "muddy the water by blaming the militia." He declared that heretofore he has not deemed it his duty to charge "this atrocious crime to anyone," or "felt it was a matter to be handled by the civil authorities of McIntosh county," and "I still think so."

Parker said "the military authorities are in possession of definite information that Mr. Grice can have if he desires it." He asked "if Mr. Grice knows who beat George Grant almost to death when he was first apprehended, and as he came out of the marshes with both of his hands up?" and "if he knows who killed the second negro on the morning of September 9?"

"Whether or not Mr. Grice accomplishes anything in December does not especially concern the Georgia National Guard; but whether or not the honor, integrity and efficiency of the officers and men of the Georgia National Guard is to be attacked indiscriminately, in the efforts of certain individuals to turn the spot light of public opinion from them to us, does concern us materially," General Parker said.

Civil Responsibility.

General Parker said he cannot understand "why Mr. Grice should insinuate that the governor sent troops to Darien of his own volition and without a request from the civil authorities." If the slayer of the prisoner is to be excused for his criminal act because of divided authority, the civil authorities are still responsible because they asked only for the assistance of the military authorities in apprehending the fugitives and placing them in jail, General Parker said. "They cannot now take advantage of a situation that they themselves created."

At the capitol Thursday, it was announced that Governor Hardman had no comment to make on the case following his review of the resports submitted by Solicitor Grice and Colonel Oberdorfer. It was indicated that the governor will be "hands off," and leave the matter of the civil authorities under whose jurisdiction prosecution of any case would come.

Grant was killed in the McIntosh county jail following his arrest in connection with the slaying of an officer. Mr. Grice's report to the governor was made after the governor asked him to investigate the case.

General Parker's statement of Thursday follows:

Parker Statement.

"I believe it to be my duty to say something in answer to the report of Solicitor-General Joseph T. Grice, of the Atlantic judicial circuit of Georgia, with reference to the Darien murder on Monday morning, September 8, 1930.

"I hope Mr. Grice can as conscientiously defend the officials of the law concerned, to which group he belongs, as I can the military officers, criticized by him, and of whom I am one.

"To begin with, Mr. Grice reaches the same conclusions that all of us have previously stated, to-wit: 'There is no basis for the report that this negro was lynched, as such is not the case. He was murdered by two or three men, while confined in the McIntosh county jail, these men having gained access to the jail, shot him dead in his cell.'

"This being true, I cannot understand why Mr. Grice should insinuate that the governor sent troops to Darien of his own volition and without a request from the civil authorities. If the slayer of the prisoner is to be excused for his criminal act because of divided authority, the civil authorities are still responsible because they asked only for the assistance of the military authorities in apprehending the fugitives and placing them in jail. They cannot now take advantage of a situation that they themselves created.

"The mayor of Darien, as far back as September 10, stated that George Grant was murdered after he had been placed in jail. At that time the mayor did not deny that he had asked for the troops. Here is what he said in a letter to Colonel Oberdorfer, the acting adjutant-general: 'The first of the guards arrived here at 7:30 o'clock Monday morning and joined in with the other officers and citizens. They put the hounds in the swamp and got results pretty soon. They captured one of the men, George Grant. He was taken to the jail and delivered to the sheriff. He was murdered a few minutes after the officers left the jail.' The mayor also makes this statement in his letter of September 10: 'The guards acted very nicely and I can praise them in the highest degree for their good work.'

"If everybody agrees that the case is one of murder, pure and simple, why does not Mr. Grice do his duty? He knows what his duty is and we can all agree on that point also. Instead of criticizing the governor, the acting adjutant-general and the colonel in command of the troops and scandalizing the Georgia national guard, he should, in justice to the reputation of his community and that of the state at large, search out the murderers from among his co-laborers and bring them to trial as speedily as possible.

"Heretofore I have not deemed it my duty to charge this atrocious crime to any one. I felt like it was a matter to be handled by the civil authoriof McIntosh county. I still think so. However, as stated to a reporter for The Atlanta Constitution on yesterday, the military authorities are in possession of definite information that Mr. Grice can have if he desires it.

"If the mayor of Darien can afford to deny that he asked for the troops, and if the sheriff of McIntosh county can afford to refer newspaper men 'to the national guard for information' stating that he knows 'nothing about the case and cares less,' and if the solicitor-general of the Atlantic judicial circuit can afford to sit in judgment on the actions of the governor and everyone else connected with the military establishment of the state, then I am inclined to believe that the military authorities can well afford to defend themselves and place the blame for the murder where it rightfully belongs.

Beaten Earlier.

"I wonder if Mr. Grice knows who beat George Grant almost to death when he was first apprehended, and as he came out of the marshes with both of his hands up? I wonder if he knows that his slayer admitted that he had killed Grant and attempted to justify himself because of a pact that he had entered into with a deceased official to the effect that either of them was to avenge the untimely death of the other at the hands of any negro? I wonder if he knows who killed the second negro on the morning of September 9?

"After discussing the occurrences at Darien at great length, his report constituting four pages of typewritten matter, Mr. Grice concludes by addressing himself to the main phase of the case in the following language: 'I shall report my findings and all available information to the grand jury of that county, which convenes on the first Monday in December next, and have a thorough investigation made by that body, so that if possible, the perpetrators of this crime may be brought to justice.' In a letter to the governor, dated October 6, 1930, Mr. Grice makes these observations: 'Investigations of this nature usually bring but little result for the very good reason that the people who know the facts are participants in the wrongdoing and therefore will give investigating bodies no real information, and this may be the result of our investigation, but, nevertheless, I will press my investigation vigorously.'

"Whether or not Mr. Grice accomplishes anything in December does not especially concern the Georgia National Guard; but whether or not the honor, integrity, and efficiency of the officers and men of the Georgia National Guard are to be attacked indiscriminately, in the efforts of certain individuals to turn the spotlight of public opinion from them to us, does concern us materially."

'FLOGGING PARTY' PLAN TOLD AT MURDER TRIAL

10-29-30

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Details of how a crowd of white men painted their faces and disguised themselves in a "flogging expedition" against two negroes which resulted in the killing of Lacy Mitchell, negro, a month ago, were given to a jury in Thomas superior court this afternoon by Jack Bradley, one of the principals [illegible] attack.

Atlanta, Ga.

The story came voluntarily from Bradley's lips, after he had been warned that he might "incriminate himself." It was presented to the jury in the trial of O. E. Allen, who with Bradley, was charged with the murder.

Earlier in the day a jury in the same court convicted Henry Price and C. V. Moore, young white men, of a charge of criminal assault on a young negress. The jury fixed the penalty for each at one year in the state penitentiary.

Jack Bradley, Thomas Countian, Obtains Mercy on Agreed Verdict.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Oct. 30.—Judge William E. Thomas, presiding over Thomas county superior court, Thursday gave a sentence of imprisonment for life to Jack Bradley, young white man, 26 years old, charged with the murder last month of Lacy Mitchell, negro, who had been regarded by the state as a star witness in a case involving criminal assault on a negro woman in this county last August. Bradley had previously gone on the witness stand voluntarily, over the protest of his counsel, and made a clean breast of the killing, in detail, during the trial of O. E. Allen, indicted as accessory to the murder. When the Bradley case was called Thursday morning J. B. Edwards, the attorney who represented him, stated in open court that his client was willing to accept a verdict of guilty with a recommendation to mercy.

Solicitor-General Spurlin agreed to this, and the same jury that on Wednesday convicted O. E. Allen was recalled to the jury box and signed the verdict.

Allen, whom the jury on Wednesday found guilty with a recommendation to mercy, was also given a life sentence by Judge Thomas.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Oct. 29.—The jury trying the case of O. E. Allen, white, charged with being accessory to the murder of Lacy Mitchell, negro, who had been regarded by the state as a star witness in a case involving a criminal assault in this county last August on a negro, brought in a verdict shortly before 6 o'clock this afternoon, of guilty, with a recommendation of mercy.

Atlanta Ga.

Judge Thomas sentenced Allen to a life term in the penitentiary. Allen had gone on the stand in his own behalf at the morning session. He made a brief statement, in which he said he was a stranger in the neighborhood where the crimes occurred, did not know Lacy Mitchell, and knew few other people in that community.

Guard Officer Silent On Darien Lynching Case

Colonel Neal Will Not Comment, While Grice Awaits Governor's Action.

Constitution

10-29-30

SAVANNAH, Ga., Oct. 28.—Colonel W. R. Neal, commanding officer of the 118th field artillery of the Georgia national guard, stationed here, today declined to contribute any information toward clearing the haze which has enveloped the Darien (Ga.) lynching of George Grant, a negro, for the past six weeks.

The lynching, which occurred after the arrival of a detachment of guardsmen under Colonel Neal's command at the little McIntosh county jail on the morning of September 8; the activity or non-activity of guardsmen and peace officers, and the inquiry made for Governor Hardman by Solicitor-General J. Thomas Grice, of Glennville, are three things which Colonel Neal will not discuss. He made it very clear that he will not talk for publication and he is not loquacious about it in private conversation.

Atlanta, Ga.

Guardsmen Praised.

In a detailed report of the part the men under his command played after they reached Darien a few hours after Governor Hardman ordered them there to preserve law and order, made at the request of Adjutant General Homer C. Parker, Colonel Neal praised the conduct of the guardsmen but included in his official account of the tour duty no intimation as to who shot the negro after he had been taken from a posse which found him in a swamp, escorted to the jail by soldiers and locked in a cell in the presence of both Neal and the sheriff.

Upon receiving his report, General Parker, transmitting the Neal account to Governor Hardman, asserted that criticism could not be levelled at the national guard of Georgia, and the men mobilized from the 118th regiment particularly, because of the lynching. The Neal report said that the negro had been severely clubbed before taken away from a posse by soldiers who escorted him to jail.

After the Parker report had been published, Governor Hardman called on the solicitor-general of the Atlantic circuit, in which Darien is located, to make a separate inquiry of the circumstances surrounding the lynching in view of what the governor explained as "conflicting reports."

Solicitor's Views.

This investigation Solicitor-General Grice made as quickly after it had been asked as he could get out of court. In a document of five typewritten pages, the solicitor-general said after mailing it to the governor, the conclusion was reached that neither the national guard nor the peace officers were to be held blameless. After waiting several days for the governor to voluntarily release his report, the solicitor-general, pointing out that he was anxious not to affront the chief executive, expressed the hope that Governor Hardman would give it out for publication so that the people of Georgia might understand why he lodged a general charge of inefficiency, to say the least, against both the national guard and peace officers.

Meantime, Grice has been gathering threads of information to lay before the grand jury which meets in Darien the first Monday in December.

NO INDICTMENTS IN LYNCHING CASE

Thomas County Grand Jury Unable to Fix Responsibility

NEW MATTER CONSIDERED

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Oct. 25.—The Thomas county grand jury in its presentments today comments on its inability to return indictments against members of a mob who during September lynched Willie Kirkland, Negro.

The grand jury reported: "After examination of many witnesses, many of whom are prominent men of Thomas county, it was necessary to close this investigation without an indictment for lack of evidence."

The Negro had been identified three times by his victim, as the person who attempted a criminal assault on a nine-year-old white school girl.

It was ascertained that a number of well-known persons, including capitalists, business men, newspapermen and men in official positions were summoned to appear before the grand jury in the lynching inquiry.

Two Factions in Mob

An analysis of this testimony as reiterated in public to acquaintances, is said to show that there were two factions in the mob at the city stockade on the night of the lynching; one trying to aid the sheriff and his deputies in trying to get the Negro to a safer place and the other bent on lynching him.

One citizen was quoted as saying that it was like an excited crowd swarming a baseball diamond, with no one able to tell which were trying to mob the umpire and which trying to prevent disorder.

The grand jury found indictments against two white men, Henry Price and C. V. Moore, charging criminal assault on a Negro woman, and also indicted Jack Bradley and A. E. Allen, white men, on a charge of murdering Lacy Mitchell, Negro who had been regarded as a star witness in the criminal assault on the Negro woman.

These cases will come up during the week, it was announced.

OFFICIAL BLAMES SPLIT AUTHORITY FOR JAIL KILLING

Constitution

10-30-30

Atlanta Ga.

"First Error Was in Sending Troops With No Authority," Says Atlantic Circuit Solicitor.

HARDMAN SILENT ON CONTROVERSY

Grice To Accept Challenge of Parker and Follow Through Any Information He Gives.

Asserting that he has been told who killed the negro in the jail cell at Darien on September 8, Adjutant General Homer C. Parker Wednesday said he would furnish this information to Solicitor-General Joseph T. Grice, of the Atlantic circuit, if Grice calls for it, and denounced what he termed "efforts to muddy the water by blaming the militia."

Solicitor Grice, over long distance telephone, was prompt to accept the challenge of the adjutant-general, declaring that he will "request all information which General Parker has and will follow it through." The prosecutor said he would make his request for this information within the next few days and that all evidence would be laid before the McIntosh county grand jury when it meets the first week in December.

General Parker's statement followed release by Governor Hardman, without comment, of reports on the killing of George Grant, negro, in a cell of the McIntosh county jail, made by Solicitor Grice and by Colonel Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., acting adjutant general at the time.

Asserting that Grant was murdered by two or three persons and was not lynched, Solicitor-General Grice said in his report that "in my opinion this killing of the prisoner was largely caused by divided responsibility." He added, "When considered from every vantage, it would seem that the first error was in sending the troops there with their hands tied, by giving them no authority. Seemingly the law was not followed in calling out the military forces, that is by a proclamation declaring a state of insurrection in Darien, as provided for by the law in such cases, and it is regrettable that the military forces should have been sent there without being given the authority under which they could act, independent of the civil authorities."

"Childish Gesture."

Grice also declared that he understood that after the prisoner was killed and his body removed, the military authorities took charge and posted a machine gun at the head of the stairs at the jail door, "seemingly to prevent entrance into a jail from which the prisoner had already been killed and taken." He said, "I am unable to explain this childish gesture."

Adjutant General Parker said: "If Solicitor-General Grice is really in earnest and wants to know who killed the negro, the military department can give him some very definite information." Parker said he has been informed by several persons as to the identity of the slayers, and will furnish this information to Grice if he wants it.

Constitution

Grice stated over the telephone Wednesday night that he would be only too glad to get in touch with the adjutant general regarding any information which the militia leader could give him.

10-30-30

"I will request all information which General Parker has, and will follow it through," Grice said. "It will be impossible to convene a special term of the McIntosh county grand jury, I regret to say, but the adjutant general will be given every opportunity to furnish anything which might be used as evidence in this case.

"This information will be investigated and all evidence laid before the McIntosh grand jury when it meets in regular term the first week in December. I will request such information as the general states he has within the next few days."

Mr. Grice would not comment on charges in Parker's statement that the Atlantic circuit solicitor-general only sought to "becloud the issue and muddy the waters," other than to state that such charges were absurd.

In one connection the reports of Solicitor-General Grice and Colonel Oberdorfer differ widely—on the request of the Darien civil authorities' request for assistance of troops and knowledge of their coming. In his report the solicitor-general states definitely that neither Mayor R. A. Young nor the sheriff of McIntosh county asked the troops be sent to the scene and that neither knew the troops were en route from Savannah.

In his special report the acting adjutant general gives specific attention and detail to telephonic conversations between Mayor Young, of Darien, and himself in which, in the first call, the mayor requested the governor to call out the troops and the second in which Colonel Oberdorfer says he informed Mayor Young and Governor Hardman had called out the guardsmen and that they were at that time en route to Darien from Savannah. The acting adjutant general, in his report, also states that Mayor Young informed him that he first had applied to Colonel Neal at Savannah and had been referred to Atlanta for the orders it was reported he desired.

Solicitor Grice said in his report that the national guard appeared to be in charge, and thus in a way justified the sheriff in leaving them to protect the prisoner, while they were in reality not in charge, and were really supposed to be under the control of some civil officer that "they had seemingly failed to locate from their arrival at 7:30 o'clock a. m., until 10 o'clock a. m., when they found Mayor Young." Grice said further that the mayor told him the negro was killed at 9:30 o'clock and the officer in charge of the troops reported to him half an hour later for the first time.

Oberdorfer's Report.

Colonel Oberdorfer's report states that he received a call from Mayor Young at 3 a. m. September 8, stating that he had applied to Savannah national guard officers for help to maintain order. Colonel Oberdorfer said that at 4 a. m. Young again telephoned him and was advised of Governor Hardman's instructions and was told to expect the military with Colonel Neal in command.

In his report, Grice stated, "It is impossible to believe that either the civil or military officers would have thought the prisoner was in no danger." Also, he said, "the sheriff, sick and with no deputy, did not call on the military forces to guard the jail, neither did the commander of the military department take charge, or volunteer his services to the sheriff. Why not is something hard to answer. The seeming dereliction of the sheriff may be explained by his physical condition at the time, but I know of nothing that can be said in behalf of the officer in charge of the troops. The sheriff says that the officer in charge of the troops never at any time reported to him for service, nor offered in any way to help him, and he flatly denied a statement of the officer in charge of the military forces, that he told that officer after the negro was locked up that the negro 'would be safe now.'"

Parker's Statement.

General Parker's statement follows:

"If Solicitor General Grice is really in earnest and wants to know who killed the negro, the military department can give him some very definite information. Otherwise he had better stay off the military department.

"Two or three people have come to Atlanta recently and have told me who killed the negro in the jail. If the solicitor general will call on us we will be able to help him, but he has not yet communicated with me. If he wants to know, he can easily find out. Dragging the military in was done in an effort to muddy the water and becloud the issues."

Mr. Parker pointed out that he was not on duty at the time, and has had nothing to do with the case, as it was in charge of the acting adjutant general.

Report by Grice.

The report of Solicitor-General Grice follows:

"In pursuance of your instructions to investigate discrepancy in the reports of the alleged lynching of one George Grant, at Darien, I have made all investigation that I could and now report to you my findings.

"There is no basis for the report that this negro was lynched, as such is not the case. He was murdered by two or three men, while confined in the McIntosh county jail, these men having gained access to the jail, shot him dead in his cell.

"The jail there is composed of the sheriff's residence in front, and cells in the rear, with an inside stairway, inside the residence, leading to the cells on the second floor. This stairway can be reached in three ways, to-wit, through the front door of the residence; through a side door on the east side, which opens from a side yard into the kitchen; and through the jail yard into a side door on the west side. At the top of this stairway is a heavy door separating the residence and the jail proper, and between this heavy door and the cell block there is a small platform upon which anyone can stand, and from that position see or shoot into the cells. In front of this platform is a smaller door opening into the corridor between the cells.

"The negro, George Grant, was arrested in the marsh, at about 9 o'clock a. m., on Monday, September 8, and taken by the military officers and some civilians to the jail, being followed closely by a large and angry crowd of men, and a large number of these men followed the prisoner inside the jail, where the sheriff received the prisoner and locked him in a cell.

Sheriff Collapses.

"The sheriff had for three or four days next preceding this trouble been confined to his home and bed with fever, and for this reason took no part in searching for the negroes until after his sole deputy, Mr. Collins, had been shot down and sent to the hospital.

"After the negro was locked in his cell, and the crowd leaving the jail, it was discovered that someone had removed the key from the lock in the heavy door, which separates the residence from the jail, and while the door leading into the cell block was securely locked, yet the removal of the key from the main door made it an easy matter for anyone who was inside the building to go up the stairway and through the main door, thus getting upon the little platform where they could see or shoot into the cell where the prisoner was confined.

"After the prisoner was locked in his cell, the military officers and others retired to the yard, and the sheriff to his residence, and in a few minutes thereafter the sheriff received information that Mr. Collins also was dead, and he at once collapsed and was placed in bed and treated by a physician. During this time while the sheriff, who was the only officer of his office, his only deputy being in the hospital, was in bed in his residence in front of the house, and the military officers and others scattered about the yard and premises, someone whose identity is unknown to me, reached the little platform above mentioned and shot the prisoner to death, presumably having entered through the side door on the east side, and escaping the same way. I say presumably, for the reason that I have information that no one was seen to enter through the front door or through the side door on the west side, or to retire through either of these doors after the shooting.

Intense Feeling Shown.

"It is impossible to believe that either the civil or military officers would have thought that the prisoner was in no danger, if reports to the effect that at the very time he was locked in his cell there were outside in the yard and on the premises not less than 100 men, many of them showing intense anger and feeling, are true.

"Yet the sheriff, sick and with no deputy, did not call on the military forces to guard the jail, neither did the commander of the military department take charge, or volunteer his services to the sheriff. Why not is something hard to answer. The seeming dereliction of the sheriff may be explained by his physical condition at the time, but I know of nothing that can be said in behalf of the officer in charge of the troops. And in this connection, I might add that both the mayor of the city of Darien, and the sheriff of that county told me that they did not ask that troops be sent there, had nothing to do with them being brought there, and did not know that they were coming until after they were there. The sheriff says that the officer in charge of the troops never at any time reported to him for service, nor offered in any way to help him, and he flatly denies a statement of the officer in charge of the military forces, that he told that officer after the negro was locked up that the negro "would be safe now."

"The mayor stated to me that while the negro was killed at about 9:30 o'clock a. m., the officer in charge of the troops came and reported to him about 10 o'clock a. m., or at least 30 minutes after the negro was dead, and that this was the first report of any sort that he had from the military.

"Divided Responsibility."

"In my opinion this killing of the prisoner was largely caused by divided responsibility. The military appeared to be in charge, and thus in a way justified the sheriff in leaving them to protect the prisoner, while they were in reality not in charge, and really supposed to be under the control of some civil officer, that they had seemingly failed to locate from their arrival at 7:30 o'clock a. m., until 10 o'clock a. m., when they found Mayor Young. I might add that I understand that after the prisoner was killed and his body carried away, the military authorities took charge and posted a machine gun at the head of the stairs at the jail door, seemingly to prevent entrance into a jail from which the prisoner had already been killed and taken. I am unable to explain this childish gesture.

"Seemingly the law was not followed in calling out the military forces, that is by a proclamation declaring a state of insurrection in Darien, as provided for by the law in such cases, and it is regrettable that the military forces should have been sent there, without being given the authority under which they could act independent of the civil authorities.

"When considered from every vantage, it would seem that the first error was in sending the troops there with their hands tied, by giving them no authority. Then it is apparent that the officer in charge certainly failed to offer his services to the civil authorities, when they needed it most. Likewise the civil authorities either thinking that the military was in charge, or from indifference, did not avail themselves of the help that they should have obtained from the military. All of which are errors, which in my humble opinion contributed to the death of the unfortunate prisoner.

"I shall report my findings and all available information to the grand jury of that county, which convenes on the first Monday in December, next, and have a thorough investigation made by that body, so that if possible the perpetrators of this crime may be brought to justice.

Oberdorfer Describes Precedure.

Colonel Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., who was acting adjutant general during the Darien episode, issued a 3,000-word statement Wednesday in connection with the killing of the negro, in which he described in detail the various military channels and procedure by which troops were requested, he said, by Mayor R. A. Young, and which were supplied at his orders.

Colonel Oberdorfer sets forth in his statement that Mayor Young did make formal request that troops be sent to Darien, and that a small "provisional detachment" was dispatched to the scene on orders of the governor, who was acquainted with the situation by the acting adjutant general. The governor, the statement says, stipulated that any troops dispatched should "co-operate" with the civil authorities, "rendering them the assistance that had been requested." Colonel Neal (at Savannah) was advised of the request of Mayor Young for troops, the statement continues, and of the pursuant conversation between the governor and acting adjutant general.

"Colonel Neal," Colonel Oberdorfer states, "was specifically instructed at this time to see that his men were fully armed and that force and violence were to be used only if necessary to preserve law and order and in the preservation of life and property."

Detachment on Way.

Following the conversation between Colonels Oberdorfer and Neal, it was pointed out, Mayor Young again telephoned the acting adjutant general and was told by the officer that the Savannah detachment was then on the way, and informed of structions given to Colonel Neal. Somewhat later the acting adjutant general received a telephone call from Colonel Neal, who informed the former that he had not yet left Savannah, and called Oberdorfer's attention to a Savannah morning newspaper which indicated that the Darien situation was quieted down. Nevertheless, the statement said, Colonel Oberdorfer informed Colonel Neal that the previous orders withstood and that he must proceed at once to Darien until the order was revoked by the governor.

Later that morning, the statement sets forth, Colonel Neal telephoned from Darien, informing the acting adjutant general of the apprchension and slaying in Darien jail of one of the hunted negroes "by some unidentified party or parties." This information was supplemented by additional advices that the other negro was believed to be surrounded in a near-by swamp where efforts were being made by civil authorities to capture him.

In conclusion, Colonel Oberdorfer's statement said:

"It would be well to remark here that the acting adjutant general was advised during the day of September 8, 1930, that a newspaper carried the report that the first negro captured at Darien had been taken from the troops and lynched over the protest and resistance of the national guard. Upon receipt of this report the acting adjutant general communicated with Colonel Neal by long distance telephone and he was advised by Colonel Neal that this was not true, that there had been no mob breaking in the jail and no mob killing the negro and consequently no resistance to a mob in such connection by the national guard. He stated that the negro had been put in the cell and locked up by the civil officers and that he personally, with at least one other national guardsman, had remained outside of the jail, but not far distant, and that he had been greatly surprised to learn that the man had been shot in his cell at the jail and that certainly there had been no mob to accomplish this over the protest or even with the knowledge of the national guard. He stated that his idea was that some one or more persons had in some manner gotten into the jail or had already been in the jail and murdered the negro in his cell, this being done without the knowledge of the national guard and without any mob figuring in the matter at all. This verbal report was promptly transmitted to the governor of Georgia.

"The acting adjutant general of Georgia stood relieved of his duty as such on September 10, 1930, and of course has no official knowledge of any further developments in conjunction with the subject of this report.

7

ATLANTA, Nov. [illegible]—George Grant killed by a member of a mob in the Darien jail, was not lynched, but murdered. This was the decision reached after four weeks of investigation on the part of the grand jury. The killing is thought to have been done "by two or three men."

Defender

The commander of the state troops has intimated that he knows the three murderers and is credited with saying they confessed the crime to him. The reason given was vengeance.

11-8-30

Despite this, no arrests have been made, and the lynching or murder is yet numbered among the many unsolved killings of our people in Georgia.

Chicago

Solicitor General Joseph T. Grice in conducting the investigation pointed out that the first error was made when the state troops were sent to Darien without authority. Grice declared that he understood that after the prisoner was killed and his body removed the military authorities took charge and posted a machine gun at the head of the stairs to the jail door, "seemingly to prevent entrance to a jail from which the prisoner had already been killed and taken." He said: "I am unable to explain this childish gesture."

The troops under the command of Adjutant General Parker found their hands tied when the sheriff went home for the evening "without leaving them any orders to protect the prisoner." It seems that the soldiers were to operate under the command of a civil officer as to the actual guarding of Grant. In other words, their power was limited to merely keeping peace.

While the soldiers were seeking to quiet the mob of more than 100 which was milling in the jail yard the murderer of the prisoner stole to a platform located outside the cell in which the lynched prisoner was placed and shot him.

It is thought that the identity of this murderer or murders is known to General Parker, who as yet has not revealed it.

To counter the charges that Attorney Grice has made against the Georgia National guard General Parker asked in the initial hearing: "I wonder if Mr. Grice knows who beat George Grant almost to death when he was first apprehended and as he came out of the marshes with both of his hands in the air. I wonder if he knows that his slayer admitted he had killed Grant, and attempted to justify himself because of a pact that he had entered into with a deceased official to the effect that either of them was to avenge the untimely death of the other at the hands of the prisoner."

Despite the lengthy investigation, if the murderer is known the name has been kept a state secret. The inquiry has turned from an investigation into the murder of Grant into a general hostility between the state attorney's office and the Georgia National guard.

Hopes Governor Will Give Details of Report to People of State, Solicitor Grice Says.

Atlanta, Ga.

Pointing out that a report of his investigation, made at the instance of Governor Hardman, and which has been in the hands of the executive since last Thursday, "shows in detail exactly why I said that neither the military nor the peace officers were to be held blameless in connection with the Darien lynching" on September 8, Solicitor-General J. Thomas Grice, of the Atlantic circuit, told The Constitution Wednesday night that he hoped the governor would release the report of his investigation to the press.

Wednesday afternoon it was said at the governor's office that the report of the solicitor general had been received but that the executive had not had time to complete a study of it. Investigation by Solicitor-General Grice was made October 14 and the report mailed from Darien the same night. The salient facts developed were reported in The Constitution the day after the investigation.

Hopes for Publication.

"However," Mr. Grice said Wednesday night, "there are details which show why I said that neither guardsmen nor peace officers were to be held blameless and I hope that the governor will release my report to the newspapers so that the people of Georgia may see why I made such charges."

Trouble at Darien on September 7 resulted in the executive ordering a detachment of troops from Savannah. Sometime after the guardsmen had been withdrawn, Adjutant General Homer C. Parker ordered an investigation of the Darien lynching, with particular reference to the activity of troops there during the outbreak of violence, and subsequently issued a statement saying he could find no ground for criticism of their duty there.

Inquiry Separate.

Before General Parker's statement was released, accompanied by a detailed report from Colonel W. R. eal, who commanded detachment at Darien, Governor Hardman ordered Solicitor-General Grice to make a separate investigation. The executive advised the solicitor-general that he had received conflicting information about the lynching.

The latter investigation, the solicitor general said, was conducted at the instance of the governor and was, necessarily, only preliminary in nature. Mr. Grice explained that the matter will be before the McIntosh county grand jury when that body assembles the first Monday in December. Judge J. Thaxton Daniel, of Claxton, Ga., is presiding judge of the circuit in which Darien is located.

LAW MUST REIGN, ASSERTS PITTMAN

Judge of Bartow Court Says Mob Rule Will Not Be Tolerated.

Constitution
9-30-30

Atlanta, Ga.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Sept. 29—The opening of the special term of Bartow superior court here Monday morning was featured by an able and timely charge delivered to the grand jury by Judge Claude C. Pittman. He outlined the duties of the body and stressed the importance of guaranteeing fair and impartial trials for defendants upon any and all occasions.

Four negro murderers are to face trial here this week and Judge Pittman evidently felt that the situation demanded a charge to the grand jury more in keeping with their duties at the special session, rather than the usual language from the bench.

"The reign of the law, impartially administered, is the reign of the constitution and the reign of peace. The reign of the mob is the reign of anarchy, and must not, and will not be tolerated by a free, liverty-loving and law-abiding people. In Bartow county, as sworn officers of the law, and as good citizens of the state, we will see to it that every citizen, charged with a crime, is tried by the law, and the rules of the constitution, and not otherwise," said Judge Pittman to the grand jury.

Judge Pittman told the grand jurors he had a conversation with the late Chief of Police Jenkins on the day before he was killed and the chief suggested to him that a special term of court be called to try three negro murderers, then held in the Bartow county jail. The call for the special term was issued, and the chief met his death. It is for the purpose of trying his confessed murderer, as well as three others charged with three other murders, that the session which began Monday was called.

"As a nation of people we are seeking after this same freedom which truth alone can give. To this end we make laws; we elect officers to enforce our laws; we administer oaths to these officers and provide for the impeachment of such officers when they violate their oaths, and yet there are always a few citizens who criticize officers for faithfulness to their oaths and to the laws.

Oath Must Be Kept.

"A judge, before he enters upon the duties of his office, must swear before God that he will administer justice without respect to person, and do equal rights to the poor and the rich, and faithfully and impartially discharge and perform all duties agreeable to the laws and constitution of this state and the constitution of the United States,' and if the judge violaes that oath or fails to uphold the constitution of his state or nation he, too, is a perjurer. So it is with all jurors and all officers of the law 'Oaths to keep we have and consciences to glorify.'

"That great lawyer, Jeremiah Black, defending the right of trial by a jury, rather than military trial, at the close of the Civil War, said: 'The framers of the constitution required that every man, in public life, should swear, without reservation, that he would support the constitution. The oath of an officer to support the constitution is as simple as that of a witness to tell the truth in a court of justice.'

"The great bill of rights was enacted in 1689, during the reign of William and Mary of England. The bill of rights was brought to this continent by our ancestors, who were driven from England and France by 'mob rule.' The principles of the bill of rights have been preserved for us to this good day by the best brain and the most precious blood of the fathers. The bill of rights is written forever into the fundamental laws of our land and are our constitutional guarantees of life, liberty and property.

Georgia's Bill of Rights.

"The bill of rights, as written into our own state constitution, in part, provides:

"'1. All government of right originates with the people—is instituted solely for the good of the whole. Public officers are the trustees and servants of the people and at all times amenable to them.

"'2. Protection to person and property is the paramount duty of government and shall be impartial and complete.

"'3. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

"'4. No person shall be deprived of the right to prosecute or defend his own cause in any of the courts of this state, in person, by attorney or both.

"'5. Every person charged with an offense shall have the privilege and benefit of counsel—and shall have a public and speedy trial by an impartial jury.'

"Article six of the constitution of the United States says: 'In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right of a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the state and have the assistance of counsel for his defense.'

Trail Blazed by Jefferson.

"Thomas Jefferson, in his first inaugural address, said: 'The essential principles of our government are freedom of religion, freedom of the press, freedom of the person by habeas corpus and trial by a jury impartially selected. Should we wander from these principles in moments of error or of alarm let us hasten to retrace our steps and to regain the road which alone leads to peace, liberty and safety.'

Trial Must Be by Law.

"The reign of the law, impartially administered, is the reign of the constitution and the reign of peace. The reign of the mob is the reign of anarchy and tyranny, and must not and will not be tolerated by a free, liberty-loving and law-abiding people. In Bartow county, as sworn officers of the law and as good citizens of the state, we will see to it that every citizen charged with a crime is tried by the law and the rules of the constitution and not otherwise.

"On the day previous to the lamented death of Chief Jenkins, acting largely upon his advice, an extra term of this court was called to try three persons charged with capital crimes. His advice was that Bartow superior court be convened to try and deter men who take the lives of their fellow men. He did not and would not, for a moment, advise me to try or permit their trials in any way except that way countenanced and provided by the law.

Sheriff's Duty to Suppress Mob.

"I give you in charge, gentlemen certain laws of this state on insurrection, penal code, Sections 55, 56 and 57. This law makes combined resistance to lawful authority punishable with death.

"I give you in charge the laws of this state on mob violence, as laid down in penal code, Sections 362, 363 and 364. You will observe that the law makes it the duty of a sheriff 'to attempt in good faith to suppress mob violence' and if he fails in this duty the law makes him guilty of a misdemeanor. If these code sections have been violated you ought to indict. If they have been faithfully kept, then you ought to commend to the people those who are most responsible for preserving the peace and the dignity of law and order.

"Gentlemen, the responsibility of preserving and enforcing all our laws is not alone upon your court, its officers and jurors, but is upon all our people—those here and everywhere."

GRICE PROBING NEGRO'S DEATH

Expects to Deliver Report on Slaying in Darien Jail to Hardman

TOMORROW MORNING

Atlanta, Oct. 15—(AP)—A preliminary report from Solicitor General John Thomas Grice of the Atlantic circuit of his investigation of the slaying of George Grant, negro, in the Darien jail Sept. 8 is expected to reach Gov. Hardman's office tomorrow.

The Constitution today quoted Grice as saying his inquiry thus far indicated neither the Georgia National Guard nor Sheriff A. S. Poppell of McIntosh county is "blameless" in the mater.

He said he expected to place his information before a December grand jury in that county and while evidence by which the slayer might be identified apparently was being concealed, he did not consider the situation hopeless. He pointed to grand jury powers to examine witnesses under oath which the solicitor could not do.

"There are some extenuating circumstances," the newspaper reported Grice said in a telephone conversation, "to be considered with respect to the activities of both the soldiers and peace officers.

"However, the investigation I have made has developed such information that I cannot concur in the report of Adjt. Gen. Homer C. Parker, in which he maintains that the action of his men was not subject to any criticism.

"The sheriff claims that he was sick when he heard that one of his deputies had been killed.

"I haven't discovered who killed the negro Grant, but I have gathered some threads which I propose to lay before the grand jurors."

Atlanta Ga.

Montgomery County To Renew Efforts To Determine Slayers of G. O. P. Leader.

NEW INFORMATION READY FOR INQUIRY

Officials Seek To Redeem County From Blot of Notorious Mob Rule; Full Study Promised.

BY R. E. POWELL.

MOUNT VERNON, Ga., Nov. 1.—When a Montgomery county grand jury meets here Monday it will have before it a part, if not all, of the information which has been quietly gathered here since Governor L. G. Hardman threw the state's influence behind closely organized efforts of leading citizens to identify the members of a masked mob which last July 29 beat to death S. S. Mincey, widely known negro republican leader in this section of the state.

Mincey, who had been re-elected republican county chairman last April and later named treasurer of a negro Masonic order which had a substantial sum of money in the bank, was taken from his home three miles from this county seat town to a point four or five miles inside the Toombs county line and flogged. He was told by the mob, according to reports of the crime which are credited by local officials, that he must resign and leave the county within 30 days.

Left by the floggers after they had fractured his skull with the butt of an automatic pistol and stamped his face with their feet, Mincey managed to drag himself to the side of the Ailey-Vidalia road about 9 o'clock and begged a ride to his home where his wife summoned Dr. J. W. Palmer. He died the afternoon of July 30.

Citizens Take Action.

A few days after Mincey had been buried, the leading white people of the county held a mass meeting and discussed ways and means of bringing his assailants to justice. The attack on the negro republican politician, who was esteemed by most white people in this section, climaxed a series of floggings which have extended over a period of five years. The county, long humiliated at this sort of thing, became indignant, a sort of local Vigilantes was organized and Governor Hardman was asked to offer a reward of $100 for information leading to the discovery of the guilty parties.

This $100 reward has been multiplied, according to those who have been directing the quiet search for evidence to put before the grand jurors, by local contributions and the leaders of the movement to bring the slayers of Mincey to trial have been assured that other contributions will be made if needed either for prolonging the search for members of the mob or employing private counsel to assist in the prosecution in the event indictments are returned by a grand jury.

Admitting that it has been difficult to gather evidence sufficient to warrant indictments, the Vigilantes have worked cautiously but systematically since a preceding grand jury examined a number of witnesses and urged its successor to "continue zealously the investigation we have begun."

Jury Denounces Mob.

"Having investigated very earnestly every source of evidence at our command," the August grand jury reported to Judge Eschol Graham, of McRae, who presides over the Oconee circuit, "we find no definite clues which would lead to the conviction of the party, or parties, responsible for the death of [illegible] Mincey.

Constitution

"As members of the grand jury, and as individuals, we wish to publish to our fellow citizens that we denounce "mob law" and urge all law-abiding citizens of our county to use their influence to put an end to the practice of flogging, which is an open violation of the law and so often results in permanent disability, and often death.

11-2-30

"Therefore, we heartily recommend and urge our next grand jury to continue zealously the investigation we have begun." The grand jury's report was signed by D. A. McRae, a Mt. Vernon banker, farmer and merchant, as foreman.

Atlanta Ga.

Three reasons have been advanced why Mincey was slain by what most Montgomery county people believe to have been, in personnel, the same members of a gang of hoodlums suspected of previous floggings in this county.

The first, and most credited theory, is that Mincey was taken from his home, beaten and ordered to move from the county because of remarks he made at the Montgomery county republican convention. Two separate groups, "lily whites" and negroes, struggled for control. The "lily whites" named Paul Calhoun, of Tarrytown, and the blacks named Mincey. During the proceedings, Mincey is reported to have declared that the participants in the white party group were not among the best white people of the county, but belonged to the "common trash." This alleged statement, admittedly by Mincey's white friends to have been inflammatory, was harbored by a number of the whites.

A second theory, which seems to lack the support of the first one, is that Mincey had been elected treasurer of the Masonic order over the candidate of a rival group and that members of the defeated faction in the fraternity "took him for a ride."

The third theory, which can be viewed with either of the first two, is that in moving the headquarters of the lodge from Albany to Ailey it was necessary for the secretary, a mulatto woman, to move into Ailey. Mincey is said to have been seen riding through Mt. Vernon and Ailey in a big automobile with this woman and the inference is that his conduct had affronted some of the white people. A few of the latter, not among the group which held an indignation meeting, say that Mincey, a few weeks before his death, had become "uppity."

Previous Flogging Recalled.

The sole theory that links the flogging with internecine warfare among the republicans is the one that links the attack on Mincey with previous floggings. Joe Henry Wolfe, a brother of William O. Wolfe, republican postmaster at Uvalda, has been tried, convicted and sentenced for flogging Fernbrooke Gordon, a relative of a young woman who assisted in prosecuting Wolfe on another charge. Although sentenced to serve 12 months on the chain gang, Joe Henry Wolfe asked for a new trial and it was granted. The case was subsequently nol prossed.

At the same time, republicans throughout this section are keenly concerned over the outcome of the investigation which is expected to develop leads for the grand jury meeting next week. Mincey, who had four times been a delegate to republican national conventions, was a factor in the black-and-tan element of his party in Georgia. He never asked for a job and never held one, it is said, but worked in harmony with Ben Davis when the latter was republican national committeeman for the state.

"Plain Hell," Minister Says.

"It doesn't matter whether Mincey was whipped by a mob of low type whites, high type whites, or negroes, or to what party either Mincey or the group that whipped him belonged," L. C. Underwood, dean of the Montgomery county bar, said, "the men that composed that mob ought to be in prison and I am one of those willing to do everything in my power to put them there.

"Montgomery county," Mr. Underwood said, "is composed, in the main, of fine, substantial citizens who condemn such things and I have every faith that it is going to redeem its good name."

The better sentiment here is typified by a remark made at the indignation meeting in August by Rev. L. S. Barrett, pastor of the Mount Vernon Baptist church—a remark which stirred the county to action: "It's plain hell," Mr. Barrett is quoted as having said, "to live in such a mess."

REVENGE PACT IS REVEALED IN DARIEN "LYNCHING"

Journal and Guide

Solicitor General Says 'Lynching' Was Really A Murder

11-8-30

Norfolk, Va.

ATLANTA, Ga.—Governor Hardman has been informed by Joseph T. Grice, general of the Atlanta Superior Court, that George Grant, was not lynched in the Darien jail on Sept. 5, "but was murdered by two or three men."

His death resulted from "divided responsibility," between civil and military authorities, Grice told the governor, and suggested the manner in which troops were called for services at Darien was not according to law.

He promised to report his findings to the grand jury which will be convened the first Monday in December.

Grice was asked several weeks ago by the governor to investigate the slaying of Grant. It was not announced in the executive's office when his report was submitted but it was made public late last Wednesday without comment from Governor Hardman.

Grant Killed In Cell

The governor asked Grice to make the investigation after Adjt. General Homer C. Parker, said he would investigate the affair as it affected the military.

Grant was killed in his cell while national guard troops were on duty at Darien.

A detachment of Savannah soldiers was ordered to Darien by Governor Hardman. The unit was under command of Col. W. R. Neal, of Savannah.

After Grant was slain, Colonel Neal said the "persons or person who killed the Negro could have entered the jail only through the sheriff's house."

Civil and military investigation were ordered.

Grice issued several informal reports, explaining that the investigation was difficult "because the persons who seem to know about the slaying seem to be involved."

After what he termed a thorough investigation, he made his report to the governor. It bristled with condemnation of the incident.

A report of the military's side of the question was released at the same time by the governor. It was prepared by Col. Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., acting adjutant general.

Journal

Homer C. Parker, adjutant general who was absent from his office campaigning for the comptroller generalship at the time of the Darien disturbances, was informed of the nature of the Solicitor Grice's report, and came immediately to the defense of the military forces.

"If Solicitor Grice is really in earnest and wants to know who killed the Negro, the military department can give him some very definite information," he said. "Otherwise he had better stay off the military department.

11-8-30

"Two or three people have come to Atlanta recently and have told me who killed the Negro in the jail. If the solicitor general will call on us we will be able to help him, but he has not yet communicated with me. If he wants to know, he can easily find out. Dragging the military in was done in an effort to muddy the water and becloud the issues."

Norfolk Va.

His finding dealt solely with orders issued by the governor and circumstances under which they were issued. He said Colonel Neal was sent to Darien with orders "to proceed to the town with evry man fully armed and force and violence are to be used only if necessary to preserve law and order and in preservation of life and property."

The governor's orders, he said stipulated that the national guard should co-operate with civil authorities.

Grice came back with a statement that if Gen. Parker knew anything about the incident, he wanted to know it. He said that if the Adjutant General would not willingly testify, he would subpeona him.

Both sides now have agreed that the Negro was "murdered" and not "lynched."

Gen. Parker said "the slayer admitted he killed Grant and attempted to justify himself because of a pact that he had entered with a deceased official to the effect, that either of them would avenge the untimely death of the other at hands of a Negro."

Everybody Is Exonorated For Lynching Wrong Man

Informer 12-13-30

By JESSE O. THOMAS

Darien, Ga.—This city, to which we awarded the first prize for mob violence sometime ago, comes back for honorable mention. Its second appearance for front page mention and editorial comment was a result of a controversial issue between Adjutant General Parker and Solicitor Grice. During the time the lynching occurred the political pot was boiling hot in the state. Adjutant General Parker was seeking election as Comptroller General of the state and Solicitor Grice wanted to be continued as solicitor from his circuit. It appears that immediately following the lynching of a Negro who had been arrested and put in jail, the only information that Parker could secure was that the Negro came to his death "at the hands of a party or parties unknown." In the meantime the peace officers and militia disagreed as to details of the lynching so that Governor Hardeman called upon Solicitor Grice to investigate the discrepancies in the reports that occurred between the militia and the peace officers. He did not ask Grice to find out who lynched the Negro, but he felt there should not be such unreconciled reports from the two sources, representatives of which were on the scene and were responsible for the prisoner.

Houston, Tex.

Of course Mr. Grice would have made a serious mistake to have offended his constituency if he wanted to be continued in office. Since the militia came from another county, if the blame had to be put on somebody, if there was any doubt as to where the blame should be, at least the solicitor would have been expected to exonerate the sheriff and other peace officers of his circuit. Adjutant General Parker of course was in an entirely different situation. He needed the votes of the people throughout the state and could not afford to incite the ill will of any of the citizens at that time lest it hazard his political fortune.

After the election was over and Adjutant Parker was defeated for comptroller general, he came forth with [illegible] and was ready to tell the whole story. He knew who lynched the Negro and was prepared to tell Solicitor Grice if Grice insisted on keeping the responsibility on the militia. Mr. Parker is accredited with saying through the Atlanta Constitution that he had specific information and had had it as to who killed the Negro. Each succeeding issue of the daily papers for several days carried stories bristling with inconsistencies about the murder of the Negro on the ninth of September. "After the Negro had been killed," said Solicitor Grice, "the machine gun was mounted in front of the courthouse. I do not understand why they made this childish gesture," he continued.

Now comes the third front page story from this section, with the expected and long-looked-for statement of the grand jury's exonerating both the militia and peace officers. It is rather significant that Adjutant General Parker was not called before the grand jury, notwithstand he had repeatedly stated to representatives of the press that he was in possession of information concerning the person responsible for the crime. The jury was made up undoubtedly of serious-minded men. They expect the public to feel they have made a conscientious effort to unearth evidence leading up to the arrest and conviction of the perpetrators of this dastardly crime. The grand jury says, "We have investigated thoroughly the duties imposed upon the militia at Darien and find that they acted in accordance with instructions. Colonel Neal and his troups are entitled to complete exoneration. The grand jury finds that the mob took advantage of the sheriff's indisposition." It will be recalled that the sheriff "got choked" on a glass of water.

Thus ends the chapter! The sheriff was sick, one of his deputies had been wounded, feeling was high and it would be expected that the sheriff under such circumstances would call for reinforcements and put the prisoner in the hands of some officers and warn them of drinking water on that particular day, less they also become suddenly ill. The fact that the grand jury did not call Parker leads the public to suppose that since the election was over Parker is prepared and inclined to put the responsibility where it belongs. There can be little doubt that he has the facts.

SHERIFF RAPS MILITIA HEAD

Says That If He Knows So Much About Darien Case He Should Take Action

DENIES NEGRO BEATEN

Atlanta, Oct. 31—(AP)—New published statements from authorities concerned in the slaying of George Grant, negro, in the Darien, Ga., jail, Sept. 8, today further complicated investigation of the prisoner's death.

Reporting a telephone conversation, the Constitution said Sheriff A. S. Poppell of Darien denounced as a "lie" any intimation that McIntosh county officers knew the identity of the negro's slayer.

Solicitor General J. T. Grice also was quoted as saying he had not learned the killer's identity and further said that a "vengeance pact" theory of the slaying advanced by Adjt. Gen. Homer C. Parker did not conform to information which the solicitor had gathered.

Sheriff Poppell denied Mr. Parker's assertion that Grant was "beaten almost to death" when captured. The sheriff said, however, that Town Marshal J. R. Anderson "tapped the negro on the head with a small pistol" after Grant said he did not kill nor wound any officers.

"Why does Parker sit up there saying such things?" the sheriff was reported as asking. "He ought to know better. If he thinks he can find out who killed Grant why doesn't he come down here and find out."

The sheriff said he knew nothing of any "vengeance pact."

Solicitor Grice said if he understood the Parker statement correctly that the adjutant general "must have been misled" in some of his information that Grant's slayer had admitted the deed and attempted to justify himself because of the pact that he had entered into with a deceased official to the effect that either of them was to avenge the untimely death of the other at the hands of the negro.

Grice pointed out that of the possemen who hunted Grant that Policeman Robert Freeman of Glynn county was slain, Deputy Sheriff Collins of McIntosh county seriously wounded, and Anderson and a civilian by the name of Fisher slightly wounded.

Sheriff Poppell said he had no information with respect to another question Parker directed at Grice. That question was: "Do you know who killed the second negro on Sept. 9?"

~~Jury Exonerates Troops, Officers in Darien Killing~~

An investigation of disturbances which occurred in Darien, Ga., early in September has been completed by a McIntosh county grand jury. The grand jurors returned presentments exonerating the Georgia national guard and the local peace officers who were in Darien at the time of the trouble. Adjutant General Homer C. Parker, who stated that he could furnish the name of George Grant's slayer, was not called before the grand jury. Constitution

Completing its work on Wednesday, the grand jury reported to the superior court that its investigation and examination of witnesses disclosed that at the time the negro was turned over by guardsmen to the McIntosh sheriff that official was sick and proper steps to safeguard the prisoner were not taken. 12-3-30

"Some party or parties unknown," the grand jury then concluded, and so reported to the court, "took advantage of the situation and shot George Grant."

Parker Not Called.

On October 30, when Governor Hardman finally released to the newspapers a report on the investigation of the Darien trouble he had asked Solicitor-General J. T. Grice to make, after he had voiced dissatisfaction with a report received through military channels, The Constitution printed the following: Atlanta Ga.

Asserting that he has been told who killed the negro in the jail cell at Darien on September 8, Adjutant General Homer C. Parker Wednesday said he would furnish this information to Solicitor-General Joseph T. Grice, of the Atlantic circuit, if Grice calls for it, and denounced what he termed "efforts to muddy the water by blaming the militia."

Solicitor Grice, over long distance telephone, was prompt to accept the challenge of the adjutant general, declaring that he will "request all information which General Parker has and will follow it through." The prosecutor said he would make his request for this information within the next few days and that all evidence would be laid before the McIntosh county grand jury when it meets the first week in December.

General Parker stated Thursday that he had not been asked by Solicitor-General Grice to testify before the grand jury. The following dispatch relates the findings reported to the court:

GRANT KILLING DEPLORED, NO INDICTMENTS FOUND

DARIEN, Ga., Dec. 4.—(AP)—County and military officers today stood exonerated by the McIntosh county grand jury of blame in connection with the slaying of George Grant, negro, shot to death in his jail cell here September 8.

Presentments returned by the grand jury after several days' investigation of the killing charged it to circumstances which prevented county officers from taking proper precautions for the safety of the prisoner. The grand jury found that the sheriff was in charge at the time, however, and not the military.

Solicitor-General John C. Grice of the Atlantic circuit presented evidence to the grand jury after an investigation of his own, following which he reported to Governor Hardman that neither local officers nor the military were blameless.

Grant was shot to death in his cell following disorders which occurred when R. L. Freeman, Glynn county police chief, was shot to death in an attempt to arrest Grant and another negro as suspects in a robbery attempt.

A military unit from Savannah, under command of Colonel Roy W. Neal, was called out to restore peace as armed bands sought the negroes in near-by swamps. After Grant was captured he was placed in jail and shot in his cell by an unidentified person or persons.

"We severely condemn the killing of George Grant, a prisoner in the McIntosh county jail, September 8," the presentment said. "From our investigation we find the sheriff of the county was in charge at the time of the killing and proper steps to safeguard the prisoner were not taken by him due to the fact that his physical condition was such that he was unable to cope with the situation and also that he was further handicapped by the fact that his deputy had been wounded and was in the Brunswick hospital.

"We further want to thank officers and citizens of the surrounding territory for the assistance rendered local authorities during the trouble.

Exonerate Troops.

"We have thoroughly investigated the duty imposed on the military called to Darien and find they acted in direct accordance with instructions. They were not negligent. Colonel Neal and his troops are entitled to complete exoneration for all blame and criticism directed at them.

"We want to express appreciation for their services on behalf of the citizens of McIntosh county."

The grand jury directed that a copy of the presentment be sent to Adjutant General Homer C. Parker and to Colonel Roy W. Neal, of Savannah, commander of the troops called here during the disturbances in which Grant was killed.

Colonel Neal resigned recently from the command of the unit.

The grand jury returned a no bill against Freddie Bryant, negro, held in the Darien jail as an accomplice in connection with the murder of R. L. Freeman. An indictment was returned against Dave Chapman, negro, held in jail at Brunswick. He is charged with assault with intent to murder J. A. Anderson, special McIntosh county officer, who was wounded during the disorders in September.

No bills were returned against five women held in connection with the death of Frank Nagal two years ago. No action was taken in the case of Harry Allard, who confessed to Schenectady (N. Y.) police recently he had killed Nagal. Allard is now under sentence on another charge in New York.

PROBE IN LYNCHING TO OPEN THURSDAY

Georgia Officers Ordered To Report Results of Investigation to Governor.

Constitution
2-4-30
Atlanta
Ga

OCILLA, Ga., Feb. 3.—(AP)—Irwin county authorities today had instructions to report to Governor L. G. Hardman the results of their investigation of the lynching of Jimmy Levine, negro, who was seized by a mob after being arrested for attacking and killing a 14-year-old girl.

"Any action of the state will depend upon what the sheriff and the solicitor-general report to me," the governor said in Atlanta in announcing that he had asked information from Solicitor General R. S. Foy and Sheriff W. E. Tyler.

Sheriff Tyler, who was injured slightly when the mob of some 500 persons took Levine from him, said he was accosted shortly before daylight Saturday and there was not light enough at the time to recognize members of the mob. The sheriff had arrested Levine at Mystic, Ga., after an all-night hunt and said the negro confessed the crime to him.

At the sheriff's office it was said that no arrests had been made in the lynching investigation. Solicitor Foy, of Sylvester, said he was engaged in court duties elsewhere and would be unable to come here to open an inquiry until Thursday.

Judge R. Eve, of the Tifton circuit of the superior court, said he planned to consult with Mr. Foy today regarding the investigation.

HARDMAN ORDERS PROBE IN LYNCHING

Irwin County Sheriff and Solicitor-General To Make Report to Governor.

Governor L. G. Hardman announced today that he had telegraphed Sheriff W. C. Tyler and Solicitor General Roy Foy, of Irwin county, to investigate the lynching yesterday of Jimmy Levine, negro, in Ocilla.

The governor said he had instructed Mr. Foy, who lives in Sylvester, and Sheriff Tyler, in Ocilla, to report to him the results of their probe. Until he had received these reports, Governor Hardman said, the state would take no action in the lynching.

"Any action of the state," the governor declared, "will depend upon what the sheriff and the solicitor-general report to me."

Levine was burned by a mob estimated at 500 yesterday morning after being taken from Sheriff Tyler's automobile in the center of Ocilla. The sheriff had arrested the negro in Mystic, Ga., on a charge of attacking and killing a 14-year-old white girl and was taking him to the Irwin county jail.

IRWIN COUNTY OFFICERS TO OPEN PROBE.

OCILLA, Ga., Feb. 2.—(AP)—Irwin county officials said today that an investigation would be made of the lynching here yesterday of Jimmy Levine, negro, but no members of the mob of 500 had yet been arrested or officially identified.

Levine, who had been arrested on a charge of attacking and killing a 14-year-old white girl, was taken from the hands of Sheriff W. C. Tyler in the center of town and carried to a spot about 10 miles away and burned. The sheriff, who was taking Levine to jail after arresting him in Mystic, reported his hand was slightly bruised by the mob which took the negro.

Solicitor-General Roy Foy, who lives in Sylvester, said today that he would come here Thursday to begin an investigation. He said he could not come earlier because of court duties elsewhere.

Judge R. Eve, of the Tifton circuit, which includes Irwin county, said he would consult with Mr. Foy tomorrow on steps to be taken. He said he had just returned from Atlanta and had not yet been able to take any action on the lynching.

The sheriff's office reported today that no headway had been made in identifying members of the mob. Sheriff Tyler said there was not light enough at the time Levine was taken from him to recognize the lynchers.

The girl the negro was charged with attacking and killing was the daughter of a prominent planter. Her body was found Friday and approximately 1,000 men from this and Berrien and Coffee counties joined in searching for her assailant. Sheriff Tyler, however, found Levine in Mystic and said he confessed to the assault and slaying.

The burning of Levine is reported to be the first lynching in Georgia since 1926.

INQUIRY FAILS TO FIND ONE OUT OF THE 400 LYNCHERS

Ocilla, Ga.—After invoking the Mosaic law of an eye for an eye, with added fire for vengeance, the mob that burned a young negro on a funeral pyre early today had vanished into the countryside as silently as they first appeared. Attempted investigation of their act appeared futile.

The negro, Jimmy Irvine, was snatched from the protecting custody of Sheriff W. E. Tyler, who was slightly wounded in the struggle.

The negro was stabbed to death in the neck, exactly as he had stabbed the 14-year-old daughter of a farmer after he had attacked her Friday afternoon. The fire was a gesture, the negro already dead.

The body was taken from the ashes left by the gas-soaked logs and suspended from a tall tree whence county officials planned to recover it for burial.

coroner's inquest this afternoon failed to fix the blame. None seemed to know the identity of any of the 400 incensed men who vanished into the early dawn as silently as the furry wood-things themselves.

Sheriff Tyler's injury was a superficial one, in his hand struck by one of the mob. They had riddled his automobile as a warning to him when they discovered the man they had sought all night was his prisoner and within a few hundred feet of jail-barred safety.

Roy Foy, solicitor general, announced that as soon as he returns from holding court at other points in the circuit, he will launch an investigation.

The Tribune carries a news article about the probing of the death of Mr. Wilkins, the Pullman porter whose body was found near Locust Grove, on the line of the Southern Railway, this state. The Pullman Porters Brotherhood is taking the initiative by employing one of the ablest lawyers to direct the movement. It is quite a reflection on Georgia to allow this crime to remain unsolved without the least effort to investigate it. Common decency and justice should demand it but so far without the least avail. The Brotherhood is to be commended for this effort, and should be given every possible aid. Too often have crimes of this kind been committed upon our people and allowed to remain unsolved and the perpetrators permitted to stalk about embolden to continue similar diabolical deeds. It would mean so much to society to have this case fully probed and the guilty ones brought to justice and given their just desert.

Walter Hammond, alias Sausage, was indicted for rape September 2. He was accused of the alleged crime of rape on an 11-year-old Negro girl, Monday, August 18, and was finally run down and arrested Saturday, August 23, by Officers R. T. Bennett and C. W. Morgan, of the Atlanta police force. He was arraigned on a technical charge in the recorder's court and bound over by the recorder on a $2,000 bond.

Much interest is being manifested in the outcome of the trial. The accused has employed Attorney John H. Geer to defend him.

More and more secrecy is being thrown around the killing of J. H. Wilkins, Pullman porter, who was found dead in a patch of woods near Locust Grove, Ga., early on April 5, 1930. 5-9-30

It was learned here this week that other porters on the Kansas City—Florida run have been permanently shifted from the run so that all news which they may have of the killing or the circumstances leading up to it will not leak out along the line where Wilkins worked.

Porter Richard Smith, who testified at the coroner's inquest in Georgia that he heard a Pullman conductor say "I have all the evidence I need" has been switched from the Jacksonville—St. Louis run to Jacksonville—New York. Other porters on through cars either from Miami to Kansas City or from Jacksonville to Kansas City or intermediate cities have also been switched to prevent their talking.

Announcement from New York that Frank P. Walsh the great labor lawyer would take the case for the widow of Wilkins has stirred the country and all local organizations of the brotherhood have started campaigns to raise the necessary funds.

The Pullman company and the Southern Railway officials have admitted they have some information, but refuse to give it out. The brotherhood in its appeal to the country is asking where was the Pullman conductor when Wilkins was mysteriously slain? How did a porter get off a train which officials say did not stop at Locust Grove? Where was the train conductor?

The fight to bring the facts to light is regarded as a fight for the safety of all railroad employees as others could be killed if the railroad companies or the Pullman company make no efforts to protect them while on duty.

PARKER WILL PROBE KILLINGS AT DARIEN

Troops Criticized for Failure To Prevent Slaying of Murderer.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Adjutant-General Homer C. Parker said Friday that he will go to Savannah in a few days to learn for himself what part national guardsmen played during disturbances at Darien last Monday in which a police officer and two negroes were killed.

He emphasized that no official military investigation had been ordered.

The adjutant-general said he had been informed by Brigadier General Robert J. Travis at Savannah that the troops had been criticized in some quarters for not preventing the slaying of one of the negroes, who was shot to death in his cell, after being captured and identified as one of the two who shot the officer to death.

Troops were sent from Savannah following threats of disturbances after the slaying of the officer who sought to arrest two negroes as suspects in an attempted robbery.

Adjutant General Parker said his meager and unofficial information indicated troops who captured the negro in the swamps already had turned him over to local officers and gone back to hunt for his companion, and that he was in custody of local officers when he was shot to death.

Atlanta, Ga.

He said the same reports were to the effect that the slaying of the negro was the act of an individual and not the result of a mob storming the jail.

Parker said he had had no personal contact with the case, having been out of touch with his office campaigning for comptroller-general when it occurred. He said he would go to Savannah as soon as business in connection with the primary was cleaned up.

PARKER WILL MAKE OWN INVESTIGATION

Adjutant General States He Will Go Into Conduct of National Guard During Darien Trouble.

Governor L. G. Hardman Saturday directed Joseph Thomas Grice, solicitor-general of the Atlantic circuit, at Glenville, to make an investigation of the lynching of George Grant, negro, at Darien on September 8 and report to the executive his findings.

When apprised of the governor's request by telephone the solicitor-general said:

"I doubt if anything will come of the investigation as local people who know about it seem to be involved."

Governor Orders Probe.

A telegram to Solicitor-General Grice late Saturday was forwarded after Adjutant General Homer C. Parker had issued a statement in which he said that he would make an investigation "into the conduct of that portion of the guard that was on duty in Darien on September 8." The adjutant-general did not indicate when or how his inquiry would be undertaken but indications at the capitol were that his findings would not be made public until the latter part of October.

Although he had not received the governor's telegram, the Atlanta solicitor-general, when apprised of its contents by The Constitution, said:

"I will be glad to make the investigation for the governor but I will be engaged in court all next week. The McIntosh county grand jury does not meet until the first Monday in December and it would naturally take the case up at that time.

Blames "Local People."

"However, I expect to be there week after next and I'll look into the matter and make a report to the governor. The judge of the circuit, has the authority to convene a special term of court but he is ordinarily reluctant to do so."

Asked if he thought the lynching was done by a peace officer, Solicitor-General Price said:

"I think the lynching was done by local people. I doubt if anything will come of the investigation, though, as local people who know about it seem to be involved."

Governor Hardman's move to get at the bottom of the Darien lynching followed not only the Parker statement, which expressed a confidence that the troops would be vindicated, but came after Saturday papers had announced that an investigation would be made and that in the inquiry the national guard officers would contend that Grant was killed by a Georgia peace officer in whose custody he had been placed while soldiers were searching for a companion believed to have been implicated in the killing of one county officer and the shooting of two others.

Hardman's Telegram.

The executive's message to the Atlantic solicitor-general read:

"Reports come to me that there are some discrepancies in reports regarding lynching of negro at Darien. Please investigate and report to me your findings."

General Parker, in a statement, explained that any investigation other than that concerned with the military and its part in the Darien trouble would be "going beyond the scope of my official duties." In this connection he said:

"I believe it to be my solemn duty as the military commander of this state to cause an investigation to be made into the conduct of that portion of the guard that was on duty in Darien on September 8. This I shall do at the earliest possible moment, believing that the inquiry will result in vindication of our troops, both officers and men."

The adjutant general wo... not add anything to his formal statement.

Troops Ordered Out.

One peace officer, R. J. Anderson, of Darien, was shot by two negroes whom he had found loitering near the Darien bank. When other peace officers started in pursuit of the negroes, Robert L. Freeman, acting Glynn county police chief, was slain and Deputy Sheriff Collins, of McIntosh county, and John Fisher, of Darien, were wounded. Grant, one of the two negroes, was captured and identified by Anderson as his assailant. He was removed to the jail by Sheriff Poppell and militiamen and shortly afterward killed.

Troops had been ordered to Darien early on the morning of September 8 by Colonel Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., acting adjutant general in the absence of General Parker, after a conversation with Governor L. G. Hardman. Upon reports from peace officers and Colonel W. R. Neal, who commanded a unit of the 118th field artillery, stationed at Savannah, which had been ordered to Darien to quiet the town, Governor Hardman issued a proclamation placing the town under control of the military authorities.

On the following day, September 9, Willie Bryan, another negro, at first believed to have been Grant's accomplice in the burglaries and to have been with him when he shot Anderson, was killed by peace officers who said they were trying to arrest him.

Parker Statement.

Darien became quiet after the second shooting and the troops were withdrawn. Developments Friday in Atlanta, supported by a statement issued by Colonel Neal at Savanah, indicated that the military authorities of the state, resenting keenly criticism which has been directed at them, have planned to get at the bottom of the Grant killing and at least absolve themselves of any dereliction of duty while in control of the situation. The telegram of Governor Hardman to the solicitor general of the Atlantic circuit was interpreted also as indicating the executive would press for a thorough investigation of the whole affair.

General Parker's statement said:

"The press of this and other states has been carrying news stories and editorials with reference to the happenings at Darien, Ga., on September 8, ult., that reflect on the good name and reputation of the Georgia national guard and bring into question the efficiency, courage and honor of one of its regimental commanders.

"As head of the military forces of the state of Georgia I cannot permit these statements to go unchallenged. I hope to be able to vindicate the Georgia national guard and every individual connected with the state military service. I am concerned about this feature of the controversy only. I shall not attempt to investigate or inquire into the conduct of the civil authorities or other persons not connected with the military service. To do so would be going beyond the scope of my official duties.

"The members of the Georgia national guard, both officers and men, serve the state without any compensation whatsoever from the state, except when called out by the governor to quell a riot or disperse a mob, and they perform most unpleasant duties in a manner that should commend them to all our people.

"I am loath to believe that there is an officer or man in the Georgia national guard today who would shirk or shrink from his duty in an emergency such as the one that existed at Darien on September 8. I believe it to be my solemn duty as the military commander of this state to cause an investigation to be made into the conduct of that portion of the guard that was on duty in Darien on September 8. This I shall do at the earliest possible moment believing that the inquiry will result in vindication of our troops, both officers and men."

GENERAL PARKER TO PROBE KILLING.

MACON, Ga., Oct. 3.—(AP)—The Telegraph says it has learned from an authoritative source that national guard officers will contend that a Georgia peace officer entrusted with the custody of George Grant, negro, in the McIntosh county jail at Darien, killed his charge September 8 while soldiers were seeking another suspect. The contention, the paper says, is to be advanced in an investigation of the affair to be made by Adjutant General Homer C. Parker.

The military forces, the paper says, also will hold that no mob was at or about the jail when the slaying was committed.

Sheriff Blames Mob.

The death of the negro was attributed by Sheriff Poppell, of McIntosh county, to the violence of an armed mob which disregarded the pleas of Colonel W. R. Neal, of Savannah, in charge of the guard unit, and shot the prisoner in his cell. It will be the contention of the military department that the military contingent left the premises in search of another negro wanted for the same charge as Grant had been.

Both negroes are said to have fired at a night watchman the night before when he attempted to arrest them for loitering near a bank. They were followed to a swamp retreat by officers, and in a gun battle which was precipitated by their discovery, Police Chief Robert L. Freeman was killed. R. J. Anderson, a deputy sheriff of McIntosh county; John Fisher, of Darien, and J. H. Collins, another deputy sheriff, were wounded.

Grant was captured, however, and was taken to jail. The other negro, Fred Bryan, escaped.

Soldiers Not at Jail.

According to information received by the Telegraph, the military department will contend that Grant was taken to the jail and delivered to the sheriff; that he was turned over to the sheriff and several deputies; that he was securely locked in a cell in the McIntosh county jail in the presence of the national guardsmen. Then the military contention will be, the guard contingent left the jail to search for Bryan, the Telegraph learned, and no "unauthorized person" entered it.

Sheriff Poppell said that his attention was diverted from what was taking place in the jail by the news that one of his deputies had been killed.

Adjutant General Homer C. Parker, who will conduct the investigation, was not on duty at the time of the near-riot, when the whole city was placed under military rule for a time. August 14 Governor L. G. Hardman designated Colonel Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., to serve in the capacity of acting adjutant general while General Parker conducted his campaign for the office of comptroller-general.

Posses Dispersed.

Since the affair at Darien General Parker has been unable to carry out an official investigation, due to the absence of Colonel Neal from the state. The inquiry has been withheld pending his return.

The matter to be brought out at the investigation is contradictory to reports from Darien at the time of the shooting. At that time it was said that the guard group was in the jail, and controlled machine guns commanding the situation, but that the mob rushed in behind the officers taking the negro to jail, and, defying the guardsmen, murdered the negro and left him in the jail.

When matters reached a climax at Darien, the governor issued a proclamation turning the town over to military rule. Armed posses combing the swampland were dispersed and all except authoritative searchers were sent away from the scene.

Colonel Neal and his unit of guardsmen rushed to the scene when a call for help reached Savannah. Later, approximately 150 men of the 118th field artillery from Savannah were sent to Darien. At nightfall, however, all but 50 of the guardsmen had returned to Savannah.

Willie Bryan, mistaken for the negro who had been with Grant, was killed the next day.

THE REPORTED PROBE OF THE THOMAS COUNTY KILLING

It has been currently reported that federal officers have been sent to Thomas county for the purpose of investigating the horrible incident that occurred here last week. The report has not been verified, although there have been rumors of many and various efforts to get at the facts of the situation and to establish for court procedure and for publicity the personnel of the mob that killed a negro and the part of the mob that arranged and carried out the horrible aftermath.

This may not be true. Still it may be true and the report that the matter will be presented to the federal grand jury is one of many that have been given no little credence. The grand jury of Thomas county seems to be presented with this and other equally distressing conditions and there is little doubt that it will be a season of great turmoil.

There is no doubt of the effort on the part of many responsible citizens to run down the facts and to present them in as cold and definite a manner as possible to the court authorities for action. It will then rest with that body to act on their oaths and under the facts. The indictments, if they are secured, will be taken in charge by the court authorities and undoubtedly will be given an early hearing. It is generally and expressly stated that the end of the matter is not yet seen and will not be until the courts have had their inning.

PEACE OFFICER SLAYER OF NEGRO, GUARDSMEN SAY

Constitution

Charges, Which Are Backed by Statement From Commanding Officer, Are Denied by Sheriff.

10-4-30

Charges that George Grant, negro, was killed by a Georgia peace officer instead of a mob, as reported after the negro had been locked in the McIntosh county jail on a charge of having attempted to murder Deputy Sheriff Collins, of that county, are being investigated by Adjutant General Homer C. Parker.

Atlanta Ga.

The Macon Telegraph, in an Associated Press dispatch last night stated it had learned from an authoritative source that national guard officers, presumably of the 118th field artillery, one unit of which was called out after the negro had fired on the deputy sheriff September 8, would contend Grant was killed by a peace officer after he had been entrusted with the prisoner's care and while the soldiers were seeking a second suspect.

Jail Yard Guarded.

In a statement from Savannah, Colonel W. R. Neal, who commanded the unit of the 118th field artillery, said he placed a guard in the jail yard—one of the two ways of entering the jail. "The person or persons who killed the negro," Colonel Neal said, "could have entered only through the sheriff's house." The sheriff's house was the other entrance.

Colonel Neal's statement was flatly contradicted by Sheriff Poppell in a telephone message to The Constitution from the Darien jail.

"I don't know who killed the negro and I don't care. If you want to find out, ask the Savannah national guard officers who were here. I don't think there was a single soldier on guard at the time Grant was killed."

General Parker, reached by telephone early this morning at his Campbellton road home, declined to discuss the case in any particular or to deny or comfirm the statement that he is investigating the circumstances surrounding the negro's death. "I have nothing to say at this time," he declared, "and I can't say definitely when I will have a statement to make."

Colonel Neal, in a telephone conversation with The Constitution, said he knew nothing of an investigation by General Parker. He asserted that he did not know who killed the negro and added the following statement:

"These are the facts and anyone can draw his own conclusions: When the negro was captured, national guardsmen placed him in a cell, in the care of the sheriff.

"There were two ways of entering the jail—a door leading from the sheriff's house, and the other leading into the jail from the jail yard.

"I had a guard posted at the jail-yard gate. The person or persons who killed the negro could have entered only through the sheriff's house. At that time the sheriff was ill. There was no mob."

Denial by Sheriff.

Sheriff Poppell, from his home in Darian, stoutly denied that any guard had been placed at the jail entrance—as asserted by Colonel Neal and as reported to be charged by other national guard officers—but admitted that anybody could have gotten into the jail after Grant had been locked in the bullpen.

"I don't know who did it," he said, "and don't care. If you want to know, ask the Savannah national guard officers who were down here.

"I only had one deputy," the sheriff said, "and he was already wounded. After the negro had been put in the jail, the peace officers and the soldiers all left to hunt for the other negro in the woods.

"I don't think there was one single soldier on guard at the time Grant was killed.

"I don't know who killed him. I was summoned on the coroner's jury and we asked around but nobody seemed to know who did it.

"Was there any mob there?" he was asked.

"No, there wasn't any mob—there was the usual crowd of people and about 12 or 13 sheriffs here from other counties. I never said a mob killed the negro.

Report of Collins' Death.

"A few minutes after I locked Grant in his cell and went into that part of the jail building where I live my two daughters came running to me crying. They said that Deputy Sheriff Collins, who was shot earlier in the morning, had just died. I was getting a drink of water at the time, and the news of Collins' death shocked me so I choked on the drink of water, and was almost overcome. It developed later that the report about Collins was not true; he did not die.

"I don't know who killed Grant. There had been a crowd around the jail when the negro was locked up, but everybody was cleared out after the negro was put in his cell.

"Whoever killed the negro must have slipped into the jail, but who it was I do not know, and have never said that I did know."

Sheriff Poppell [illegible] he had not seen Ge[illegible] was not apprised of his intention to go there to make an investigation.

PARKER ISSUES REPORT TODAY ON DARIEN LYNCHING

Declares That There Can Be No Justified Critisim of National Guard

Atlanta, Oct. 10. (AP)—Adjutant General Homer C. Parker reported to Governor Hardman today that he could find no cause for criticising the Georgia National Guard's handling of the recent disturbances at Daren.

General Parker's report to Governor Hardman said: "I can find no cause, or reason, for criticising Colonel W. R. Neal or any other officer or man of the Georgia National Guard who performed services at Darien on Sept. 8 and 9 purusant to the orders transmitted to the detachment commander by the acting adjutant general."

Colonel Neal in his report went into lengthy detail from the time of his being ordered to Darien with a detachmetn of guardsmen until the detachment was relieved from duty.

He told of arriving in Darien and taking part in the search of the swamp. He said George Grant, the negro later killed in the jail, came to the edge of the swamp and surrendered, an officer of the guard taking charge of a pistol with which the negro was armed.

Colonel Neal said the negro was taken to the second floor of the jail, locked in a cell and left in custody of the sheriff of McIntosh county and he returned to the swamp.

Fifteen minutes after reaching the swamp, Colonel Neal said, he was recalled to the jail and on arriving back he heard two voices coming from the jail, and he was under the impression that the sheriff was questioning the prisoner, who previously had implicated another negro in the shooting.

"I do not know who fired the three shots," Colonel Neal's report said, "No one came from the door leading into the jail yard and there was a considerable crowd in and about the sheriff's home, porch and yard." He fixed the actual time of the shooting of the negro at 9:25 A. M.

Colonel Neal told of taking charge of the situation under a proclamation by Governor Hardman and of the capture by peace officers of three other negroes, Fred Bryant, Sr., Fred Bryant, Jr., and James Bryant, who were sent to Savannah under a guard of soldiers from his detachment.

The report also related the capture of William Henry Bryant, also a negro, after a duel with a peace officer in which the negro was wounded and died the following day in the jail at Savannah.

In closing his report, Colonel Neal praised several officers under his command at Darien and said further:

Whitewashing the Guard

The Telegraph is disappointed in Adjutant General Homer Parker's investigation of the Darien affair. We had been led to expect that the adjutant general would go to Darien and Savannah and hold an actual official investigation of a situation in which a Negro in custody of the National Guard—technically, if not actually—was killed in a cell in jail.

It turns out that General Parker's investigation consisted of a letter from Colonel W. R. Neal, in charge of the military detachment at Darien, and a letter from the mayor of Darien to the acting adjutant general of the Georgia National Guard during the time General Parker was on leave and at the time of the killing at Darien.

Macon Telegraph

An official personal investigation would have been of great aid to the civil authorities who are also charged with making an investigation of the conduct of the civil authorities, since the contention of the National Guard is that the Negro was killed inside the jail by a peace officer to whom he had been delivered by the National Guardsmen. That sort of investigation would have developed, indirectly the actual occurrences at Darien.

Instead, General Parker has been content to absolve the National Guard and to report to the governor, "I can find no cause, or reason, for criticizing Col. W. R. Neal or any other officer or man of the Georgia National Guard who performed services at Darien on Sept. 8 pursuant to the orders transmitted to the detachment commander by the acting adjutant general." 10-11-30

However, that does not absolve the guard. When the National Guard is called out, it is called to protect a prisoner, to put down mobs and to preserve peace and good order. General Parker says that he has no criticism of the guardsmen at Darien. The criticism, then, must rest upon the acting adjutant general who sent the guardsmen to Darien without orders sufficiently specific to require them to protect the prisoner after he had been captured. The guard is not called out to capture prisoners; it is summoned to duty to protect them. In that it failed woefully, since the guard's prisoner was killed in jail.

Macon Ga.

Governor Hardman should not be content with General Parker's report nor should he be content with a civil investigation if it is as half-hearted as the military investigation has been. He ought to insist that the guard help to fix responsibility for the murder of their prisoner.

Lynching atrocities have reached such proportions in Georgia that no community can feel safe from them. Public apathy is the greatest encouragement to them. Official apathy is positive inducement to more of them. The governor has a fine opportunity to close his administration with defnite, positive action taht will make a contribution to Georgia's advancement. We can not expect to attract civilized people if we advertise ourselves through lynchings, and worse, through official condonation, as barbarians.

It is not enough for good people to say that they do not approve them. They ought to show it by pressing officials into making a concrete display of our disapproval.

DEMANDS INQUIRY IN GEORGIA LYNCHING

MOB'S PRESENCE IS DENIED

Colonel Says He Posted a Guard, but County Officer Declares No Soldier Was on Watch.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Oct. 4.—Following the revelation of alleged new facts in the recent lynching of a Negro at Darien, Ga., which was supposed to have been the act of a mob that defied a National Guard unit commanded by Colonel W. R. Neal of the 118th Field Artillery, Savannah, Governor Hardman this afternoon ordered an investigation of the affair.

The Governor's demand for an inquiry was contained in a telegram to Joseph T. Grice, solicitor general of the Atlantic Circuit at Glenville, as follows:

"Reports come to me that there are some discrepancies in reports regarding lynching of Negro at Darien. Please investigate and report to me your findings."

Governor Hardman's action followed an announcement that Adjt. Gen. Homer C. Parker is investigating charges that the Negro, George Grant, was killed by a Georgia peace officer instead of a mob, as reported after the Negro had been locked in the McIntyre County jail on a charge of having attempted to murder Deputy Sheriff Collins of that county.

Says Militia Guarded Jail.

When Mr. Grice received the Governor's instructions, he said: "The grand jury of McIntyre County does not meet until Dec. 1. I will investigate, but I do not think anything can be discovered, as those who know the facts were probably involved in the case."

In a statement from Savannah, Colonel Neal said he placed a guard in the jail yard.

"When the Negro was captured National Guardsmen placed him in a cell, in the care of the Sheriff.

"There were two ways of entering the jail, a door leading from the sheriff's house, and the other leading into the jail from the jail yard.

"I had a guard posted at the jail-yard gate. The person or persons who killed the Negro could have entered only through the Sheriff's house. At that time the Sheriff was ill. There was no mob."

Informed of Colonel Neal's statement, Sheriff Poppell denied that any guard had been placed at the jail entrance, but admitted that any one could have gotten into the jail after Grant had been locked in the bullpen.

Sheriff Denies Mob Was Present.

"I don't know who did it," he said, "and don't give a d——n. If you want to know, ask the Savannah National Guard officers who were down here.

"I only had one deputy, and he was already wounded. After the Negro had been put in the jail the peace officers and the soldiers all left to hunt for the other Negro in the woods.

"I don't think there was any single soldier on guard at the time Grant was killed.

"I don't know who killed him. I was summoned on the coroner's jury and we asked around, but nobody seemed to know who did it.

"There wasn't any mob. There was the usual crowd of people and about twelve or thirteen sheriffs here from other counties. I never said a mob killed the Negro."

FIFTH ARREST MADE FOR NEGRO SHOOTING

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Oct. 7.—With the arrest, near Mayo, Fla., of a white man, Jack Bradley, Sheriff Gordon Davis, of Thomas county, feels that he has materially tightened the chain of evidence in connection with the recent fatal shooting of Lacy Mitchell, a colored man of the Five Forks district of the county. 10-8-30

Mitchell was regarded as a star witness in a pending case against two white men who have been charged with criminal assault on a negro woman. Men, said to be white, and masked, entered Mitchell's home and shot him. Four white men were arrested next day in Brooks county, and the arrest of Bradley brings the number under arrest to five.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Oct. 25.—The grand jury for the autumn term of Thomas superior court in its presentments, announced today, stated that much time was spent in investigation of the lynching in September of Willie Kirkland, young negro man, three times identified by his victim as the person who attempted a criminal assault on a 9-year-old white schoolgirl, but that, "after examination of many witnesses, many of whom are prominent men of Thomas county, it was necessary to close the investigation without an indictment for lack of evidence."

The grand jury found indictments against two white men, Henry Price and C. V. Moore, charged with committing a criminal assault on a negro woman, and also indicted Jack Bradley and A. E. Allen, white, on a charge of murdering Lacy Mitchell, negro man, who had been regarded as a star witness in the criminal assault on the negro woman. These cases will all come up for trial here in superior court next week.

In the lynching investigation a number of well-known persons, including capitalists, businessmen, newspapermen and men in official positions received summons and appeared to testify. A cross sectional analysis of their testimony, as reiterated in public to acquaintances, emphasizes the impossibility of determining which men in the crowd that took Kirkland from the sheriff and his deputies, in the county stockade yard, were trying to aid the officers to get the negro away, and which ones were endeavoring to take him away and lynch him.

10-22-30

Thomasville, Ga., October 21st—Under istructions from Judge Wm. E. Thomas, the Thomas county grand jury this week has under consideration the lynching of Sept. 25th of Willie Kirkland, young Negro accused of attacking a white school girl.

Savannah Ga.

The Negro was taken from Sheriff Davis and shot to death after being identified by the victim of the attack. The mob which had gathered around the county stockade overpowered the sheriff and his posse as the officers sought to take the Negro to another jail for safekeeping.

Judge Thomas avoided specific mention of names in his charge but carefully explained to the grand jury the duty imposed by law in cases of mob action, and told members of the body it was their duty to ascertain the facts and fix the blame.

More Whitewash

The report of the McIntosh county grand jury which has been investigating the murder of George Grant, a Negro prisoner under custody of the National Guard and the sheriff in the McIntosh county jail, on Sept. 8, is as fine a coat of whitewash as anybody ever applied to a barn.

Telegraph

It says that the Negro was killed because the sheriff had not taken proper precautions to guard him but that the sheriff was sick and "parties unknown" took advantage of the situation. The National Guard, which had more than 100 men in town at the time, is praised for what it did, although the grand jury does not mention what, if any, precautions the guardsmen took to keep the Negro from being shot in jail.

Macon, Ga.

In other words, the grand jury condemns the killing, but everybody connected with it was a nice fellow and all that.

TRIAL DATES SET IN LYNCHING CASE

Judge Will Hear Charges Against Four Suspects Late in December.

[Special to The Indianapolis Star.]

MARION, Ind., Nov. 20.—Judge O. D. Clawson of the Grant Circuit court today surprised defense attorneys and court attaches by setting trial dates for four men charged with lynching who had pleaded not guilty in his court yesterday.

The four men, Everett Clarke, Chester Pease, Philip Boyd and Robert Beshire, will be tried Monday, Dec. 29; Tuesday, Dec. 30, and Wednesday, Dec. 31. The calendar also includes for trial during this time Arnold Waller, Charles Lennon and A. M. Praim, three lynching suspects who have not been arrested.

Fewer Dismissals.

Eighteen jury trials are arranged for the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh weeks.

"I am tired of having so many criminal cases hanging fire," Judge Clawson was quoted as saying to his court attaches, "I intend to clear the docket."

It is significant that only four minor criminal cases have been dismissed since the opening of the fall term, Sept. 2. It is believed that continual criticism of wholesale dismissal of cases in previous years has resulted in the present restraint on the part of the prosecuting attorney, Harley Hardin.

Beshire U. S. Citizen.

When informed this afternoon that Attorney General James M. Ogden had intimated he would start deportation proceedings against him, Robert Beshire, a native Assyrian and one of the four now facing trial for lynching of two Negroes here, tonight produced papers showing that he became a full-fledged American citizen twelve years ago.

Beshire was examined for army service when he enlisted during the world war, and was given a classification of 1-A. He became ill later and was confined in a government hospital, he said. After being released from there, his weakened condition prevented his joining the army.

Judge Claims Marion Lynch Cases Trivial

Sets Trials of 4 Aside For More 'Important' Criminal Cases

Sheriff Campbell Not There; Attys. Seek To Quash Charges

(Special to The American)

MARION, Ind. — Circuit Court Judge O. D. Clawson Wednesday told four alleged leaders of the mob which lynheed Tom Shipp and Abe Smith August 7 that he considered certain criminal cases he had on docket more "important" than their trials.

The four men, Robert Beshire, 45; Phillip Boyd, 17; Everett Clark, 22, and Chester Pease, 32, were released on bonds of $2,000 each without having dates for their trials set.

Ogden There

Attorney General James M. Ogden was in court in person. It was he who filed charges several weeks ago against seven men and Sheriff Jake Campbell. The other three charged with leadership have not as yet been apprehended.

Prosecutor Harley Hardin of Grant county was not in court. He was reported attending an Oddfellows convention at Indianapolis. Sheriff Campbell was also out of town, being reported in Akron, O., where he had gone to take a prisoner.

Immediately after the pleas were made by the defendants, their attorneys filed motions for separate trials.

Motion to Quash

Attorneys for Sheriff Campbell who was charged with neglect of duty in conection with the lynching, recently filed a motion to quash the affidavit which Attorney Genral Ogden filed against him. This motion acted as a stay on the sheriff's arraignment. He has not been arraigned and is at liberty on his own recognizance. Sheriff Campbell is republican county chairman of Grant county and a member of Gov. Harry G. Leslie's crime commission.

Judge Clawson explained that he was not ready to set the trial dates for the defendants because he had set aside the first two weeks of his trial docket for cvill cases. He said that there were several criminal cases pending which he considered more important than those of the alleged rioters.

Attorney General Ogden and Judge Clawson shook hands warmly when the Attorney General appeared in court. There was no sign of any strained feeling between the two, although press dispatches last week quoted Judge Clawson as bitterly criticising Ogden. It was learned Wednesday that Judge Clawson wrote to Ogden denying the press reports.

OPINIONS EXCUSE MANY

[Special to The Indianapolis News]

MARION, Ind., December 30.—Temporarily stalled in its attempt to obtain a jury to hear the trial against Robert Beshire, age forty-five, alleged lyncher, the state today had received permission to call a special venire of twenty-five men. This is in addition to a special venire of fifty called last week.

One prospective juryman after another was disqualified Monday because of a preconceived opinion, prejudice and failure to give a fair and impartial trial. When court adjourned forty-five prospective jurors had been called and none definitely passed by either state or defense. There were eight men in the jury box, but neither side had used all its peremptory challenges.

The chief question asked the veniremen by E. H. Graves defense attorney, was whether the men would be prejudiced by the fact that Beshire is not a naturalized citizen or whether they would be influenced because the case was being prosecuted by two deputies of the attorney-general's office.

State attorneys built the principal part of their questioning around the fact that Claude Deeter was killed by two colored youths. They asked each veniremen whether he would be influenced by this fact or that the men who were lynched were colored.

Seven Alleged Marion Mob Leaders Are Named In Affidavit By Special Investigators Assigned To The Case

10-18-30.

MARION, Ind., October 17.—Herbert Cameron, who it is said, was with Smith and Shipp when Claude Deter, age 23, white, was killed and his girl companion was allegedly attacked, here last August, was granted a change of venue to Madison county in the circuit court, Wednesday. Attorneys R. L. Bailey and R. L. Brokenburr, of Indianapolis, are defense attorneys.

Cameron's companions, Smith and Shipp, were taken from the Grant County jail by a mob and lynched on the court house lawn here, August 7.

Immediately following the arrival here of Attorney General James M. Ogden, Wednesday, from the state capitol it became known that affidavits charging Jacob Campbell, sheriff of Grant county, with neglect of duty and seven other men with participation in the lynching of the two youths several weeks ago, were to be filed in the Grant county circuit court by the state attorney.

MARION, Ind., Oct. 17.—Fixed in his determination to see that justice be done in the notorious Smith-Shipp lynching case, Attorney General James M. Ogden, arrived here Wednesday from the state capital armed to the teeth with affidavits for the arrest of seven alleged leaders of the mob which lynched the two youths here last August.

Sheriff Campbell together with seven other men, were named in affidavits by the veteran state attorney as a result of investigation conducted in the Marion lynching by representatives of the attorney general's office.

Campbell Must Go

Action against the sheriff will be based on the Grant county official's failure to prevent the two prisoners from being taken from the jail at Marion. Legal proceedings embodying a demand for the removal of the Grant county sheriff from office will be instituted here immediately by Ogden.

The seven men are charged in the affidavits with actively participating in the lynching of Smith and Shipp, who previously were alleged to have admitted robbing and shooting Deeter.

Mob Leaders Named

The seven alleged mob leaders named in the affidavits are Charles Lennon, Everett Clarke, Arnold Walters, Bob Beshire, Chester Pease, Boyd and Prainn. The first names of the latter two are missing.

All the men named in the affidavits are residents of Marion. Penalty for conviction for the offense is death or life impirsonment.

The attorney general was accompanied by Merl Wall, deputy attorney general and Arthur Bruner, investigator for Ogden's office. Wall and Bruner signed the affidavits.

Issues Statement

In making the names public, Ogden issued a statement in which he pointed that local authorities had failed to prosecute in this lynching and it becomes the duty of the attorney general to do so.

The statement follows in part:

"The attorney general's offfice immediately gave aid and assistance to the Grant county authorities in the investigation of this crime and collected much evidence.

"At the request, however, of some of the local authorities, the attorney general's office delayed further direct action until the case had been considered by the local machinery of the law, that is, the Grant county officials.

"Those officers have now reported and have found no indictments. Under the law it becomes the plain and positive duty of the attorney general to take such legal action as is set out in Section 2534 of Burns Statutes 1926."

There follows the citation, and the statement continues:

"The duty of the attorney general is plain and positive under this statute. He is to prosecute. He has no authority to judge the case himself. That must be done by the court and the jury.

Not Matter Of Meddling

"This statute stares the attorney general square in the face. The road is clear and distinct. Who will say that he, in good conscience can detour it?

"As a public office is a public trust, in this instance the office of the attorney general has the trust of the public in prosecuting the orderly process of the law when a lynching occurs.

"It is not a matter of state meddling or not meddling with local affairs in communities. The lawmakers of Indiana have seen fit to make it a state affair and to ordain that the attorney general take orderly legal proceedings when lynchings occur to the end that law and order may be preserved throughout the state.

Protect State's Good Name

"It thus was provided that when the State of Indiana has been disgraced by a lynching the good name of the state should be protected by the highest prosecuting authority in the state. It was made the duty of the attorney general to see that there should be no miscarriage of justice and that there should be no breaking down of the law of the state.

First In 30 Years

Lynching of the two boys, the first to be hanged in the state in thirty years, was a climax to an unusual state of excitement [illegible] prevailed in Marion after the slaying of the white boy.

A mob battered down the doors of the jail here and removed Shipp, Smith and Cameron after the boys were arrested in connection with the murder, and it is alleged, confessed their respective parts in the affair. Cameron, who by some freak of fortune, escaped the fate which befell Smith and Shipp, was returned to the jail, was subsequently indicted by the grand jury for murder.

National guard troops were sent to Marion after the lynchings to preserve order.

JURORS CHOSEN FOR LYNCHING EVIDENCE

DEFENSE PLEA IS MADE

[Special to The Indianapolis News]

MARION, Ind., December 31.—Judge O. D. Clawson, of Grant circuit court, impaneled a jury this afternoon to try Robert Beshire on an affidavit charging participation in the lynching of two colored men here August 7.

The judge explained to the talesmen that this particular trial was that of the state against Robert Beshire in which Beshire alone was charged with participation in the lynching. The court said much confusion had been caused by reference to the murder of Claude Deeter and the attack on Mary Bell by the two colored men, but that particular circumstance should not interfere with the trial of Beshire. The jurors said this would not prejudice them and Merle Wall, deputy, representing the Indiana attorney-general, unexpectedly passed the jury.

Members of Jury.

The contention that Beshire was a victim and not a participant in the lynching of Tom Shipp and Abe Smith, both colored, was evident in the opening statement of E. H. [illegible] his attorney. Graves asserted Beshire [illegible] attacked and severely beaten by an [illegible] an when Beshire made the assertion the mob ought not enter the jail, as it might get the wrong man. The attorney asserted the evidence would show Beshire had just been released from a hospital, where he had been seriously ill; that he was physically in no condition to participate in any kind of a mob; that he went with the rest of the mob to the jail to see what caused the excitement, and that he was thrown by the mob against the jail entrance.

Graves said that following this Beshire was taken by a friend to his restaurant, two blocks away, and remained there, undergoing treatment for an injury to his jaw, during the entire time the lynching was taking place.

Ringleader Is Sought.

Agents of the attorney-general are seeking Charles Lennon, alleged ringleader of the lynching. Reports that Lennon was in the city were turned over to the agents by persons who said they saw him. It was further said Lennon had been in Marion several weeks. Neither police nor the sheriff's office have succeeded in serving a warrant on Lennon, although the warrant has been in their hands more than two months.

Judge Clawson considered holding court New Year's day in an attempt to get rid of the first of the lynching cases for which he had set aside only three days on his calender. The jury selection has taken two already. The question of the legality of a session New Year's day was raised and Judge Clawson said he would determine definitely whether court would be continued throughout the holiday.

Beshire, a native of Greece, who had received his first naturalization papers but had not been accepted as a citizen, is charged in the affidavit with being an active member of the mob that stormed the Grant County Jail and hanged Tom Shipp and Abe Smith in the Courthouse yard. Charles Pease, Philip Boyd and Everett Clarke, jointly charged in the same affidavit, asked separate trials when arraigned November 19. Since then two others have been arrested on similar charges.

State Calls Fifteen Witnesses.

More than fifteen witnesses have been subpenaed by the state to prove a mob was formed and that a lynching took place in addition to evidence which atotrneys hope will prove Beshire was a member of the mob The defendant's attorney said he would use about eight witnesses. It is expected two days will be required for presentation of evidence.

In the jury selection the state laid considerable emphasis on the fact Beshire was being prosecuted on an affidavit filed by the attorney-general after a grand jury had failed to return an indictment, but all talesmen accepted said this would not prejudice them.

An air of seriousness that is not always present in criminal trials has permeated the crowded courtroom from the time the case was called. Examination of jurors proceeded in a formal and deliberative manner. Talesmen answered questions in a manner that indicated deep consideration and spectators were attentive and silent.

The trial of Beshire is regarded important for the reason the disposition of the cases against the other defendants, including Jacob C, Campbell, sheriff, is expected to be influenced by the jury's action. Campbell, whose term expires with the year, formally was charged with neglect of duty in an affidavit filed by the attorney-general in compliance with a mandatory statute. Ouster from office the penalty under this statute, becomes a moot matter before trial, but the sheriff would be subject to fine even though not an officeholder,

GROSS FAILURE OF OFFICIALS IS EXPOSED BY INVESTIGATORS

Indianapolis Recorder

National Association Secretary Obtains Names Of Shipp-Smith Murderers — Files Charges With Attorney General Ogden

8-30-30.
Indianapolis, Ind

That the two steel doors of the Grant county jail which would have prevented entrance of the mob which lynched Tom Shipp and Abe Smith at Marion, Ind., on August 7th, were not locked on the night of the lynching, was revealed here on the return to New York of Walter White, acting secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. This is but one of the instances of gross failure to protect the prisoners, charged by Mr. White in a letter to James M. Ogden, attorney general of Indiana. In his communication to the attorney general, Mr. White gave the names of alleged ring-leaders and members of the mob which snuffed out the lives of the two Negro youths at Marion.

In a statement made public today, Mr. White declared:

"Seldom has there been an instance of more flagrant carelessness in preventing a lynching than was the case at Marion. Sheriff Jacob Campbell claims that he had no intimation that the lynchings were being planned until around seven o'clock in the evening of August 7th when Mrs. W. [illegible] Bailey, wife of a prominent physician of Marion, telephoned the sheriff to that effect. Mrs Bailey is president of the Marion branch of the N. A. A. C. P., and of the State conference of branches of the N. A. A. C. P. It is difficult to understand how Sheriff Campbell could not have known of the plans to lynch the two Negro boys. Apparently everyone else in Marion knew early in the afternoon that the lynchings were to be staged. Claude Deeter, the white man killed by the colored boys, died about 1:30 in the afternoon. Immediately crowds began to gather in the streets and threats were openly made that Shipp and Smith would be lynched that evening. Deeter's blood-stained, bullet-pierced shirt was hung out of the front window of the Marion City building, this being done, according to statements made to me by Chief of Police Lindemuth and others, in order that the shirt might "dry" so that it could be used as evidence in the trials of Smith and Shipp. When asked why the shirt had been allowed to stay there so long, I was told they had "forgotten about it." All afternoon people passed by the place and saw the shirt which circumstance unquestionably helped to inflame the mob to action.

Sheriff Campbell stated to me that when Mrs. Bailey warned him of these lynchings that he went to the jail garage and there found someone had removed the gasoline from the two cars there and had let the air out of the tires. This was around seven o'clock and the lynchings did not occur until nearly three hours afterwards. He apparently made no effort to get another car to remove the boys to a place of safe-keeping.

Doors Not Locked

"Furthermore, the two steel doors which would effectively have blocked attempts of the mob to seize the prisoners were not locked. Each of these doors is about seven-eighths of an inch thick, made of solid steel and each is set in solid steel frames. They could have been opened only by the use of a blow torch and it would have taken more than an hour or more to open each door. This would have given ample time for arrival of police reinforcements from nearby towns, which could have prevented the lynchings. The first of these doors, as one enters the jail, does not close by two inches or more, as I found by testing it myself. To neither this door nor the second solid steel door were there any keys. Sheriff Campbell, when asked about these keys, stated that he had been sheriff for four years and had never seen any keys to these doors. He did not seem at all to feel that this had made any difference. Sheriff Campbell is undoubtedly guilty of gross, if not criminal negligence. The N. A. A. C. P. has made formal request of Attorney General Ogden to take action which he is authorized to take under the Indiana law against lynching, toward the impeachment and removal from office of Sheriff Campbell.

Describes "Lovers Lane"

"The facts are clear as to the crime charged against the two boys, who were lynched. There is no question that they killed Claude Deeter. The circumstances, however, are not as given in the reports of the holdup. The scene of the crime is a deserted road used, according to Prosecutor Harley Hardin, for "petting parties," and according to Captain Charles Traux of the Police department, for "jazz parties." This is a very mild statement of the reputation of the spot. The road is about three miles out of Marion and runs at right angles to the main road. It is known as "Lovers' Lane," is but little wider than a foot-path, and runs parallel to the Mississinewa river. There are many spots to the left of the road towards the river where automobiles have parked for purposes which may easily be imagined, showing the purpose for which the place is used. One of the officials of Marion admitted that by a general understanding the county officers do not interfere with anything that goes on at this place. This is significant as bearing upon the reputation of Mary Ball who alleges that she was criminally assaulted by Abe Smith. The parents of Claude Deeter, the slain white man, indignantly denied that their son was engaged to marry Mary Ball. Nevertheless the fact that rumors were spread that a girl of this character had been criminally assaulted was chiefly the cause of the lynchings.

"There is, in my opinion, based upon conversations with colored and white people at Marion of all classes, little hope of apprehending and punishing the lynchers, if prosecution is left to local officials. Prosecutor Harley Hardin expressed unwillingness to cause the arrest of lynchers prior to the convening of the September grand jury. He did not impress me as being a strong or an able character. He was much alarmed w[illegible]

Declines To Approve Affidavits Naming Six Lynchers.

8-30-30

MARION, Ind., Aug. 23—Law enforcement degenerated to the very lowest ebb here in the eyes of all proponents of justice, when prosecution of six men named as participants in the lynching of Abraham Smith, 19 years old, and Thomas Shipp, 18, August 7, was actually forestalled by action of a court of justice itself. Ku Klux Klan influence is laid at the bottom o fthe miserable failure of the law by the NAACP, chief exponent of enforcement of the law against the lynchers.

Monday, Judge O. D. Clawson of the Curcuit court refused to approve an affidavit naming six persons in connection with the lynching. He would give no reason for refusal to honor the writ. He merely pointed out that during a vacation of court, it is necessary for the judge of the Circuit court to approve all agidivits before service except those for murder or treason.

Promises To Go On

The affidavits were prepared following an investigation of the lynching conducted by Prosecutor Harley F. Hardin, who was assisted by Earl B. Stroup and Merl M. Wall, deputy attorney generals from the office of James M. Ogden.

Prossecutor Hardin had declared that numerous threats had been made against his life, if he pushed the prosecution of the lynchers. Monday night he stated he would make no effort to have the affidavits approved, but would hold his evidence for the eptember sitting of the Grant county grand jury, which he would ask to indict the alleged ringleaders of the mob.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announced yesterday that it had forwarded to Attorney General James H. Ogden of Indiana the names of twenty-seven persons who it charges with participating in the lynching of two Negroes in Marion, Ind., on Aug. 7. Walter White, acting secretary of the association, made an investigation on the scene. The organization has received word from Mr. Ogden that he will be represented by two men at the lynching inquiry before the grand jury this week.

The men lynched were Thomas Shipp, 18 years old, and Abe Smith, 19. They were accused of attacking and shooting to death Claude Deeter of Fairmount, Ind., and attacking his fiancee, Miss Mary Ball, of

Made No Effort To Take Shipp And Smith From Jail At Marion, Investigator Charges

9-6-30

MARION, Ind., Sept. 5. — Jacob Campbell, sheriff of Grant county, was summoned Wednesday as a witness before the county grand jury impaneled here Tuesday with instructions to investigate the lynching of Thomas Shipp and Abraham Smith on the courthouse lawn here, the night of August 7. Shipp and Smith, both age 19, were hanged to a tree after the jail was broken into by a mob and the men dragged from their cell.

That Sheriff Jacob Campbell of Grant county, knew there was talk about a mob that was being formed to lynch Shipp and Smith in Marion, August 7, is contained in a report made to James M. Ogden, attorney-general, by an alleged private investigator.

The identity of the investigator, who it is said, arrived in Marion while the bodies of the two youths were hanging upon the elm in the courthouse lawn, is being withheld by Ogden.

Knew Of Plans

He said that in a conversation with the Grant county sheriff, the latter admitted he was told late in the afternoon, prior to the lynching, that the mob was being formed to take Shipp and Smith from the jail and murder them. According to Campbell, he did not take the lynching report seriously.

"I think there was plenty of time to have removed the prisoners from the jail," the investigator declares.

Six of the mob leaders are identified, he adds. Campbell would not comment on the report.

Principals Known

The identifications, the investigator reports, include the man who tied the knots about the prisoners' necks, the man who wielded the sledge hammer to batter open the jail and cell doors, and the active mob leader.

He who wielded the sledge hammer, according to the report, is said to be a paroled pirsoner from the reformatory.

The ringleader is now under indictment for an attack upon a young girl, it is alleged.

The report also charges that Campbell was informed by the investigator of a young man who saw the entire lynching and was willing to testify, but that Campbell made no effort to locate the youth.

May Take Charge

Possibility was expressed Thursday of last week that James M. Ogden, Indiana attorney-general, may take personal charge of his office's part in the grand jury investigation of the lynching of Shipp and Smith.

Ogden said he had not decided definitely personally to take a hand in the case, but intimated that he had been asked to direct the work of Merle Wall and Earl Stroup, deputies who have been assigned to the investigation. He said later developments would be awaited before he makes any definite decision.

N. A. A. C. P. Busy

Following closely on the heels of an announcement by Ogden that two deputies would be sent to Marion to aid in the grand jury investigation of the lynching, the attorney general Thursday received a letter from Walter White, New York, acting secretary of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People in which twelve alleged members of the mob are named. The letter also contained a demand that Ogden take steps to remove Jacob Campbell, Grant county sheriff, from office.

The contents of the letter dispatched by the N. A. A. C. P. secretary to the attorney-general was published in last week's issue of The Indianapolis Recorder.

Jury Personnel

Men drawn for the grand jury were: Harley Black, foreman, Swayzee; Frank Frichey, Marion; Calvin Hancock, Fairmount; Everett McIlwain, Marion; Lee McTurnan, Fairmount, and William Williams, Fairmount.

After names were drawn, the jury was sworn in at 1:30 p. m. Oliver D. Clawson, judge of the circuit court, then gave instructions. The court called attention to the recent lynching.

"It is common knowledge that the crimes of rape, murder and lynching have occurred in this county, and it will be the duty of you men to investigate all reports without fear or favor," the court told the jurors. The jury retired to the superior court room where deliberations will be held.

Amos Bannister, superior court bailiff, was appointed special bailiff to have charge of the jury while it is in session.

Harley Hardin, county prosecutor, went to the jury room along with Merle Wall and Earl Stroup, deputy attorneys-general, who were sent here to assist the prosecutor in the grand jury investigation.

19 NAMES OF MEMBERS OF MOB IN HANDS OF GOVERNOR LESLIE

Recorder

9-6-30

NEW YORK, Sept. 4—Firm demand that Governor Harry G. Leslie and Attorney-General James M. Ogden of Indiana take action to apprehend and punish the lynchers who, on August 7, murdered Thomas Shipp and Abraham Smith was made by a delegation representing the Marion and Indiana branches of the N. A. A. C. P. The delegation was headed by Mrs. W. T. Bailey of Marion, president of the Indiana Conference of the N. A. A. C. P. Mrs. Bailey presented the petition, citing the fact that Sheriff Jacob Campbell and other officers were notified three and a half or four hours prior to the lynchings that a mob was being formed, and that the sheriff did nothing either to protect his prisoners or to remove them to a place of safekeeping. Besides the charges of inaction, the petition urged the governor "to use every bit of the power and authority he has to cause every person in the State of Indiana and the United States of America to know that lynching and making attacks upon the State such as the mob did when it attacked the jail at Grant County, Indiana, and the failure of public officials to do their duty will not be condoned in the State of Indiana and that speedy justice in accordance with the laws of the State of Indiana will be meted out to them." The petition also urged the governor to assure protection to the citizens afraid to testify against the lynchers and also to urge the prosecutor and judge of Grant County to exercise the power and authority they possess to bring the lynchers to justice. The petitioners also demanded of the governor that he request the resignation of Sheriff Campbell for his failure to do his members of the delegation included duty in repelling the lynchers. Other R. L. Bailey and G. N. T. Gray, president and secretary of the Indianapolis branch; R. L. Brokenburr and Marcus S. Stewart of Indianapolis; Dr. W. T. Bailey and Rev. C. S. Brown of Marion.

Lynchers' Names

Another late development has been acknowledgment by Governor Leslie, through his secretary, of the receipt from Walter White, acting secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., of the names of 19 members of the mob, with evidence against these alleged lynchers.

The activity of the N. A. A. C. P. in the Marion lynchings has caused wide discussion in Indiana. The Indianapolis Times of August 21 editorially declares, in part:

"It is unfortunate that the demand for action against the lynchers at Marion was made by a delegation of Negro citizens.

"There should have been a procession of delegations of white citizens there ahead of them, making the same demands, and asking the governor to make at least a gesture of protection for any citizen who gives evidence against those who supplanted private vengeance for law.

"Hesitation on the part of public officials, either those at Marion or at the statehouse, is not creditable to the state. It suggests either fear of mobs or a sympathy with the lynchers."

WHITE UNEARTHS NAMES OF MOB IN IND. OUTRAGE

Afro-American

Probe by N.A.A.C.P. Shows Jail Doors Wouldn't Close

8-30-30

Baltimore, Md.

SHERIFF BLAMED

Never Had Keys to Door, He Says.

NEW YORK.—That the two solid steel doors of the Grant County jail, if properly closed and locked, would have prevented entrance of the mob which lynched Tom Shipp and Abe Smith at Marion, Indiana, on August 7, were not locked on the night of the lynching was revealed here today on the return to New York of Walter White, acting secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

This is but one of the instances of gross failure to protect the prisoners, charged by Mr. White in a letter to James M. Ogden, attorney general of Indiana.

In his communication Mr. White gave the names of alleged ring-leaders and members of the mob which snuffed out the lives of the two Negro youths at Marion.

Everybody Knew but Sheriff

In a statement made public today Mr. White declared:

"Seldom has there been an instance of more flagrant carelessness in preventing a lynching than was the case at Marion. Sheriff Jacob Campbell claims that he had no intimation that the lynchings were being planned until around seven o'clock in the evening of August 7th when Mrs. W. T. Bailey, wife of a prominent physician of Marion, telephoned the sheriff to that effect.

Mrs. Bailey is president of the Marion branch of the N.A.A.C.P., and of the State Conference of Branches of the N.A.A.C.P. It is difficult to understand how Sheriff Campbell could not have known of the plans to lynch the two Negro boys. Apparently everyone else in Marion knew early in the afternoon that the lynchings were to be staged.

Bloody Shirt in Prison Window

"Claude Deeter, the white man killed by the colored boys, died about 1:30 in the afternoon. Immediately crowds began to gather in the streets and threats were openly made that Smith and Shipp would be lynched that evening. Deeter's blood-stained bullet-pierced shirt was hung out of the front window of the Marion City Building; this being done, according to statements made to me by Chief of Police Lindemuth and others, in order that the shirt might 'dry' so that it could be used as evidence in the trials of Smith and Shipp.

"When asked why the shirt had been allowed to stay there so long, I was told that they had 'forgotten about it.' All afternoon people passed by the place and saw the shirt, which circumstance unquestionably helped to inflame the mob to action.

Cars Tampered with

"Sheriff Campbell stated to me that when Mrs. Bailey warned him of these lynchings he went to the jail garage and found that someone had removed the gasoline from the two cars there and had let the air out of the tires. This was around seven o'clock and the lynchings did not occur until nearly three hours afterwards. He apparently made no effort to get another car to remove the boys to a place of safe-keeping.

Steel Doors Won't Close

"Furthermore, the two steel doors which would effectively have blocked attempts of the mob to seizez the prisoners were not locked. Each of these doors is about seven-eighths of an inch thick, made of solid steel and each is set in solid steel frames. They could have been opened only by the use of a blow-torch and it would have taken an hour or more to open each door. This would have given ample time for arrival of police reinforcements from nearby towns, which could have prevented the lynchings.

"The first of these doors, as one enters the jail, does not close by two inches or more, as I found by testing it myself. To neither this door nor the second solid steel door were there any keys.

Sheriff Campbell, when asked about these keys, stated that he had been sheriff for four years and had never seen any keys to these doors. He did not seem at all to feel that this made any difference. Sheriff Campbell is undoubtedly guilty of gross, if not criminal, negligence.

"The N.A.A.C.P. has made formal request of Attorney General Ogden to take action which he is authorised to take under the Indiana law against lynching, towards the impeachment and removal from office of Sheriff Campbell.

Murder Scene of Outlaw Jazz Petting Parites

"The facts are clear as to the crime charged against the two boys who were lynched. There is no question that they killed Claude Deeter. The circumstances, however, are not as given in the reports of the hold-up. The scene of the crime is a deserted road used, according to Prosecutor Harley Hardin, for 'petting parties,' and according to Captain Charles Truax of the Police Department, for 'jazz parties.' This is a very mild statement of the reputation of the spot.

"The road is about three miles out of Marion and runs at right angles to the main road. It is known as 'Lovers' Lane;' is but little wider than a foot-path, and runs parallel to the Mississippi River. There are many spots to the left of the road towards the river where automobiles have parked for purposes which may easily be imagined, showing the purpose for which the place is used.

The Woman's Reputation

"One of the officials of Marion admitted that by a general understanding the county officers do not interfere with anything that goes on at this place. This is significant as bearing upon the reputation of Mary Ball, who alleges that she was criminally assaulted by Abe Smith.

"The parents of Claude Deeter, the slain white man, indignantly denied that their son was engaged to marry Mary Ball. Nevertheless the fact that rumors were spread that a girl of this character had been criminally assaulted was chiefly the cause for the lynchings.

Hardin Not Strong

"There is, in my opinion, based upon conversations with colored and white people at Marion of all classes, little hope of apprehending and punishing the lynchers, if prosecution is left to local officials. Prosecutor Harley Hardin expressed unwillingness to cause the arrest of lynchers prior to the convening of the September grand jury. He did not impress me as being a strong or an able character.

"He was much alarmed when I talked with him because of some anonymous threats he had received—some from whites threatening him if he proceeded with the prosecution, and some from colored people threatening him if he did not proceed.

"The N.A.A.C.P. has formally requested Attorney General Ogden and Governor Harry G. Leslie to take charge of the investigation. It is the general consensus of opinion that only by such a step will any of the lynchers be brought to trial.

"The N.A.A.C.P. has supplied these two officials with the names of certain of the lynchers and evidence against them which I secured in Marion.

Mayor Acted

"Some of the officials, however have acted in the lynchings. Mayor Jack Edwards, the youthful chief executive of Marion, was out of town on the night of the lynching, but since his return the following day he has done everything possible to suppress lawlessness. Attorney General Ogden sent two investigators, Merle Wall and Earl B. Stroup, to Marion who, with local officilas, conducted a board of inquiry.

Discourteous Secretary

"On the other hand, L. O. Chasey, secretary to Governor Leslie, a native of Marion, was most discourteous when appealed to over long-distance telephone by Mrs. W. T. Bailey to send troops to Marion, abruptly hanging up the receiver on Mrs. Bailey. Mr. Chasey, who was acting in the absence of Governor Leslie from the state, declined to send troops when appealed to by Mayor Edwards; doing so only when Sheriff Campbell had asked for troops.

Colored People Stood Firm

"I want to express warm admiration for the high courage and sagacity of many of the colored people of Marion during this terrible period. Dr. and Mrs. Bailey, the Rev. William Oglesby, the Rev. C. S. Brown and others associated with the local branch of the N.A.A.C.P., stood firm; refused to be intimidated and have worked most assiduously to help restore order and to bring the lynchers to justice. This was and is especially true of Mrs. Bailey. (I want here to recommend her for the Walker Medal). Messrs. Robert L. Bailey and Robert Lee Brokenburr of Indianapolis went to Marion soon after the lynchings there and rendered valuable assistance.

Challenges North

"The Marion lynchings are a challenge to every decent citizen, and especially to Negroes in their being an invasion by lynching mobs of a northern state. Certain officials of Marion claim that the mob-murders were not racial in character. This seems somewhat difficult to believe in view of the fact that there were in the jail at the time of the lynchings two white men charged with rape, while two others charged with the same offense were at liberty on bail.

"Also in the jail at the time of the lynchings was another white man charged with one of the most brutal crimes in the history of Grant County. He had hacked off the head, arms and legs of another white man in a dispute over a woman. None of these white prisoners, however, was molested by the mob.

Most Horrible Lynching

"The lynching of Shipp and Smith were among the most horrible and brutal in the whole history of lynching. Shipp was the first brought forth from the jail. He was lynched to the bars of the jail itself.

"When first pulled up he held on to the rope, preventing strangulation. As the mob howled its fury at this temporary postponement of death, Shipp was lowered to the ground in order that his hands might be tied. He fought furiously for his life, burying his teeth in the arms of one of the lynchers. In order to make him loosen his teeth, his skull was crushed in with a crow-bar and a knife plunged into his heart. Fortunately for him, death occurred instantly, thus preventing further suffering.

"The N.A.A.C.P., through its Indiana branches and its national office, is determined to press vigorously for full prosecution of the lynchers and punishment to the full extent [illegible] the law."

Investigaters Say Deeter Met Men to Settle Debt Due Them

Washington, D.C.

The national office of the International Labor Defense, after a thorough investigation of the Marion lynchings by one of its organizers, issued a statement in which it discloses the fact that the two Negro workers, Thomas Shipp and Abraham Smith, were not lynched because of the old baseless charge of "attacking a white woman," but because they objected to being cheated out of a money transaction between themselves and Claude Deeter. 9, 19, 30

The investigation discloses that Shipp, Smith, Deeter and Mary Ball, Deeter's woman companion, met to settle a deal. Deeter insisted upon robbing the two Negro youths and a fight started. Deeter, who had a gun, pulled it with the intention of murdering the Negroes. The two youths grabbed the gun, and in a scuffle to take it away to prevent any shooting, Deeter was accidentally shot. The bruises Mary Ball is said to have gotten were obtained when she took part in the fight to assist Deeter to cheat and murder the two Negro youths.

Sheriff Leads Mob

The sheriff, the investigation discloses, is a Klansman, and chairman of the Republican County Committee. And not only did the sheriff abstain from locking the door of the cell in which Shipp and Smith were confined, but he actually led the mob in the attack upon the jail, and the subsequent lynching which followed. The Negro policemen of the city were sent home in the afternoon, although their time of going off duty was not up. This was done with the decided purpose of giving the mob a clear field for the execution of its bloody deed. These facts disclose that the inability of the sheriff to apprehend any members of the lynch mob was due not to his ignorance of the members of the mob, but primarily to the fact that he himself was the leader of the mob.

To Prosecute Negro

The close connection between the lynching mob and the government authorities is seen from the fact that while on the one hand it has refused to prosecute any of those who took part in this bloody deed, it is on the other hand planning to prosecute James Cameron, a Negro youth who was in the same cell with Shipp and Smith, and was tortured, brutally beaten, and barely escaped the same horrible fate of the two Negroes who were lynched.

In the statement issued on the facts disclosed by the investigation, the International Labor Defense said, "The facts surrounding the Marion lynching plainly shows, as the International Labor Defense has oft-times pointed out, that Negro workers are lynched in the United States not because of some baseless charge of 'attacking a white woman,' but fundamentally because they dare to stand up for their rights against the robbery and plunder of the white employing class."

TO GIVE JURY CHANCE TO ACT ON LYNCHING

Ogden Asserts He Has No Formal Report of Probe.

MARION QUIZ OVER, WORD

Faced with reports that the Grant county grand jury has completed its investigation of the rioting at Marion August 17 in which two colored youths were taken from the County Jail and lynched, James M. Ogden, state attorney-general, asserted Friday he will take no action in the case until a reasonable amount of time has elapsed or until the grand jury makes its final report.

Merle Wall and Earl Stroup, deputy attorneys-general who aided in the grand jury probe, have returned to Indianapolis, but, according to Ogden, he has received no word as to the possible report of the investigating body.

When asked how long he would wait for a grand jury report Ogden said he did not know exactly, but asserted he would not wait six months, which is the term of the jury.

Ogden gave the grand jury a report by one of his investigators in which several of the lynchers were named and in which the statement was made that the sheriff was aware a mob was forming early in the evening before the lynching took place. It was pointed out that either the investigator, the two deputies or residents of Marion could sign an affidavit if decision is made to take action against Sheriff Jacob Campbell.

Ogden Acts in Lynching Case

Last August two negroes were taken from the county jail at Marion, Ind., and hanged. They had committed both murder and rape. Officials knew minds were inflamed and that mob law was imminent. Yet there seems to have been no effort made to spirit the prisoners away, or to protect them once the mob came. Immediately after the lynching it became apparent to the rest of the state that local enforcement authorities intended to do nothing about the matter. The prosecutor tried, but his hands were tied. A grand jury refused to indict, and exonerated Sheriff Campbell of blame.

Now Attorney General Ogden has filed charges against the sheriff and seeks to oust him from office. Other affidavits have been filed against alleged leaders in the mob. This action was taken upon information gathered by investigators from the attorney general's office.

Mr. Ogden's course means that Indiana does not propose to sanction mob law within her boundaries through official inaction. Failure to have instituted action in this case, following refusal of local enforcement agencies to act, would have been an even bigger blot on the state than the lynching itself. The men who were hanged deserved hanging. But let the rest of the nation understand we propose to mete out that punishment only through due process of law. These cases should be prosecuted vigorously.

Charges Cop Incited Mob to Lynching

The Marion policeman who hung the blood-soaked shirt of Claude Deeter, murder victim, out the window of the Marion (Ind.) police station, fanning the race hatred that resulted in the lynching of two Negroes, is the object of a new investigation being waged by Attorney-General James M. Ogden, the latter declared today.

If his identity is learned, the policeman will be charged with inciting a riot, declared Ogden, who moved this week to bring Sheriff Jacob Campbell and seven Marion alleged mob leaders to trial.

The attorney-general today declared the murder victim's shirt was suspended from the police station window the day after Deeter, 23-year-old Fairmount youth, was slain by Negroes who, police said, confessed the slaying and to assaulting Deeter's young woman companion.

The attorney-general is acting on the theory that the action was an out-and-out stroke to inflame the Marion mob to action. Two Negroes, Deeter's assailants, were hanged on the courthouse lawn Aug. 7.

Of the seven alleged leaders against whom Ogden filed affidavits in Grant circuit court late Wednesday only one, Robert Beshire, poolroom owner, has been arrested. He was released under $2,000 bond set by Judge O. D. Clawson for all the defendants.

LYNCHING AFFIDAVITS

Attorn[illegible] Ogden has acted, not only as the law of Indiana requires, but as a sound social structure dictates, with reference to lynchings at Marion several weeks ago. Sheriff Campbell, responsible for the safety of two Negro prisoners who were removed from jail and hanged by a mob, was held blameless of neglect of duty by a Grant county grand jury, which lately ended its sessions. Likewise no indictments were voted of participants in the affair. Information in possession of the attorney-general is regarded by him as adequate to justify proceedings against the sheriff, on the ground that he failed to take enough precautions, and against seven persons accused of being active in the mob. Affidavits to that effect have been filed in the Grant county circuit court, in the jurisdiction of which the outbreak occurred.

Pending the hearing of testimony, there can be no valid opinion about the guilt of these particular defendants. What is certain is that the two men slain did not receive the protection of civil institutions to which they were entitled. Of the seriousness of their own admitted offenses against the public there is, of course, no question. They killed a young man in the course of a robbery and attacked his woman companion. For these crimes they were being held, and for these crimes, under the regular processes of the statutes, they surely would have been punished. This fact only adds to the enormity of the lynchings. The code of the jungle was resorted to out of sheer and dangerous blood lust, inflamed by appeals to the lower instincts of human beings. Whether or not the sheriff displayed the judgment that is expected of an official when confronted with an emergency, is, as already indicated, for subsequent developments to reveal. Whether the men said to have had a prominent part in the hangings are innocent is also to be ascertained. It is the duty of the court to get at the whole truth and apply penalties against mob tactics as provided for by legislation.

Only thus can Marion, Grant county and Indiana demonstrate their right to full respect as regions where just laws are subscribed to in practice as well as in principle. The Marion incident, if condoned by less than a maximum degree of governmental endeavor to learn all the facts, would be a permanent blot on the record of the state.

CHANGE OF VENUE HINTED

Affidavits Are Climax to Special Investigation of Attorney-General Deputies.

Affidavits charging Jacob Campbell, sheriff of Grant county, with neglect of duty, and seven other men with participation in the lynching of two colored youths at Marion several weeks ago, were to be filed Wednesday afternoon in Grant county circuit court by James M. Ogden, attorney-general.

Action against Campbell, who is alleged to have failed to prevent the two prisoners from being taken from his custody, will be in the form of removal proceedings, although he likewise will be subject to a fine if convicted.

The affidavits against the seven men charge them with actively participating in the lynching of the youths, who previously were said to have admitted slaying a young man in a robbery and attacking his girl companion.

Death or Life Term, Penalty.

They are Charles Lennon, Everett Clark, Arnold Walters, ——— Boyd, Robert Beshire, ——— Praim and Chester Pease, the first names of Boyd and Praim not being known. Penalty for conviction for the offense is death or life imprisonment.

Ogden said the affidavits were based largely on results of an investigation conducted by his deputies, including Merle Wall and Arthur Bruner, Indianapolis, special investigator for the attorney-general's office. Accompanying the announcement was a typewritten statement by Ogden in which he pointed out that similar information gathered by his office had been turned over to the Grant county grand jury, but that no indictments had been returned by it.

Specific Charge.

Specifically, the seven men are charged with "feloniously assembling together for the purpose of hanging and killing Abe Smith and Thomas Shipp by violence without authority of law, thereby killing and murdering said Smith and Shipp."

There was a possibility that Ogden might attempt to revive an old statute in order to obtain a change of venue from Grant county. Ogden said he had not yet decided what action he would take in this respect.

Lynching of the two colored youths, the first to be hanged in Indiana in nearly thirty years, was a climax to an unusual state of excitement which prevailed in Marion after the slaying of Claude Deeter, age twenty-three, living near Fairmount, and the attack on his girl companion.

A mob battered down the doors to the Grant County Jail and removed three colored youths, including Smith and Shipp, after they had been arrested in connection with the crime, it is said, had confessed their respective parts in the affair. One of the youths was returned to the jail, however, but subsequently, following the investigation of the grand jury, was indicted for murder.

National guard troops were sent to Marion after the lynchings. The colored youths had been hanged to a tree in the Courthouse lawn.

Statement of Ogden.

Ogden's statement follows, in part:

"For the first time in almost thirty years in this state, two persons were taken from the Grant County Jail at Marion, Ind., by a mob and lynched on August 7, this year. The attorney-general's office immediately gave aid and assistance to the Grant county authorities in the investigation of this crime and collected much evidence. At the request, however, of some of the local authorities, the attorney-general's office delayed further direct action until the case had been considered by the local machinery of the law, that is the Grant county officials. Those officers have now reported and have reported no indictments. Under the law it becomes the plain and positive duty of the attorney-general to take such legal action as is set out in Section 2534 of Burns statutes, 1926.

"The duty of the attorney-general is plain and positive under this statute. He is to prosecute. He has no authority to judge the case himself. That must be done by the court and jury. This statute stares the attorney-general squarely in the face. The road is clear and distinct. Who will say that he in good conscience can detour it? As a public office is a public trust, in this instance the office of the attorney-general has the trust of the public in protecting the orderly process of the law when a lynching occurs. It is not his duty to determine the guilt or innocence of the accused. That duty rests with another arm of the law. It is his duty to institute the prosecution and to start on their course the proceedings that should eventually determine the guilt or innocence of the accused. The statute provides that he shall start the proceedings by the filing of an affidavit. He can do no more at this time and no less. At the end the court and jury finally weigh the fate of the accused on the scale of justice. Their decision should reflect the judgment of law-abiding citizens.

"It is not a matter of the state meddling or not meddling with local affairs in communities. The law makers in Indiana have seen fit to make it a state affair and to ordain that the attorney-general take orderly legal proceedings when lynchings occur to the end that law and order may be preserved throughout the state.

Enacted in 1905.

"At the session of our general assembly in 1905, when the above statute was enacted, the members of the legislature bore in mind the difficulties attending the prosecution of such cases and the state-wide effect of such crime upon the general law and order of the state. It was thus provided that when the state of Indiana has been disgraced by lynching the good name of the state should be protected by the highest prosecuting authority of the state. It was made the duty of the attorney-general to see that there should be no miscarriage of justice and that there should be no breaking down of the law of the state. Our government is one of law and order. Legal and orderly processes are fully provided for by our Constitution and statutory enactments and to aid in upholding these processes in cases of lynching certain statutes were passed imposing the highest responsibility upon the law-enforcing officers.

"To carry out the objects and purposes of the above statute prosecution is being begun by the attorney-general against the sheriff of Grant county for failure in official duty in permitting his prisoners to be taken.

"Other sections of the statutes impose further duties upon the attorney-generals in lynchings. The attorney-general in performance of his duties as set out in these statutes is also filing certain affidavits against certain other individuals, members of the mob said to be identified as actively participating in the lynching."

GRANT COUNTY INDIFFERENCE.

The citizens of Marion and of Grant county who appreciate the seriousness of the cloud under which that community has placed itself and the state should give needed co-operation to Attorney General Ogden in the effort to vindicate law and order. He is representing all the people of Indiana in a case where the constituted machinery of justice in Grant county plainly has failed to function. The attorney general evidently is encountering a wall of indifference that should be resented and rebuked by the people of Grant county.

Two colored men who had committed a heinous crime were taken from the jail and hanged to a tree in the Courthouse yard on Aug. 7. The lynching was a crime under the laws of the state. Tho[illegible] of people saw the lynchers at work. It has been said that ample warning was given of the plan of the mob, but nothing was done. Little show of resistance was made at the time, and nothing has been accomplished since to uphold the law.

The Grant county grand jury indicted nobody in connection with the case and made a report exonerating the sheriff for failure to protect his prisoners. The attorney general has taken action in the name of the state. He has filed affidavits charging the sheriff with neglect of duty and against seven citizens charged with participating in the lynching. The attorney general is doing his duty, as directed by the law of the state, but he can not accomplish anything without the support of the people of Grant county.

The warrant was served on the sheriff, who seems to look on himself as technically under arrest and is continuing to act as sheriff and chairman of the Republican county committee. At last reports, his deputies had served a warrant on only one citizen, the reason given being that the names had been made public in advance. It is not explained what effort had been made to find the others accused or whether it was merely assumed in the sheriff's office that they had left the county. The prosccutor, who is a candidate for re-election, did not sign the warrants and is reported as having refused to do so.

The attitude of Marion officialdom seems to be one of resentment that it is not to be permitted to consider the lynching as a closed incident and to ignore the fact that those participating committed a crime. The rest of Indiana has a right to look to public sentiment in Grant county for vindication of law. And it is quite apparent there will be little accomplished without the co-operation of those who should have influence and will be neglecting their duty as good citizens if they do not stand back of Attorney General Ogden.

There should be no whitewashing or glossing over of the case. The action launched by the attorney general should be far-reaching and effective. He has made a beginning, but it is only a beginning. Those accused include a couple of taxi drivers, a truck driver, a pool hall operator and a couple of others whose occupations have not been disclosed. Nobody believes those six, even if all were involved, were unaided or that the thousands of spectators do not know of other names that should be on the list of those to be prosecuted. The law-abiding citizenry should insist on a complete clean-up of the blot that is on the name of Grant county.

Ask Ogden Oust Sheriff And Hardin, Take Complete Charge

NEW YORK.—Failure of Indiana authorities to secure indictments of persons known to have participated in the removal from jail and lynching in the courthouse square of two colored boys in Marion, on August 8, has brought a letter to James M. Ogden, Indiana State Attorney General. In this letter the N. A. A. C. P. reminds Mr. Ogden that it has submitted the names of twenty-seven alleged lynchers, and that the eyes of the country are directed toward Indiana's prosecution of the mobbists.

In the N. A. A. C. P. letter, signed by Walter White, acting secretary, who investigated the lynching, it is stated that: "The names of twenty-seven alleged lynchers have been supplied to the authorities and it is known that additional names are in the possession of the sheriff and the prosecuting attorney at Marion. The Grand Jury at Marion made a partial report on September 19 and newspaper accounts of that report do not mention the lynchings nor do they indicate any sincere effort on the part of the local authorities at Marion to apprehend the known members of the mob.

Sheriff Knows Four

"Prosecutor Harley Hardin has stated to a prominent citizen of Marion that he has done everything in his power, but that it has been 'impossible to get the witnesses to testify against the names of the lynchers who are known.' Such a statement is incredible, to put it mildly, since Sheriff Jacob Campbell has admitted that he personally recognized four members of the mob. Sheriff Campbell admitted as much to me when I was in Marion. It is a known fact that other officials and reputable citizens of Marion recognized additional members of the mob and have so testified. I am sure that you agree that law enforcement at Marion has completely broken down and has become a ludicrous thing when such statements are made by those charged with the enforcement of the law and the punishment of the violators of the law.

Country Watching

"The entire country is witching to see if Indiana has courage and honesty enough to effect the punishment of those who took the law into their own hands at Marion, constituted themselves judge, jury and executioner and flouted not only the law but human decency.

"May we again renew our request of you as Attorney General of the State that steps be taken immediately to bring about the impeachmen of the sheriff, to replace the manifestly incompetent prosecuting attorney and that your office assume under the law complete charge of the prosecution. It is an open and notorious fact that unless such action is taken by your office that the lynchers may with impunity laugh at the State and make the State's law enforcement efforts a hollow mockery. Only by prompt and vigorous action can this terrible stain on the good name of Indiana be re[illegible]ed."

Lynchers Go Free, And Sheriff Commended

MARION, Ind.—(ANP)—Into that classic limbo of forgotten things goes the vigorous investigation of the lynching of two Negro boys, Tom Shipp, and Abe Smith, who were dragged out of the county jail here early in August and hung to trees on the courthouse yard.

Norfolk, Va.

The two boys were accused of having held up a white man and his girl escort on a lonely by-road, known as "Lover's Lane".

Shortly after they were arrested, rumors became current that a mob was forming with the avowed intention of lynching the boys. Word was sent to Sheriff Campbell of Grant county, informing him of the danger, but nothing was done to prevent the formation of the mob.

In the evening, 10,000 strong, it attacked the jail. The sheriff refused to issue any orders to halt the angry white citizens, standing by while they broke jail doors and locks and seized the victims.

Investigation was demanded by several agencies, including the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which made a private investigation through its secretary, Walter F. White. Sheriff Campbell was severely criticized for neglect, but the fear was expressed that nothing would be done to him about the lynching because of the political power of the sheriff in Grant County.

The county grand jury in its report last Thursday sustained the fears. It refused to return indictments against any of the men against whom charges had been made, and added a few paragraphs to its report to commend the work of the sheriff, who, according to the grand jury, had prevented a race riot by permitting the lynching.

GRAND JURY FAILS TO NAME LYNCHERS

Partial Report of Marion Probers Does Not Include Indictments of Mob Members.

MARION, Ind., Oct. 3.—One indictment for involuntary manslaughter and three indictments against one man for larceny were returned by the Grant county grand jury Thursday afternoon in its third partial report. The jurors then adjourned until Monday.

Prosecutor Harley F. Hardin said that he definitely expected the jurors to complete their work and submit final report Monday night.

Lynching Report Not Made.

No indictments have been returned yet against mobsters who lynched two ~~negro youths~~ here Aug. 7. Twenty-three true bills have been filed in comparatively minor crimes.

The name of the man indicted for manslaughter was not released by the court. He is said to have been involved in an automobile accident near Marion on Aug. 18, in which Alfred M. Allison, 75 years old, of Grant county, was killed instantly. Two indictments for petit larceny and one for grand larceny were filed against Edgar C. Parsons, who is alleged to have stolen several bushels of grain from a neighbor. Parsons is in jail in default of bond.

Mayor Jack Edwards was one of the witnesses who appeared before the grand jury yesterday. Other city officials questioned included Councilmen Forest Drook, C. M. Shawley and Ed Wert, and City Clerk Ray Norman. Their appearance led to the belief that the records of Lawrence Huey, resigned city building inspector, were being investigated.

Indiana Shows The Way

It is a long time since the State of Indiana has accomplished anything that could be held up to the rest of the country as a shining example. Therefore the incident at Marion yesterday is especially noteworthy.

Back in August two Negroes were lynched on the Courthouse lawn in Mar[illegible]esterday James M. Ogden, Attorney-General, took action to oust Sheriff Jacob Campbell, from whose jail the Negroes were taken. No action could be more effective in preventing lynchings for if the sheriff of a county is made to realize that his job hangs in the balance there will be fewer stories of sheriffs surrendering their prisoners to mobs after a tepid, half-hearted resistance.

Thus Indiana offers an example which ought not to escape the South, where lynchings of late have increased in number and gruesomeness. It may offend the pride of some Southern States to learn a lesson from Indiana, but there is no mistaking the fact that in this instance Indiana shows the way. It is nothing more than common justice to give her credit for it.

GDEN MOVES TO PUNISH IN MOB KILLINGS

Attorney-General Not to Let Marion Jury's No-Action Stand.

STATUTE PROVIDES WAY

Sheriff's Impeachment Is Possible Through Mere Fact of Lynching.

Sheriff Jacob Cam[illegible] Grant county is not yet through with the Marion lynching case although a grand jury there praised and exonerated him for his conduct in permitting a mob to break into his jail and lynch two Negroes in the courthouse square.

For the state of Indiana, through its attorney-general, is to take a hand, as the law provides when local government fails to function.

Although confining himself to the cryptic statement that he will "give due consideration and immediate attention" to the Marion matter, Attorney-General James M. Ogden is known to be preparing to proceed against Campbell and perhaps certain leaders of the mob.

Waiting on Jury

Up to this time, Ogden had declared he was waiting to give the grand jury an opportunity to act. After a month's investigation the grand jury adjourned Thursday without indicting a single member of the mob and giving high praise for Campbell's conduct.

An Indiana statute provides that when this occurs, the attorney-general shall proceed to file affidavit for impeachment against the sheriff and that the lynching shall be prima facie evidence he has been derelict in his duty.

Campbell would be tried on these charges in Grant county, where there is believed small hope for conviction. But should he be found guilty, he will be ousted from office and fined $1,000.

On Leslie Probe Group

Even if ousted as sheriff, he still might retain the post of Grant county Republican chairman, which he now holds. He also is a member of Governor Harry G. Leslie's crime commission.

The Governor has punshed him to the extent that he publicly announced Campbell no longer is considered as among the candidates for the Indiana state reformatory superintendency.

Action from Ogden is expected within the next twenty-four or forty-eight hours. He refused today to disclose its exact nature.

But following the grand jury inaction Thursday, he had this to say when asked if action by his office would be delayed until after the November election:

"This is not a political matter. It is entirely too important to be considered in a political light."

Sent His Deputies

Immediately after the lynching, Ogden sent Merl M. Wall and Earl E. Stroup, deputy attorneys-general, to Marion to aid the investigation. They procured five affidavits against the mob leaders but Judge O. D. Clawson refused to acknowledge them.

They may return again to Marion and make an effort to get a citizen to sign the affidavit against Campbell, it was said.

Ogden has a huge file of information on the Marion case. It includes the names of numerous mob leaders and letters and newspaper clippings decrying mob rule in Hoosierdom.

There is one cartoon with the two lynched men hanging from the tree which appears in the picture on the great seal of the state. It bears the legend:

"The new Indiana state seal."

MARION.—Circuit Judge O. D. Clawson, he who refused to take any action in August against alleged members of the mob who lynched Tom Shipp and Abe Smith in the courthouse yard, Thursday set Sheriff Jake Campbell free on his own bond when arraigned before him on an affidavit charging official neglect of duty filed by Attorney General James M. Ogdon.

Immediately following his release, the sheriff started out with the avowed intention of arresting seven men charged by Ogden with being leaders of the mob. They are:

Charles Lennon
Everett Clark
Arnold Waters
Robert Beshire
Chester Pease

Two men known only as Boyd and Praim

When residents learned that Sheriff Campbell had set out to arrest the lynchers, crowds gathered on street corners and word was bandied about that if arrested, a mob would form and liberate them.

Sheriff Campbell

The charge against Sheriff Campbell is neglect of official duty. Grant county's grand jury, which had adjourned last week, officially "whitewashed" the sheriff and went so far as to compliment him on the "excellent stand" he had taken in the situation. Ogden then said he would take a hand in the matter.

When the lynchers came to the jail, it is remembered, Sheriff Campbell's men threw a small and inadequate supply of tear bombs in an attempt to disperse them. He refused to fire into their midst on the grounds that he might kill "women and children" who were a part of the mob.

Change of Venue

Ogden expects to ask a change of venue, it was revealed here. Grant county is believed to be a strong Ku Klux Klan area. It is believed that it would be almost impossible to secure a conviction by a jury made up of local whites.

Action was taken against Campbell under a seldom used law, Ogden stated. When an official neglects his duty, the attorney general has power to seek his removal from office.

In commenting on the case, Ogden said:

"The duty of the attorney general is positive under Indiana statute. He is to prosecute. He has no authority to judge the case himself. That must be done by the court and jury. The lawmakers in Indiana have seen fit to make it a state affair and to ordain that the attorney general take orderly legal proceedings when lynchings occur to the end that law and order be preserved throughout the state."

Clawson Speaks

Judge Clawson, when he released Campbell, gave the folowing statements as basis for his action:

He did not believe that the action instituted by Ogden against Campbell was a criminal action.

The penalty was forfeiture of office.

He believed that the $1,000 fine provided by 1905 Indiana lynching law in addition to forfeiture of office as penalty for violation, would be covered by the sheriff's general bond..

Marion Prosecutor Is Busy Elsewhere

MARION, Ind., Nov. 21.—Efforts to convict Sheriff Jacob Campbell and six other defendants in connection with the lynching of Thomas Smith and Abraham Shipp as they were awaiting trial for murder and rape in August, have met with failure, according to indications.

The boys were taken from the Grant county jail and lynched on the courthouse lawn by a large group of white people, who made no efforts to conceal their identities.

Shortly after the lynching charges were preferred against Sheriff Campbell for neglect of duty and seven other white men were arrested. James A. Ogden, attorney general of Indiana, took personal charge of the prosecution and has worked hard to bring about justice, but he has met with rebuffs on every hand. The cases have been postponed numerous times because of the indefference of Grant county authorities and their hostility toward the prosecution.

Last week when the September grand jury ended its work on the case it was revealed that Sheriff Campbell had not even been arraigned on the lynching charge, although Attorney General Ogden brought the warrant for his arrest here more than a month ago. Campbell, as is true with several of the others mentioned in the affidavits, have not even been arrested in connection with the case.

GRANT COUNTY SHERIFF SHUNS LYNCH TRIALS

Probably Will Not Be Placed On Trial On Neglect Of Duty Charges—Courts November Term Opens Monday.

Recorder
Indianapolis
11-15-30

MARION, Ind., Nov. 14.—Sheriff Jacob Campbell of Grant County will probably not be placed on trial on charges of neglect of duty while he is in office.

This was indicated Monday when it was announced that the November term of court will open next Monday. The September term closed Saturday of last week.

In the meantime no date has been set for the Grant county sheriff trial. Campbell has not even been arraigned in connection with the lynching on the court house lawn here last summer of Shipp and Smith. The warrant for the sheriff's arrest was brought here a month ago by Attorney-general James A. Ogden. Seven other men were included in an affidavit charging lynching.

It is common knowledge here, that since then, nothing has been done to bring Campbell to trial in connection with the Marion lynching. Campbell, who is also Grant county Republican chairman, was not a candidate for re-election. Several of those charged with participating in the lynching, have not been arrested, while others are at liberty on bonds.

Atlanta, Ga.

JACKSON, Ky., Jan. 7.—(AP)—Four of eight defendants accused of participating in the mob slaying of Chester Fugate were committed to jail without bail today after they and the other four had been indicted for murder and conspiracy to murder. Fugate was removed from the Breathitt county jail and shot 14 times by a mob Christmas morning and in a deathbed statement named six alleged members of the mob. In addition to these six, former Jailer S. L. Combs and his son Lewis Combs, [illegible] conspiracy charges.

The six men indicted for murder are kinsmen of Clay Watkins, for whose murder Fugate was being held in jail. They are: S. J. Watkins, brother; Lee Watkins, nephew; Benton Howard, nephew; Allie Watkins, son; Earl Howard and L. K. Rice, son-in-law.

Circuit Judge Chester Wright announced a special term of court for February 3 to try the defendants.

S. L. Combs, former jailer, and his son, Lewis Combs, have not been arrested and bench warrants for them were handed to Lee Combs, son of S. L. Combs, for service. Lee Combs is sheriff.

Earl Howard, one of the defendants, did not appear and the court will decide whether to forfeit his $10,000 appearance bond. It was reported that he had injured himself in a fall from a barn.

Allie Watkins, 16, son of the man Fugate killed, also was indicted and his case transferred to juvenile court.

Those jailed were S. J. Watkins, Lee Watkins, Benton Howard and L. K. Rice.

EIGHT MEN HELD IN MOB MURDER RELEASED ON BOND

JACKSON, Ky., Jan. 1[illegible]—(AP)—The eight men held in jail here in connection with the lynching Christmas Day of Chester Fugate were ordered released in $10,000 bail each today by County Judge William Turner. Arrangements were made by [illegible] to furnish the bonds.

The men held included six charged with the actual taking of Fugate from jail and S. L. Combs, then the jailer, and his son, Lewis Combs, deputy jailer whose terms since have expired, and who were indicted along with the other six.

When they were ordered to jail without bond last week by Circuit Judge Chester A. Bach following the indictments, a move for bail was made but today the plea for bail was presented in county court, the circuit court term being over and the county court having jurisdiction, and Judge Turner granted the plea.

Their trials are to be held at a special term of circuit court beginning February 3.

IRVINE, KY., April 6.—(AP)—The trial of eight men in connection with the mob murder of Chester Fugate, who was taken from the Breathitt county jail at Jackson last Christmas day and shot to death, was scheduled to open here tomorrow morning. 4-7-30

Fugate was in jail charged with the slaying of Clay Watkins, attorney, when a mob descended on the jail, abducted him and left his bullet riddled body in a ditch beside the road. Although wounded thirteen times, Fugate lived some time after the shooting.

Six of the defendants are relatives of Watkins. They are Allie Watkins, 16, a son; Sam Watkins, brother; L. K. Rice, son-in-law; Ben Howard, nephew; Earl Howard, nephew, and Lee Watkins, nephew. All are charged with murder. Rice is principal of the Quicksand High School and Ben Howard is a former town Marshal of Jackson.

OFFICERS FOIL MISSOURI MOB

Bold Front of Sheriff has Effect at Saint Joseph. Custody Sought of Negro Charged with Murder

St. Joseph, Mo., Dec. 21.—Efforts of a mob to storm the Buchanan county jail early today and gain custody of Raymond Gunn, a Negro trapper, charged with the murder of Miss Velma Colter, 19-year-old school teacher, were foiled by sheriff's deputies, city police and a National Guard tank company.

Approximately 150 men, said to have gathered from Maryville, Mo., home of the teacher, and from other nearby Missouri towns, first appeared at the jail here shortly after midnight. Sheriff John Roach talked to the mob leaders through a heavily barred door. He told them he would protect his prisoner in every way possible.

All deputy sheriffs immediately were called for duty. They were not molested upon arriving at the prison and entered the jail. City police also responded to the alarm as did the St. Joseph tank company of the Missouri National Guard.

The Guardsmen placed a tank equipped with a machine gun at the jail entrance.

Slowly the mob, reinforced by spectators from St. Joseph, was driven from the jail. After about three hours, police guard lines circled the building, keeping all unauthorized persons at least a block distant.

Members of the mob held a meeting on a street corner two blocks away, and it was said they decided to go to Plattsburg, where reports declared the Negro had been taken.

Officers there said the Negro, alleged to have confessed attacking and beating the school teacher to death, had not arrived and was not expected. The mob also was not reported at Plattsburg, and St. Joseph officers believed the members drove in motor cars to their respective homes after failing to obtain entrance to the St. Joseph jail.

It was understood late today that Gunn, 30-year-old ex-convict, still was in the county jail here. Officers, however, were reticent concerning his whereabouts. He served a term in the Missouri penitentiary for conviction of assaulting a coed in the Missouri State Teachers' college of Maryville.

Miss Colter, whose mutilated, partly nude body was found Tuesday night in the rural school house where she taught, also attended the college.

Buchanan county officers believe prisoners in jail here can easily be guarded from any violence. The cells are in the center of the building. Seven heavy steel doors must be opened before entrance can be made into the cell-rooms.

Crime and the Color Complex

LAST week the JOURNAL AND GUIDE carried a story of two Negroes arrested in North Carolina and held for two months on suspicion of having criminally assaulted and murdered a young white woman, and then released after officers of the law were satisfied of their innocence. When arrested they barely escaped lynching. The actual murderer had planned and executed his crime with a technique that left nothing to be assumed than that a Negro had done it. Even the victim's clothing was so arranged as to suggest criminal assault.

Journal and Guide

Now it happens that the woman's husband is about to have the horrid crime laid at his door. A young white man arrested as a material witness is expected to do the necessary "squealing" to place the responsibility where it belongs.

It is just another chapter in the Southern drama of crime—Negro crime. The Southern public has become so used to it that the criminals of the white race are more and more substituting charcoal for the time-worn alibi. To be able to connect with the perpetration of a crime the suggestion that it was committed by a person of color is sufficient to clear the real culprit if he is white, provided he is not foiled in his plan as happened in the North Carolina case under discussion, and as happened in Norfolk a few months ago, when a white woman who was assaulted in her home by a blackface man tore open his shirt in the struggle and found that his body was white!

3/15/30
Norfolk Va

It goes without saying that the color complex in crime has contributed much to the volume of Negro crime statistics.

Officers Barely Save Them From Bloodthirsty Mob After Crime

3-14-30

KENANSVILLE, N. C.—Nearly two months ago Dave Locke and David Brockington were arrested and placed in a Death Row cell at State Prison "on suspicion" in connection with the brutal and baffling murder of Mrs. Stephen English, 20-year-old white bride of less than a year, following the narrow escape of Locke at the hands of an angry mob yelling "a Negro did it!"

Today they are free men by virtue of having proved perfect alibis and the falling flat of every effort of officers to connect them with the crime.

Kansas City Mo.

The near tragic outcome of the two men on flimsy evidence, and the fury of a maddened mob further enraged by the announcement at the time of their arrests of alleged "confessions," is regarded by residents of the state as a glaring example of the kind of deadly mistake often made when "swift southern justice" is dispensed with rope and faggot.

Have Perfect Alibis

The two men were granted their liberty Wednesday of last week after they had been given a hearing before Magistrates Williams and Stevens. The hearing consumed most of the day, several witnesses being examined and cross-examined in an effort to unsolve what so far has been one of Duplin county's most mysterious murder cases. Both Locke and Brockington were able to prove conclusively that it was impossible for them to have attacked and then murdered the dead woman.

Mrs. English was slain at her home about three miles east of Wallace, N. C., on the afternoon of January 18, some time between 1:30 and 5:30. Her husband was away at the time and it was upon returning home that he discovered her lifeless body. An effort was made at the time to track the murderer with bloodhounds. Nothing came of this.

RAPE STORY OF WHITE WOMAN A LIE

Alvin Mansel, Almost Lynched And Then Sentenced to Die In North Carolina Five Years Ago, Pardoned by Governor Gardner

Pittsburgh Pa.

OAKLEY WAS ACTIVE

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Nov. 13—A 22-year-old man, prematurely aged, who as a 17-year-old youth five years ago played the chief role in a near-lynching melodrama and was later sentenced to death in the electric chair, is walking the streets of this town, today—a free man looking for a job.

11-15-30

Alvin Mansel, one of the few living arguments against inhuman mob madness and psychology which still rules the land of tar and hempen rope, and was later sentenced to be legally murdered because white juries in the South will believe a white woman's most damnable lie before they will allow justice to prevail, was pardoned Tuesday by Governor Gardner.

The Chief Executive, in issuing the order, declared he was "absolutely convinced that Mansel was innocent of the crime."

If the Governor is right, Mansel spent five years of his life in prison for a crime he did not commit, and while the pardon is welcomed, no human power can give back to the man-boy those five years when he was a "number," not a man.

Charged With Rape

Lieut. Lawrence Oakley, sent by Governor McLean to investigate the case when it first "broke," played a leading role in the case, and it was largely due to his unceasing efforts that Mansel is free.

The man was arrested five years ago, charged with raping Lucy Cartee, a white woman. At the time of the alleged attack, the woman described her assailant as a "big, yellow Negro," but Mansel, little and dark, was arrested and "positively identified by the woman as the man who raped her."

A mob stormed the jail to take the youth and lynch him, but officers protected their prisoner, and he was later rushed to Charlotte for safekeeping. He was returned a few days later for trial and sentenced to death. Saved from the mob, he was to be legally lynched.

At the trial, the Cartee woman, with militia and national guardsmen guarding the courtroom, gave a dramatic recital of how the accused youth ravished her twice before he knocked her senseless. Her story was full of contradictions, but when the boy's attorneys, who entered the case at the last moment, asked for a postponement of the trial to study their case, Judge Stack, said to have been as prejudiced as the jury, denied it. One of the lawyers had been appointed the day before the trial, while the other, who had known him in South Carolina, volunteered his services. There was a speedy conviction and sentence to death.

It was found that the prosecution didn't put on witnesses who were summoned but who had heard the woman's contradictory statements on the day of the alleged crime. Affidavits of this testimony were taken. There were also affidavits from two doctors, who had examined the woman on the day of the alleged attack, o the effect that they believed it impossible that Mansel had assaulted her. There were still other affidavits from patients in the sanitarium who declared that Mansel could not have been at the scene of the crime at the time Mrs. Cartee said it took place. There was a petition signed by 4,000 citizens of Asheville, asking that Mansel be not electrocuted.

Governor McLean commuted the sentence to life imprisonment. Now another Governor had freed the man.

Gardner Demands Action Against Lynchers

"I AM going t[redacted]this thing to the fullest extend and I intend to exert every effort to get at the bottom of it and to bring those responsible before the courts for the crime they have committed."

This is Governor Gardner's prompt and vigorous statement on the Tarboro lynching. In his conversation with newspaper men the Governor added that he expected Sheriff Bardin of Edgecombe County to do all in his power to run down the members of the mob, and that, if necessary, he would send a state representative to Tarboro to support the local officials and officers in a relentless prosecution.

On this point the Governor said: "He (Sheriff Bardin) has the state back of his county forces in the effort to apprehend these men who, pretending to wish justice done, have flouted the laws of their state and its record as a dealer in justice."

With these statements Governor Gardner interrupted his vacation in this section to get in touch with his office and study in detail all the circumstances of the lynching.

The Governor gave the Sheriff the benefit of any doubt as to precautions against mob action after the Negro was placed in jail. But all the evidence so far indicates that Sheriff Bardin took not one step that would have been prompted by the prudence of a reasonably prudent man.

Edgecombe County and the State of North Carolina must bring the guilty into court. So-called lynch law is a menace to American democracy and American justice far more imminent than the bogey of Russian Communism which so often excites our sensory systems.

The summary action of the strikers at Bessemer City against Communist agents once more reveals what little hold the Communistic program has upon American workers. But mob law, while it is gradually losing its sway, is still an active agent in undermining foundation principles and practices of government.

Officers Said To Have Failed To Aid Guardsmen During Rioting

6-3-30

CHICKASHA, OKLA., June 2.—(AP)—Injection of a charge of "indifference" on the part of the sheriff's office and alleged "failure to cooperate with National Guardsmen called to duty last Friday night during the mob disorders here, was the highlight today in the investigation of the rioting initiated by J. Berry King, attorney general. An inquest into the death of Henry Argo, negro, who was shot and stabbed in his jail cell while the mob of 2,000 persons howled for a lynching, was scheduled Wednesday morning.

On orders from the Governor's office, Capt. E. R. Smith, who commanded the Chickasha artillery unit, made a report to Adj. Gen. Charles F. Barrett, in which he charged that Sheriff Matt Sankey failed to cooperate with the Guardsmen in attempts to save the negro's life and was "indifferent" during the riot.

Sankey denied the charge and stated that he had not had friction with the Guardsmen. He indicated he would have more to say later.

Capt. Smith reported that every man in the guard unit did his duty and that "again and again, we announced to the civilian officers that we would not give up the negro when such was suggested."

Argo, accused of attacking a white woman, was shot early Saturday morning by some one who slipped past the officers. After the guardsmen were dismissed from duty by Sheriff Sankey, the crowd of excited rioters was allowed to enter the jail where the negro was held behind strong bars. At this juncture, George Skinner, husband of the woman the negro was alleged to have attacked the day before, slipped close to the wounded prisoner and stabbed him. The negro, wrapped in a blanket and believed dead, was taken through the crowd and rushed to a hospital at Oklahoma City, where he died several hours later.

A coroner's jury, composed principally of bankers and merchants, was selected today for Wednesday's inquest.

Investigation Of Mob That Lynched Negro Is Launched

CHICKASHA, OKLA., June 1.—(AP)—Directed by Gov. W. J. Holloway to prosecute leaders of a mob who Friday night stormed the Grady County jail here and fatally injured Henry Argo, negro accused of attacking a white woman, Atty. Gen. J. Berry King today started an official investigation.

King arrived here [illegible] Oklahoma City today and went into [illegible] conference with county officials. [illegible] announced that Ed Crossland, an [illegible] general would be assi[illegible]. Holding, county [illegible] to trial leaders of [illegible] those charged with rio[illegible].

G. W. [illegible] husband of the woman the negro was alleged to have attacked, and several other members of the mob were arrested here yesterday but were released without bond.

An inquest will be held Tuesday, the attorney general said. Possibility that the federal authorities may be called to take a hand in the prosecutions, was intimated tonight by King, who said Frank Lee, U. S. district attorney at Muskogee, may be asked to assist on the grounds that an army truck had been virtually destroyed by the mob.

Lee at Muskogee said if he received information that there had been a conspiracy to destroy the truck or to damage federal property, it would be his duty to prosecute.

Argo died at the University hospital at Oklahoma City from gunshot and knife wounds an hour after he had been taken there. Examining physicians said he had been shot in the head, the bullet piercing the brain and that he had received knife wounds about the lungs.

The mob formed before the county jail shortly after Argo was arrested and placed in jail. He was identified by the woman as the man who attacked her.

After entering the jail but failing to take the negro, who was held on the second floor, the mob quieted down only to break forth again early Saturday morning.

Shortly after daylight officers, believing the mob had spent its fury permitted sightseers to enter the jail. Skinner accompanying the group, admitted he stabbed the unconscious negro with a long knife.

Wrapping Argo in a blanket, officers carried him through the curious crowd which thought he was dead, and placed him in a waiting ambulance.

Efforts were made during the rioting to set fire to the jail which officers said was virtually wrecked.

King said several arrests probably will be made after the coroner's inquest Tuesday.

CHICKASHA, Okla., Sept. 2.—(AP) Eighteen of the 22 white defendants charged with conspiracy to destroy government property as the outgrowth of rioting in which Henry Argo, negro, was fatally wounded last May, were bound over yesterday for trial in federal court.

The charges arose from the burning of an army truck used by national guardsmen in an attempt to disperse a mob around the Grady county jail here which was bent in lynching the negro.

Among those held for trial was G. W. Skinner, husband of the woman Argo was accused of attacking. Skinner stabbed Argo as the negro lay dying from a wound inflicted by a bullet fired by one of the mob as the rioters struggled to take the prisoner from his cell.

A BLACK MAN in Oklahoma was arrested on the highway two miles from Chickasha, Oklahoma, on the afternoon of Memorial Day, charged with assaulting a white woman who lived in a dugout a mile from town. He denied his guilt, but the woman identified him, according to the story, and he was put in jail. That evening a mob attacked the jail bent on a lynching party. At this point the story becomes a little obscure, except that "in the melee [according to the United Press] some one was able to slip unobserved to the cell where the Negro was clawing at the iron bars, and shot him"; except that during a lull in the man hunt, when the mob had "apparently dispersed," the wounded Negro, lying in his cell, was stabbed twice by one of a handful of "curious" persons who were allowed not only to loiter about the jail but to go to the second floor, where the Negro was kept. The "loiterer" turned out to be the husband of the woman in the dugout! The cell was apparently open, for "he paused over the unconscious Negro and suddenly thrust a knife into the Negro's chest." It should be added that the National Guard, charged with protecting life and property, was somewhere in the offing armed with machine-guns, that an attempt to burn the jail was unsuccessful—and that the Negro died the next day in a hospital in Oklahoma City fifty miles away. Five men, including the "loiterer" who stabbed the Negro, were arrested, but were released pending investigation. This is not a particularly forceful beginning for the "immediate and vigorous prosecution" which Governor Holloway says he will demand. Meanwhile, in Sherman, Texas, fourteen men who took part in the recent lynching there have been charged with arson, burglary, assault to murder, and inciting a riot, and have been transferred to Dallas for trial.

WALHALLA, S. C., April 24 (AP).—John Sanders was arrested at his home in the Monaghan mill community here today as a member of the mob which early today lynched Allen Green, Negro. Officers said Sheriff John Thomas and his son, Eugene, had recognized Sanders among the mob which took Green from them. Green, who was fifty, was charged with attacking a white woman. Thomas was seriously wounded trying to protect his prisoner.

Green was dragged from the Oconee County Jail, tied to a tree and shot. At Anderson, S. C., where Sheriff Thomas was taken, hospital attaches said his skull was fractured and that he might die.

The mob carried the Negro three miles from here before lynching him. His body was found, the [illegible] almost to shreds from bullets a few hours after the mob had stormed the jail. Officers removed the body to a Negro undertaking establishment at Seneca, S. C.

Startling Developments Expected Monday in Oconee Lynching Case

Special Term of Court Convenes at Walhalla Tomorrow.—Rumored That Solicitor Will Hand Out Large Batch of Indictments.

Sensational developments are expected to usurp the limelight tomorrow when a special term of criminal court convenes in Walhalla for the purpose of trying those persons alleged to have participated in the mob-violence and rioting at Walhalla some three weeks ago, resulting in the lynching of Allen Green, negro, and seriously injuring of Sheriff J. H. Thomas, of Oconee county.

Although no official statement has been made to the effect, it is rumored that the solicitor has already prepared more than half a hundred bills of indictment some of them involving prominent citizens of Oconee county. When questioned in this regard yesterday, Solicitor Leon Harris, of the tenth judicial circuit, refused to state his plans. He did not deny, however, that he intends to indict two score or more persons. The solicitor will be assisted in the prosecution by the firm of Hughes & Hughes, of Walhalla.

The special term was ordered by Chief Justice R. C. Watts, of the supreme court, on the petition of the Oconee county grand jury. Judge E. C. Dennis, of Darlington, will preside over the court, having been appointed to serve in the absence of Judge M. L. Bonham, resident judge of the circuit, who had previously been appointed to hold a special term in Marlboro county.

It was on the night of April 23 that a mob estimated at more than 200 strong stormed the Oconee jail, beat down Sheriff Thomas when he attempted to defend his prisoners, and dragged out Allen Green, a negro alleged to have assaulted a white woman. The mob then proceeded to a point some three miles south of Walhalla, tied Allen to a tree and shot him to death.

All members of the mob were masked, but several men alleged to have been its leaders are said to have been recognized and have been placed under arrest, charged with murder, assault and battery with intent to kill, grand larceny, rioting and delivering prisoner.

Both Solicitor Harris and Sheriff Thomas have received letters warning them that if they push the case violence will be done to them. These letters have been placed in the hands of postal authorities.

GRAND JURY ACTION AFTER LYNCHINGS

Called in special session to investigate the mob attack on the county jail at Walhalla (South Carolina), and the subsequent lynching of a negro prisoner on April 23, the Oconee County grand jury lately returned 17 indictments and the court set the first trial for July 7.

These defendants variously are charged with murder, assault and battery, robbery, conspiracy to commit murder and rescue of a prisoner. Even that list does not overstate the offense: Morally if not legally, breaking into a jail and seizing a prisoner is something worse than robbery; it is an act of violence against constituted authority and an outrage upon justice. Too, striking the sheriff, who sought to defend his charge, over the head with a pistol-butt and breaking his skull is something worse than assault and battery.

Still, these charges—if proved, of course—are sufficient to bring about adequate punishment of the mob-leaders. Experience in South Carolina and elsewhere — notably in neighboring Georgia—has demonstrated that speedy arrest, trial, conviction and punishment of lynch murderers effectively will discourage such atrocities. It is equally evident that less drastic measures are vain. Official denunciations of the mob's deed make no impression unless accompanied by action. Creating anti-lynching sentiment through education is slow and uncertain.

The forces of law and order are asserting themselves in Texas, also. Upon information supplied by the military court of inquiry, the Grayson County grand jury indicted 13 men, charging them with burning down the courthouse at Sherman on a negro prisoner. Federal authorities have charged four others with "taking a rifle from a Guardsman." Texas must punish those who committed the crimes involved in the Sherman outbreak—if this State would figure less conspicuously in the lynch-murder roll.

On the day of the South Carolina lynching, a Mississippi mob shot to death a negro charged with killing a white youth. No official inquiry and no arrests have been reported. A deputy sheriff said the Bolivar County grand jury might investigate when it met in regular session next fall! Until that attitude shall change, Mississippi will remain at or near the head of the lynching record.

Vigorous prosecution of these lynchers is pledged by authorities there. Now, if Texas authorities move promptly in prosecuting those responsible for the Sherman outrage the country will begin to be convinced that the South is sincere in its efforts to destroy the lynching evil. The South Carolina example is indicative of a new attitude by law enforcement officials and the public generally. Prosecutions will go a great way toward lessening the evil. But it will not be completely wiped out until public sentiment is thoroughly aroused against it. No section can attain a full measure of progress until the civilized doctrine that the orderly processes of law must prevail is generally accepted.

17 FACE TRIAL AS LYNCHERS

WALHALLA, S. C., July 5 (A. P.)—Seventeen men, including Mayor Robert Lee Ballentine and Night Policeman Alvin Jones, alleged to have been members of the mob that lynched Allen Green, Negro, after seriously injuring Sheriff John Thomas, will go on trial here Monday.

The men were indicted at a special term of court here May 26, and are charged with murder, assault and battery with intent to kill, robbery and conspiracy to rescue prisoners.

County Fines for Lynchings

South Carolina has a law which authorizes the state to levy a fine of $2,000 on any county in which a lynching occurs. This money is then turned over to the family of the unfortunate victim. The law has been invoked only two or three times so far, the last fine being assessed against Oconee county for the recent lynching of Allen Green, Negro, charged with rape. Perhaps this law would not have been invoked then except for the fact that the mob hung the wrong man, which is always a possibility when mob law prevails.

Jury Clears Alleged Members of Mob That Lynched Allen Green

Verdict Returned This Morning at 1:30 O'Clock.

LONG TRIAL IS ENDED

Alibi Plea of Defendants Given Weight by Jury Which Sits for Four Days Listening to Testimony and Legal Battles.

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Walhalla, Nov. 7.—"Not guilty" was the final chapter written at 1:30 o'clock this morning in Oconee's lynching trial which has commanded attention throughout the state during the past several days. By reason of this verdict, the ten men remaining of the 17 originally indicted for the lynching of Allen Green, negro, on April 23, last, and at attack on Sheriff Jim H. Thomas, were freed forever of the charges of murder, conspiracy to murder and assault and battery with intent to kill.

The final chapter in the sensation case, growing out of the storming of the Oconee jail last spring by a band of masked men said to number several hundred, was written by a jury of twelve men who had sat for four days listening to testimony of nearly two score witnesses for state and defense, and who had been stirred by legal skirmishes over points of law contested by able counsel for prosecution and defense.

The verdict of acquittal came this morning after the jury had deliberated for a period of about two hours. A large number of persons remained at the historic old Oconee county court house this morning to hear the verdict of the jury. The verdict was received quietly enough by the many spectators, as well as the defendants themselves, and [illegible] manner in which the jury's announcement was received indicated the spectators and all others have in mind the severe reprimand of Judge M. M. Mann on Wednesday, when a demonstration of spectators following the statement of a witness that the negro, Green, should have been lynched, caused Judge Mann to refer to the demonstration as one of "outlaws."

After the verdict had been rendered, Judge Mann adjourned the court to be reconvened this morning for consideration of other matters. The members of the jury which heard the case, and who have been kept together since Monday when they were chosen to sit on the case, showed the effects of the long trial. They were permitted to go to their homes this morning for the first time since they reported Monday for duty.

Many Legal Battles.

In addition to being probably the most sensational case on the court records of Oconee county, and besides bringing from the witness stand during the four days of the trial possibly the greatest mass of testimony adduced in a trial in this county, the "lynching" trial featured numerous interesting and hotly contested legal skirmishes.

Able counsel represented both sides, the prosecution being pressed by Solicitor Leon W. Harris of the tenth judicial circuit, with the assistance of Messrs. Wade and Harry Hughes of the Walhalla bar. Representing the seventeen defendants were Messrs. Mendel L. Smith, of Camden; former Solicitor David W. Smoak of Greenville and Messrs. J. R. Earle and R. T. Jaynes of the Walhalla bar.

The chief legal battles during the course of the four-day hearing centered upon the admissibility of alleged affidavits of several of the defendants, a right which the state claimed, and secondly, the tilt over the witness Grady Lee, one of the defendants, who did not however take the stand as a defendant, but as a witness called by the state and over the protest of defense counsel.

The first battle occurred earlier in the week when the prosecution sought to admit into evidence four statements alleged to have been signed by as many of the defendants. The defense promptly protested against this procedure after being permitted to examine the contents of the statements. Defense counsel argued that the statements could not, in justice to the defendants be submitted to the jury by reason of the fact that they contained much irrelevant matter and that in no case could an alleged confession be used except against the person making it.

Judge Mann ruled for the defense in this issue, but the state won a victory in the second of the two chief battles when the court ordered that Grady Lee, one of the defendants take the stand.

Fine Point of Law.

This dispute arose at the close of the case of the defense. Early during yesterday, the defense had Lee sworn as a witness, but a moment after the defendant had taken a seat on the stand he was withdrawn, with the statement by Mr. Smoak that the defense had other testimony to present before Lee was to taken the stand.

When the defense closed, Solicitor Harris promptly appealed to the court for premission to cross-examine the witness concerning an alleged affidavit he had signed some weeks after the lynching of the negro. The appeal of the prosecuting attorney promptly precipitated a legal skirmish that lasted for some time and necessitated searches for authority.

Judge Mendel Smith contended, in arguing against the swearing of Lee, that the defendant had been called to the stand during the morning through misapprehension on the part of counsel. Judge Smith called attention to the fact that not a single question had been asked the witness while on the stand and therefore, the way was not cleared for cross-examination. He held that it would be a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights if he were forced to take the stand.

Solicitor Harris contended, however, that the defendant had been sworn as a witness and even if the defense did not desire to examine him as a witness, the state had the right to do so.

Judge Mann referred to the stenographic records and ascertained that defense counsel, in calling the defendant from the stand immediately after he was sworn during the morning, had stated that the defense desired to put up other testimony first. In the light of this fact, Judge Mann ruled that the state had a right to cross-examine the witness and ordered that he take the stand.

There were numerous other skirmishes during the course of the trial which involved fine points of law and able arguments were made by attorneys for both the defense and prosecution.

Defense Gains Ground.

The case of the state began falling to pieces on Wednesday when four of the defendants were freed of charges against them by directed verdict with the permission of the state. These defendants first freed were Jabe Wilbanks, Ibra Patterson, Joe McCall, Jr., and Pete Epps. On the following day three more were cleared by directed verdict of the court, these being Dock Carver, Mitchell Lee and Will Elrod, against whom there was not sufficient evidence to be given the jury, the court ruled.

As the case proceeded the defense began laying its foundation for the plea of alibi in case of most of the ermaining defendants, who included Robert Lee Ballentine, mayor of Walhalla, and Alvon Jones, night policeman. Even while the state continued to present testimony, the defense sought to prove with considerable success by some of the state's own witnesses, that several of the defendants were elsewhere at the time of the lynching. This applied particularly to Ballentine and Jones, who, the testimony revealed, were at the Walhalla fire station when the mob with its victim passed through the heart of the city and on to the place near Cane Creek, below West Union, where the negro was tied to a tree and his body riddled with bullets.

The defense based its hope of acquittal entirely on alibi and practically all testimony of defense witnesses the final day was brought out to substantiate the alibi claims of the other defendants.

LYNCHING

The trial of seventeen whites in South Carolina for the lynching of an innocent and respectable colored man, Allen Green, is evidence that headway is being made in some of the southern communities against the lynching evil. On the other hand ,a leading southern journalist, Mr. John Harries, writing to the New York Times, complains of the absence of a strong protest in Georgia against the recent killing of three colored men in that state. There are certain to be variations in the strength of the reaction against lynching, as in all manifestations of public opinion, but lynch law is doomed by the natural progress of social conditions in the south. It cannot be "stamped out," as the outraged humanitarian demands, any more than other forms of crime can be stamped out. Lynching will be abolished by the conscience and intelligence of the south. It cannot survive the social and economic progress which is carrying Dixie steadily forward.

Today it is more clearly realized than yesterday that lynching is a blot on the good name of the south, and there is an increasing respect for the civil rights of the colored man. We have information, for example, that immunity from punishment for offenses against colored people is considerably more expensive than it used to be. That it should be obtainable at all, by money or by influence, is not a pleasant fact ,but that is not confined to the south, and if it is coming higher where the colored man is concerned his rights are beginning to be realities.—Chicago Tribune

ACQUITTAL OF ALLEGED LYNCHERS

Acquittal of alleged lynchers in Oconee county, South Carolina, writes an interesting chapter in the history of justice. Two weeks ago, by directed verdict, the widow of the mob's victim was awarded damages from the county in a civil action, it having been proved to the satisfaction of the court that an innocent man was lynched. Now, another entry is made to the effect that those on trial were not guilty.

Perhaps they were not. We cannot presume to say at this distance, though we do recall something to the effect that the injured jailer and his son claimed to recognize two of the defendants as members of the gang. To hope for the law to round up another set of defendants is going a bit too far. It's our guess that the case is closed insofar as criminal prosecution is concerned, which means that a crime has been committed, as proven by the court records, but the guilty have not been brought to justice.

Unless the mobsters are apprehended and punished, civil damages awarded the widow will be in effect a sort of ungodly license fee paid to give vent to primitive and brutal emotions.

WORTH THE EFFORT

The Walhalla lynching trial showed the difficulties a prosecutor faces in attempting to fasten responsibility for a lynching and the possibilities for making mistakes in any general round-up of men suspected of having been members of a lynching mob. Of the seventeen men tried in Walhalla, the court directed acquittals as to seven and the other ten were acquitted by the jury after two hours of deliberation, a short time in view of the mass of evidence that had been presented in the case. It was fairly clear that some of the men accused could not have participated. Whatever evidence the State was able to produce as to the others was insufficient to convince a jury of their peers that they should be convicted of the serious offense charged and, that being the case, they were entitled to their vindication by the jury's verdict.

Nevertheless the trial, while an unhappy and unfortunate ordeal for those who were accused, was a welcome effort on the part of the State to place the responsibility for a lynching and contrasted with the laxness of prosecuting officials in other sections where lynchings have occurred and there has been little or no effort of the kind. Despite the difficulties demonstrated in the Walhalla trial, prosecuting attorneys owe a duty to their constituents to attempt to bring to justice any person they have reasonable grounds to think had any connection with a lynching. It is safe to say that if it were known that a trial would follow every lynching, men would hesitate much longer about taking part in one.

Finis Written to Allen Green Lynching Case as 17 Men Are Freed Of All Counts In Case

Lynching of Walhalla Negro Now a Closed Issue in So Far as the Courts are Concerned—17 Defendants are Freed.

WALHALLA, Nov. 7.—(Special)—The last chapter in Oconee county's most sensational criminal case was written early this morning.

Ten men of the seventeen indicted in connection with the stormin of the Oconee county jail and the lynching of Allen Green, 52 year old Walhalla negro last April, were freed by an Oconee county jury of charges of murder, conspiracy and assault and battery with intent to kill. Seven of the men, indicted last May at a special term of court, had previously been acquitted on directed verdicts.

Among those who were freed of all the charges which had been placed against them in the indictments were Robert Lee Ballentine, mayor of Walhalla and Alvin Jones, night policeman, against whom additional charges of breach of official duty had been placed, John Sanders, J. L. Harris, John Stevens, Tillman Leard, Nelson Matheson, Harold Matheson, Grady Lee, and William Smith.

Doc Craver, Mitch Lee, Pete Epps, Will Elrod, J. Wilbanks, Joe McCall, Jr., and Ibra Patterson had been acquitted earlier in the week on a verdict directed by the court after the state had failed to present evidence that would substantiate claims that they were members of the mob that took the negro from the Oconee county jail by force and lynched him two miles from Walhalla on Cane Creek.

The jury deliberated for almost two hours in the case and a large crowd had gathered to near the verdict when they returned from the jury room. The hearings in the case consumed four days and half of last night before the verdict was rendered.

CASE ENDS

And so was brought to an end one of the most sensational cases the county has ever seen. Allen Green was taken by force from the Oconee county jail on the night of April 24, last thrown bodily into waiting autos and carried two miles from Walhalla where his body was tied to a large oak tree and filled with a fusilade of rifle, pistol and shotgun fire. He was charged with an attack on a Walhalla woman.

The widow of the negro was last month awarded damages in the sum of $2,000 against the county as provided by the statutes of the state in such lynching cases.

When the jail was stormed the night of the lynching, Sheriff Thomas, exercising his authority as protector of the lives of the prisoners he had in his keeping, resisted the efforts of the mob and was seriously injured. He was one of the chief witnesses for the state in the case.

17 Acquitted Of Lynching Charge

Judge Freed Seven And Jury Ten In Trial For Lynching Of Negro At Walhalla, S. C.

WALHALLA, S. C., Nov. 7.—(AP)—A jury filed into the courtroom here early today to announce it had acquitted ten men on trial for murder as a result of the lynching of Allen Green, negro, here last spring.

Seventeen originally went on trial but seven had been freed by a directed verdict. The entire group, which included Walhalla's mayor, R. B. Ballentine and night Policeman Alvin Jones, was also freed of charges of conspiracy to murder with intent to kill.

Many of the county's citizens had waited up last night through attorneys' closing arguments, the judge's charge and the two-hour deliberation of the jury. Only Wednesday court had been adjourned because of what Judge M. M. Mann termed a "barbaric demonstration of outlaws" when spectators cheered a witness who said Green should have been lynched, but the verdict was received quietly today.

Green, who was once publicly thanked for heroism during a fire here, had been placed in jail charged with a criminal assault on a white woman. In storming the jail, the masked mob fractured Sheriff J. L. Thomas' skull.

Trial of the alleged members of the mob had been twice postponed before it opened Monday. Sheriff Thomas aind his son testified they recognized two members of the mob and the state introduced other similar testimony. However, the defense offered witnesses whose testimony provided alibis for most of the defendants, including Ballentine and Jones. These two have been indicted for breach of public duty.

Last month damages of $2,000 were awarded Green's widow to be paid by Anconee county for the lynching, under the state law.

THE PRISONERS GO FREE.

THE acquittal of ten men in Walhalla, S. C., of the charge of lynching is notable.

Some of the mob were recognized by the sheriff and his son. But the alibis set up by the accused parties were sufficient in the minds of the jury to overcome other positive evidence.

The fact is that the sentiment in the communities is not strong enough to bring murderers of this sort to justice. For lynching is murder, after all. The best people deplore it, but public opinion as a whole is not ready as yet to overtake the accused. It is doubtful whether national law will be effective. People would resent the interference of the general government. There are many laws against lynching, and the people of the county in which Walhalla is situated have been ordered to pay the widow of the lynched man $2,000 under a State law. Beyond this, sentiment is not strong enough to find men guilty in the courts. As the Macon Telegraph says: "Solicitors general, knowing the apathetic attitude, are either cold or lukewarm to prosecutions."

Lynching continues because public sentiment does not back up the law in various counties. A majority of the people have not waked up to the enormity of the offense. Enough has been shown to prove that military and the civil courts cannot always protect prisoners when capital offenses are brought against them. Civilization is at stake when mobs rule. There is a return to frontier society where might was right until the better element got control there.

We hate to think of the Southern States being ruled by the crude creeds of loose-jointed primeval society. We are entitled to something better than this, and creation of a better and higher sentiment should be attempted unless something more drastic intervenes.

TRUE BILLS FOUND IN LYNCHING CASE

New Indictments Re-Written From Older Indictments Returned by Oconee County Grand Jury Against Alleged Mob Members.

WALHALLA, July 9.—True bills were yesterday found in all the new indictments in the Allen Green lynching case presented to the Oconee County grand jury when they convened for the July term of court of general sessions here Monday. The new indictments were presented to the grand jury in a re-phrased and re-worded form merely for clarity and the returning of the true bills does not constitute additional offenses or involve additional persons other than the seventeen men previously indicted at the special term of court here.

The new indictments will be presented to the court and it is on the basis of these indirtments that the seventeen men will be tried when the case is brought up again. Possibility that another special term of court will be granted for the trial was expressed after trial of the men alleged to have been members of the mob that lynched Allen Green was continued Monday for the second time.

The indictments returned at the special term of court will be nolle prossed when the new indictments are presented to the court. The new indictments are practically the same as the first ones written, involving practically the same charges, but are written in a more simple and clearer form.

In addition to the two charges of murder and accessory before the fact and assault and battery with intent to kill and conspiracy to rescue prisoners, the grand jury also returned true bills against Mayor Robert Lee Ballentine and Night Policeman Alvin Jones charging them with official misconduct.

WALHALLA, S. C., Oct.—Mrs. Emma Green will receive the sum of two thousand dollars from Oconee County for the lynching of her husband here some months ago, according to a direct verdict rendered in civil court here Tuesday afternoon.

The payment is in keeping under a South Carolina law which provides such compensation when a victim of a mob is proved to have been innocent of the crime which caused his lynching. Attorneys for the county attempted to prove that Green was guilty of the crime but the attorneys for the plaintiff off-set their arguments and convinced the court that he was the innocent victim of a mob of angry white men and Judge Mann rendered his decision in favor of Green's widow.

Victim Was A Hero

Allen Green was lynched here following his arrest charged with attacking a white woman. The mob which stormed the jail was alleged to have been led by the mayor of Walhalla and the night policeman. Sheriff Jackson attempted to resist the mob and was struck down by one of the members and injured to the extent that he had to be carried to the hospital and treated for more than a week.

Green was a pardoned convict, and some eleven years ago was the hero of this city when through his heroic efforts the city was saved from destruction by fire. At the state prison he was known as a model prisoner and several times as a trusty, at the danger of his own life, prevented prison-breaks. It was such deeds of valor and his good behavior that won his pardon for him.

TWO MEN IN MOB ARE IDENTIFIED

Sheriff Is Witness At Lynching Trial In Walhalla

WALHALLA, S. C., Nov. 3. (AP)—Sheriff J. L. Thomas and his son testified here today that they recognized two of the 17 defendants on trial for murder as members of a masked mob which stormed the county jail at midnight here last Spring, took Allen Green, 52 year old negro, a short distance away and lynched him.

Thomas was the first witness to take the stand for the State as the trial got under way shortly after noon. The 17 defendants, who include Mayor Ballentine and Alvin Jones, night policeman, are charged with murder, assault and battery with intent to kill, and conspiracy to murder.

The sheriff said although their faces were partially covered with a cloth he recognized John Sanders and John Stevens of Walhalla, as members of the mob. His son, Eugene Thomas, who was asleep in the jail when the men arrived, said he also recognized Sanders.

Coats which Sanders and Stevens are charged with wearing the night of the slaying were placed in testimony.

A. E. Power, pathologist of the Baptist Hospital at Columbia, testified that stains on the agrments were caused by human blood.

Sheriff Thomas said he had received no intimation of the forming of a mob when asked why precautions to safeguard the prisoner were not taken.

"I met four or five members of it in the jail," he said, "and told them they were making a mistake." When he refused to give up his pistol, he testified members of the mob struck him on the head and knocked him down. Dr. J. R. Young testified his skull was fractured by the blow.

In October, Oconee county was ordered to pay $2,000 to Green's widow for the lynching, under a South Carolina Statute. He was charged with a criminal attack on a white woman. Sheriff Thomas testified at that trial that Green was not guilty of the charge for which he had been arrested and was lynched.

The negro several years ago was publicly acclaimed for heroism in a fire here near the spot where he was lynched last April.

Mayor Ballentine and Jones, the night policeman, came to the jail a "few minutes after Green was lynched" Thomas stated. He said that Ballentine earlier in the day had made no suggestion concerning safeguarding the prisoner.

OCONEE LYNCHING TRIAL ON DOCKET

State Ready to Try Case at Court Opening Today, Says Solicitor Harris

Walhalla, Nov. 2.—(AP): Seventeen persons, including the mayor and night policemen, are scheduled to go on trial here tomorrow on charges of being members of a mob which lynched Allen Green, 52-year-old negro last April after attacking the Oconee county jail and taking him from it.

Solicitor Leon W. Harris, of the tenth judicial circuit, said the state is ready to try the case at the present term of Oconee court. Twice previously it has been postponed.

Charges against the men are murder, assault and battery with intent to kill and conspiracy.

Recently Green's widow was granted a $2,000 verdict in common pleas court in a suit against the county in which she claimed her husband was not guilty of the crime for which he was lynched. The sheriff of Oconee county on cross examination testified he had information which caused him to believe Green was innocent.

Green was lynched under the same tree where once he had received news of a reward and clemency for the heroism during a fire. At that time he was serving a sentence for attempted criminal assault. He was lynched because members of the mob believed him guilty of attacking a white woman.

WIDOW OF LYNCHED NEGRO TO RECEIVE $2,000 DAMAGES

10-[illegible]-30

Walhalla, S. C.—(ANP)—Mrs. Emma Green will receive the sum of $2,000 from Oconee County for the lynching of her husband here some months ago, according to a direct ~~[illegible] rendered in~~ civil court here Tuesday afternoon. Ga.

The payment is in keeping under a South Carolina law, which provides such compensation when a victim of a mob is proved to have been innocent of the crime which caused his lynching. Attorneys for the county attempted to prove that Green was guilty of the crime but the attorneys for the plaintiff offset their arguments and convinced the court that he was the innocent victim of a mob of angry white men, and Judge Mann rendered his decision in favor of Green's widow.

Allen Green was lynched here following his arrest charged with attacking a white woman. The mob which stormed the jail was alleged to have been led by the mayor of Walhalla and the night policeman. Sheriff Jackson attempted to resist the mob and was struck down by one of the members and injured to the extent that he had to be carried to the hospital and treated for more than a week.

Green was a pardoned convict, and some eleven years ago was the hero of this city when through his heroic efforts the city was saved from destruction by fire. At the state prison he was known as a model prisoner, and several times, as a trusty, at the danger of his own life, prevented prison-breaks. It was such deeds of valor and his good behavior that won his pardon for him.

At the time of the supposed attack there was an opinion on the part of officials that he was innocent of the crime with which he was charged, and it was this feeling that perhaps caused the sheriff to believe that it was the prevailing sentiment and that there would be no attempt made to lynch him. A few hot-headed whites, however, changed this opinion, and the sheriff was caught off his guard and Green was lynched.

Immediately following the lynching, Governor Richards sent a group of investigators in this county, and several white men, including the mayor, were arrested and indicted. The trial was set for the summer term of court, but was postponed when the court decided that the weather was too hot to sit in a crowded courtroom and listen to lengthy arguments. The prosecuting attorneys agreed and the trial will be held during the forthcoming court session.

When the recent case was tried, which resulted in the $2,000 award to Mrs. Green, the courtroom was crowded with white citizens and the action of the court won the approval of the majority of those assembled.

Ten Men Acquitted in Death of Negro Prisoner.

Atlanta Ga.

WALHALLA, S. C., Nov. 7.—(AP) A jury filed into the courtroom here early today and announced it had acquitted 10 men on trial for murder as a result of the lynching of Allen Green, negro, here, last April 24.

Seventeen originally went on trial but seven had been freed by directed verdict. The entire group, which included Walhalla's mayor, R. B. Ballentine, and Night Policeman Alvin Jones, was also acquitted of charges of conspiracy to murder and assault with intent to kill.

Green was charged with criminal assault upon a white woman. In storming the jail to take Green, the mob overpowered Sheriff J. L. Thomas. Trial of the cases opened Monday. Sheriff Thomas and his son testified they recognized two of the defendants as members of the mob.

WALHALLA, S. C., Nov. 3.—(AP)—Efforts were begun here today to convict 17 men, including the mayor and night policeman of this town, on charges of participation in the lynching last Spring of Allen Green, 52-year-old negro.

Sheriff J. L. Thomas, the first witness, testified that he recognized two of the defendants among the masked mob that seized the negro and took him a short distance from the jail to a tree where he was hanged. John Sanders and John Stevens, both of Walhalla, were named by the officer as the two.

His son, Eugene Thomas, also testified to recognizing Sanders among the crowd in the jail.

In addition to the murder charges, the defendants are under indictment for conspiracy to murder and assault and battery with intent to kill.

The latter charge grew out of an attack upon Sheriff Thomas, whose skull was fractured when he was felled by the butt of a pistol as he attempted to prevent the seizure of the prisoner.

WITNESSES PAINT OCONEE LYNCHING

They Tell of Men in Mob Who Looked Like Those Now on Trial

Walhalla, Nov. 4.—(AP): When court adjourned here late today in the trial of 17 men charged with murder as a result of the lynching of Allen Green, 52-year-old negro near here last spring, testimony of 17 witnesses had been presented. Court officials said the case probably would end tomorrow afternoon. Green was charged with attacking a white woman.

Most of those testifying during the afternoon corroborated testimony of previous witnesses.

"Dock" Thomas, son of Sheriff J. H. Thomas, who was assaulted when the mob attacked the jail, told the jury he talked with Alvin Jones, night policeman and defendant and in talking about the negro, he said Jones told him he wanted Green lynched.

Tells of Mob Gathering

B. H. Hardy testified he was at the ball park, where the crowd gathered before the lynching. A large crowd went to the jail and took Green out, he said. Two of the men looked like Nelson Matheson and Willie Smith, defendants, he added. He also said he saw a man with a coat on similar to that worn at the time by John Sanders, another defendant.

Garnet Burton said he was at the meeting at the ball park and heard the names of John Sanders, a defendant, and Rubin Hailey, state's witness, called.

Wade Kerr, summoned by both state and defense as a witness, said when he was questioned by state's attorneys and Constable W. W. Rogers he was "so frightened" he did not know what he was saying. During the questioning, he added, Rogers called him a "damn liar" and said he was going to "put me in jail and starve me." Rogers also "popped his fist in my face," the witness said.

He Followed Mob

Calvin Williams described in detail incidents leading up to the lynching and the lynching itself. He was not a member of the mob but followed some distance behind, he testified.

The negro was put aboard a truck and taken to the scene of the lynching. Williams said, and the lights of an automobile were turned on the tree to which he was tied. One of the men yelled to t[he] negro, "make peace with y[our] God," he testified, and Green [re]plied, "I've done done it." He hea[rd] several shots, he added, and retur[n]ed to Walhalla.

A state witness, Albert Buchan[an] followed Riorden on the stand a[nd] said Ballentine talked with him [the] night before the lynching and s[aid] "something ought to be done" w[ith] Green.

"Ballentine got into my car a[nd] we rode around Walhalla," he sa[id]. "We made two stops and each ti[me] Ballentine got out and walked into the dark." The purpose of t[he] ride was not brought out.

Buchanan also said Jones, [the] night policeman, said: "If anythi[ng] happens, the police have busine[ss] on the other side of town."

Other morning witnesses descri[b]ed the arrest of John Sande[rs] identified yesterday by Sher[iff] Thomas as a leader of the mob.

How Good Is Law?

In Walhalla, S. C., officers of the law, spurred by state officials, were successful in getting 17 indictments against members of the mob which lynched Allen Green, a 52-year-old Negro. The case went to trial. A judge directed verdicts of not guilty in favor of seven defendants, but ordered the other ten to trial. A jury found them not guilty, although the evidence was strongly against them.

Dallas

The jury, of course, did not consider the evidence primarily in reaching its verdict. This was a lynching case and sentiment, rather than evidence, was the controlling factor. The case was one of alleged assault. The Negro, Green, was supposed to have attacked a white woman. The story was proved to have been untrue before the lynchers went to trial and Oconee county had been ordered to pay the widow of Green $2,000 under a state law. In making that finding, the state authorities refused to believe white witnesses.

In spite of having lynched a man, and the wrong man at that, the lynchers have been set free.

11-8-30

A great many people think that the cure for lynching is in another law, a federal law. We do not believe it will have the slightest effect. We already have laws covering lynchings—an amplitude of laws. Members of a mob could be indicted on 10 counts, at least, if anybody wanted to indict them. Lynchings already is murder and a capital offense. The prohibitions are already strong enough. It is the sentiment that is weak.

Macon Ga.

People generally are apathetic to lynchings. The better people deplore them, but do nothing else about it. Solicitors general knowing the apathetic attitude, are either cold or lukewarm to prosecutions, unless it be that a particular solicitor general has an extraordinarily high regard for his oath and a courage heedless of political consequences where his plain duty is apparent. Jurors with a false sense of values seldom ever find a verdict of guilty against a mobman, no matter how great the culpability.

Lynchings continue in spite of an abundance of laws that could be invoked against those who participate in them, because the majority of us are not civilized enough to revolt actively against them.

WALHALLA, S. C., Nov. 5.—(AP)—The state rested its case here this afternoon and four defense witnesses had taken the stand when court adjourned in the trial of 17 men on charges of murder in connection with the lynching last spring of Allen Green, 52-year-old negro. Green had been charged with attacking a white woman.

South Carolina Pays $2,000 to Widow of Lynched Man

Defender 11-1-30 Chicago

WALHALLA, S. C., Oct. 31.—Mrs. Emma Green will receive the sum of $2,000 from Oconee county for the lynching of her husband here some months ago, according to a direct verdict rendered in civil court here.

The payment is in keeping with a South Carolina law, which provides such compensation when a victim of a mob is proved to have been innocent of the crime which caused his lynching. Attorneys for the county attempted to prove that Green was guilty of the crime, but the attorneys for the plaintiff offset their arguments and convinced he court that he was the innocent victim of a mob of angry white men. Judge Mann rendered his decision in favor of Green's widow.

Allen Green was lynched here following his arrest, charged with attacking a white woman. The mob was alleged to have been led by the mayor of Walhalla and the night policeman. Sheriff Jackson attempted to resist the mob and was struck down by one of the members and injured to the extent that he had to be carried to the hospital.

Green was a pardoned convict, and some eleven years ago was the hero of this city when, through his heroic efforts, the city was saved from destruction by fire. At the state prison he was known as a model prisoner and several times as a trusty, at the danger of his own life, prevented prison breaks. It was such deeds of valor and his good behavior that won his pardon for him.

At the time of the supposed attack there was an opinion on the part of officials that he was innocent of the crime with which he was charged, and it was this feeling that perhaps caused the sheriff to believe that it was the prevailing sentiment and that there would be no attempt made to lynch him. A few hot-headed whites, however, changed this opinion, and the sheriff was caught of his guard and Green was lynched.

Immediately following the lynching Governor Richards sent a group of investigators in this county and several white men, including the mayor, were arrested and indicted. The trial was set for the summer term of court, but was postponed when the court decided that the weather was too hot to sit in a crowded courtroom and listen to lengthy arguments. The prosecuting attorneys agreed and the trial will be held during the forthcoming court session.

When the recent case was tried, which resulted in the $2,000 award to Mrs. Green, the courtroom was crowded with white citizens and the action of the court won the approval of the majority of those assembled.

MARTIAL LAW RULES RIOTING TEXAS TOWN

Constitution

5-11-30

Atlanta, Ga.

DALLAS, Texas, May 10.—(AP)—Governor Dan Moody said at 10:45 p. m. that he had signed the proclamation declaring a state of martial law in Sherman. He said Col. L. E. McGee would remain in command.

Additional troops would not be ordered there unless they were requested, the governor said.

"They will remain in Sherman as long as they are needed," he added.

He said the proclamation was issued upon representations made to him by substantial citizens of Sherman that martial law was needed to clear up mob disorders.

Fourteen arrests had been made tonight by officers in connection with the rioting of yesterday which caused the burning of the court house, lynching of a negro and burning of a negro church and drug store.

At 7 p. m. most of the stores were closed and a fair Saturday night crowd was on the streets, although well scattered.

No charges had been filed against those under arrest, and Sheriff Vaughan said probably none would be placed until feeling had subsided further.

The regular grand jury meets May 19 and there were no indications of a special term.

Governor Declares He Will Use All His Powers to Send Leaders to Prison.

Special to The New York Times.

SHERMAN, Texas, May 10.—Following a day and night of mob rule and vandalism in which the $60,000 county court house was destroyed and a Negro, about to be tried, was taken dead from its ruins, dragged about the streets and burned, the National Guard attacked and besieged and homes and stores in the Negro quarter burned and wrecked, this city, known as the "Athens of Texas," was placed this morning under military rule.

The civil authorities relinquished the government to units of the National Guard without the formality of a declaration of martial law. Sixteen men, alleged leaders of the mob, were arrested and five of them are held in the county jail. The other eleven were released after they had been booked by the military authorities.

Formal charges have not been filed, and what disposition will be made of the cases has not been indicated. All the men arrested were unarmed. One had a stick of dynamite in his pocket.

Rain Helps Disperse Mob.

The mob, swayed by lynching mania, which defied all authority from Friday noon until 2 o'clock this morning, had exhausted its fury and satisfied its vengeance by that time. With the arrival of 300 more National Guardsmen from Dallas, Fort Worth and other near-by cities, ordered out by Governor Moody, and a downpour of rain, the few groups of rioters still gathered in the streets were easily dispersed.

A meeting of county, city and military officials and of prominent business men was called as soon as the soldiers had made sure that they were in complete control of the situation. The meeting decided that military authority should supersede civil powers until the danger of another outbreak of mob violence was surely past.

The seventy-odd National Guardsmen who had been sent here Friday afternoon when the mob made its first attempt to seize the Negro, George Hughes, on trial for an alleged attack on a white woman, were of no avail to stem the tide of lawlessness. They had fired on the mob once in trying to prevent the dynamiting of the court house walls, but did not employ this resort a second time.

The mob was determined to get visual proof of the assurance given by the court house officials that the Negro had been placed in a steel and cement vault there. The belief existed that he had been spirited out and taken to the jail, and an attempt to discover if this was true led part of the frenzied crowd to attack the jail, to which some of the militia were sent from the court house square.

While the onslaught on the jail was being made another attempt was made by another section of the mob to reach the vault in the court house. The soldiers there offered no further resistance but went to the jail where the attack had been repulsed.

Get the Negros Body.

From that time on the mob held undisputed sway. The group from the jail joined the others at the court house and efforts to reach the vault were redoubled. A wall of the second floor was at last shattered, revealing the vault. Acetylene torches were brought into play and charges of dynamite were also employed to shatter the steel and cement walls.

Times

At midnight the shrivelled body of the Negro, who had been roasted alive in the vault was thrown down a ladder while the mob howled and cheered.

Women March in Parade.

A parade was formed at once, with the body of Hughes on an automobile truck. Behind it marched several thousand hooting, yelling and jeer-among them and women with babes ing men and boys. Women were in their arms had been in the mob.

New York

As the parade started home one yelled "Take him home," and the line swung toward the Negro section of the city, about seven or eight blocks distant. The body of Hughes was strung up to a tree in front of a two-story brick building containing a Negro drug store and rooming house. The drug store was broken into and boxes, counters and other inflammable material brought out and piled under the hanging body. A torch was then applied.

After burning the body the mob set fire to the drug store and to a number of other Negro homes and stores in a radius of three blocks, all being destroyed. Among these was the only Negro undertaking establishment in the city. A white undertaking firm had to be called to take charge of Hughes's body after it had been cut down by the militiamen.

Casualties in the rioting were limited. Captain John A. Dunlap was hit in the face by a missile and his nose was broken, and Captain Albert Sydney Johnson was cut on the face by a broken bottle.

Several enlisted men received injuries from being beaten. Two youths, members of the mob, received bullet wounds, one being shot through the neck and the other through the thigh. Investigation has shown that the bullets that struck them were leaden bullets and evidently were fired by members of the mob. All National Guardsmen were supplied with steel bullets.

A military court of inquiry probably will be called.

Mayor Jess Eurbanks of Sherman issued a statement deploring the lynching and acts of vandalism that followed, and declaring that the majority of those in the mob were not residents of Sherman, but came from other towns.

Called "Athens of Texas."

SHERMAN, Texas, May 10 (AP).—Its schools, institutions and churches have won for Sherman the appellation, "The Athens of Texas." The city boasts two denominational colleges, twenty-seven churches, excellent school buildings, a Y. M. C. A. with 400 members and twelve city parks containing seventy-eight acres for outdoor recreation.

The population is 16,164, and 95 per cent of the residents are white. The city was selected as the location for the National Home for Orphans and Aged of a national fraternal organization chiefly because of its citizenship, according to officials of the organization.

As an industrial city, Sherman manufactures more per capita than any other city in Texas and is now the sixth industrial city of the State, having fifty-eight factories, including the first large milk plant in the State.

Governor Issues a Statement.

AUSTIN, Texas, May 10 (AP).—Governor Moody today issued a statement in which he declared that every power of the State would be brought to bear to seek out and punish the persons responsible for the rioting at Sherman. He denied that he had instructed Texas Rangers sent to Sherman to guard a Negro who was killed yesterday, not to shoot in dealing with the mob.

He said he sent both Rangers and National Guardsmen to the city under general orders to protect the prisoner and preserve the peace.

He termed the action of the mob in firing on soldiers as "treasonable."

"The action of this mob in undertaking to set aside the laws of the country and making of itself a group of murderers and incendiarists by burning the court house and killing the Negro is unpardonable," the Governor said. "It is an evil day when any group of persons combine to override constituted law and authority and add to the crime of murder and arson the offense of firing on soldiers of their State and country.

"The wanton destruction of property by the mob was crime in its most reckless fashion. The burning of the court house is arson just as much as setting fire to a neighbor's house. I hope the officers find the persons who set fire to the court house and who were leaders of the mob. All State powers at my command will be used to send these persons to the penitentiary, where they belong.

"It is understood from news dispatches that soldiers were fired upon by the mob. These men were in Sherman as an organized body of soldiers, representing constituted authority and wearing the uniform of the United States Army, and action of the mob in firing on them was treasonable. If the identity of the men who made the assault can be ascertained every power in the State will be utilized in meting out a just punishment to them."

Methodists Deplore Affairs.

DALLAS, Texas, May 10 (AP).— A resolution, deploring mob action at Sherman, Texas, yesterday when George Hughes, Negro, was lynched, and reaffirming lasting opposition to all mob violence, was adopted by the quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at today's session.

The resolution, introduced by the Rev. A. D. Porter of Mineral Wells, Texas, termed the occurrence a "shocking affair," which the conference viewed with a "sense of horror," and was carried unanimously.

Prominent Residents of Texas City Are Said to Have Divulged Some Mob Members.

New York, N.Y.

SHERMAN, Texas, May 12 (AP)—With Colonel L. S. Davidson presiding, the first session of a military court of inquiry into the mob activities here last week was held today. Colonel Davidson explained that the workings of the court were similar to those of a grand jury. The names of persons summoned would not be made public because to do so would defeat its purpose.

"The best people of Sherman" will be called to identify members of the mob, the Colonel said.

With the arrest today of four additional alleged members of the mob which burned the court house and the body of George Hughes, a Negro, the court had twenty suspected persons for investigation. Nineteen of them were in jail and the twentieth was released subject to call.

Colonel Lawrence McGee, commanding officer of the national guard which took charge of the city Sunday morning under the martial law proclamation of Governor Moody, declined today to express an opinion as to how long the city would remain under military rule.

"We will stay here until we arrest as many of the mob members as possible, particularly leaders, and until the investigation is completed," he explained.

Sherman remained quiet today, citizens and civil officials aiding the military officers in every way possible.

The additional arrests of alleged rioters were made by State rangers. A number of those held live in nearby towns. Mayor Jess Eubanks, in a statement issued the day after the mob outbreak, declared those responsible for the rioting lived outside of Sherman.

The names of those arrested today were added to the blotter with the notation "incendiary riot" beside them.

Colonel Davidson said the court of inquiry examined ten witnesses today. Several were prominent Sherman residents who appeared voluntarily to furnish the names of members of the mob, he said. The court has not examined any of the suspected persons, the Colonel added.

Among those arrested was a youth with his head bandaged, who was struck by an officer as he dashed up the court house steps waving a flag during an attack on the building.

Colonel Davidson said the court of inquiry probably would end its hearing this week.

At the Presbyterian Church yesterday the congregation arose in a body to "repudiate the rioting as representative of the best citizenship of Sherman," and "to resent" the destruction of property.

Dr. T. A. Wharton, pastor emeritus of the Presbyterian Church, launched a movement to pay Negroes for their property, damaged by the mob, and planned to start a financial campaign today.

A statement signed by a number of business men, expressing regret at the disorders was read at the Baptist Church.

MOB VIOLENCE SCENE UNDER RULE OF TROOPS

Texas Town Made Subject to Martial Law To Keep Order.

SHERMAN, Texas, May 11.—(AP) Patroling the streets under a hot sun and manning machine guns placed at strategic points, Texas national guardsmen maintained strict order under martial law here today.

The highways leading into Sherman and the streets of this north Texas city were crowded with Sunday motorists who came to see the burned Grayson county courthouse and the negro residence district stormed last Friday and Friday night by a mob incensed over the criminal attack upon a white woman by George Hughes, 41-year-old negro.

Atlanta, Ga.

Hughes was killed during the rioting. A coroner's jury declared he was suffocated when he was locked in a vault in the courthouse.

The negro had been placed in the vault for safety when Texas rangers and county officers were driven from the courthouse by the fire set by the mob. The decision meant the coroner's jury believed Hughes was dead when entrance into the thick walled vault was forced by the mob, using acetylene torches and dynamite after the courthouse was destroyed. His body, nevertheless, was dragged through the streets and then burned in the negro district.

A military order prohibiting the congregating of more than three persons tended to cramp the activities of today's sightseers.

The order was one of the first issued by the commandant, Colonel Lawrence E. McGee, of Dallas.

Under his official instructions, ways and means of getting to the bottom of the uprising were arranged. He appointed Col. L. S. Davidson, of Dallas, 12th cavalry, Texas National Guard, provost marshal, and named Majors Earl Z. Crowdus, of Dallas, and John Naylor, of Fort Worth, assistant provost marshals.

He also named Davidson, Crowdus and Naylor to constitute a court of inquiry with supreme authority to investigate and to direct arrests.

All business places except hotels, restaurants and drug stores were ordered to close at 6 p. m.

Martial law was clamped down last night under a proclamation by Governor Dan Moody well after the rioting had ceased, but in the face of widely reported rumors that a new onslaught on the jail was planned in an effort to liberate 13 mob members held there. Scouting parties were sent out today to survey the situation. They reported there were no indications of a renewed attack.

The machine guns set up at the corners of the jail buildings last night remained in place and well manned.

The sheriff was not replaced in control of the jail, but acted under direction of national guardsmen.

A young man suspected of taking part in Friday's riots was apprehended today, the first arrest since the inauguration of martial law. He was questioned by Colonel Davidson and orders were issued for the arrest of several other men.

The streets became so crowded with automobiles late today that guardsmen prohibited motorists from driving around the court house square.

Forces in control of Sherman under Governor Moody's declaration of martial law consist of 421 Texas National Guardsmen and 10 Texas Rangers.

The martial law declaration was the second during the three and one-half years of Governor Moody's administration. The other was at Borger after the slaying of a county official.

Colonel McGee said he had not checked the exact number of prisoners in the jail but Sheriff Arthur Vaughn said late yesterday 13 had been imprisoned.

Grayson County Court House was burned with George Hughes, a negro, on trial for attacking a white woman, have been transferred to Dallas County and thirteen of the men were lodged in the Dallas County jail today. The fourteenth defendant was placed on $5,000 bail.

Each prisoner faces all four charges, and Governor Moody and county and Federal officers at Sherman, as well as the military authorities who have maintained martial law there since the lynching, declare everything possible will be done to obtain convictions.

The cases were ordered transferred by Judge R. M. Carter, who said it would be impossible to get a jury in Grayson County.

The men held in the Dallas County jail are C. A. Briggs, Cleo Wolf, Jeff Jones, Webb Purdon, J. C. McCasland, Leslie Cole, James Arnold, Alvin Morgan, William Dophey, Leonard O'Neal, Roy M. Allen, Kess Roper and James May. Horace Reynolds was released on bail.

The prisoners were brought to Dallas handcuffed and chained in pairs. Dates for trials have not been set.

SHERMAN RIOT CASES WILL BE TRIED IN DALLAS

Sherman, Tex., May 23 (AP).—Thirteen men indicted in connection with the mob rioting here May 9 were transferred to the Dallas county jail today after a change of venue was ordered from the Fifteenth District court here to Criminal District Court No. 2 at Dallas.

The change of venue was ordered following a conference of city and county officials with Col. L. E. McGee, in charge of national guardsmen sent here to restore order. No action had been taken by the grand jury in the cases of fourteen other men arrested for questioning.

The group taken to Dallas included Jim May, Jess Roper, Jeff Jones, J. B. McCasland, Web Purdon, Cleo Wolfe, Jimmie Arnold, Leslie Cole, Leonard O'Neal, Roy Allen, C. E. Briggs, Bill Sofey and Alvin Morgan.

Horace Reynolds, also indicted in connection with the rioting, was released on $1,500 bond.

The indictments were based on evidence furnished by a military court of inquiry, which started its investigation a short time after martial law was declared.

The rioting started when a crowd attempted to lynch George Hughes, negro, as he went on trial for attacking a white woman. The disturbance lasted well into the early hours of the next day and order was not restored until 350 guardsmen had been rushed here.

During the disorders, the mob burned the courthouse, suffocating the negro, who had been placed in a vault. Later the crowd blasted the vault, obtained the negro's body, dragged it to the negro district and burned it.

Several negro buildings also were fired and other negroes were threatened [illegible] they left Sherman.

The retired army officer was selected to take charge of the situation after martial law is lifted. Although his appointees went on duty today, military rule still prevailed and no indication was made as to when it would be discarded.

Prisoners Arrive.

Sheriff J. A. Vaughan of Grayson county arrived Friday at noon with thirteen prisoners accused in connection with riot at Sherman.

The prisoners were transported to Dallas aboard a special interurban car in custody of Sheriff Vaughan, Deputy L. B. Shipp, Constable P. M. Porter and State Rangers Goss and Purvis.

No trouble was encountered in leaving Sherman with the men or en route to Dallas, Sheriff Vaughan said.

Judge Charles A. Pippen, to whose court the cases were transferred, said he had received no official notice of the transfer. He indicated he would set the cases down for an early trial.

Thirteen of the defendants were transferred to Dallas County jail after their cases were sent here on a charge of venue. Four have been released from custody on bond.

To Push Prosecution

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 19 (ANP Telegram)—A group of citizens led by Dr. W. A. J. Bullock, president of the local chapter of the N. A. A. C. P., assembled in the office of the Black Dispatch, Roscoe C. Dungee's paper, Sunday to formulate plans to aid in the prosecution of twelve white men who have been arraigned at Chickasha, Okla., in connection with the lynching of Henry Argo, half-wit youth May 31. A combined effort is to be made by the State's Negroes to win convictions.

Sunday, plans were made for the solicitation of funds throughout the state. Special counsel, composed of Attorneys J. Q. A. Harrod and Laynie Harrod, both veteran criminal lawyers will be employed and the governor petitioned to change of venue as it is believed a conviction cannot be obtained in Chickasha.

Trial is July 7

WILHALLA, S. C., June 19—Both sides of the case of seventeen Oconee County white men under indictment for the lynching of Allen Green, 50, Apr. 28, are lining up here for a legal battle. The date for the trial has been set at July 7 at a special session of court.

NEGRO LYNCHING EVIDENCE TAKEN

Work by Court of Inquiry to Be Presented to Grand Jury.

(By Associated Press)

BRYAN, Tex., June 28.—Evidence indicating the identity of members of a posse that killed Bill Roan, negro, on June 18, taken by a court of inquiry here, will be presented to the Brazos County grand jury at the September term, A. S. Ware, county attorney, stated today.

The court had listened to six witnesses and others had been summoned, Ware said.

Roan was sought as an alleged attacker of a white woman. He was hunted for two days in Brazos, Burleson and Robertson counties. His body bearing gunshot wounds was found in Brazos County, after it had been reported a posse had taken him in Robertson County. Officials were working on a theory that the negro was taken to the spot where his body was found and executed.

15 Sherman Lynchers on Trial Monday

Defender 9-27-30

SHERMAN, Texas, Sept. 26.—Facing charges of arson, riot with intent to murder and use of explosives to commit arson, the 15 indicted lynchers are to stand trial in the Grayson county courthouse on Sept. 29.

Chicago, Ill.

Rioting at Sherman started when a mob attempted to lynch George Hughes as he went on trial May 9 for attacking a white woman. Foiled in its efforts to get the man, who had been locked in a vault, the building was fired by the mob and destroyed. Hughes' body was removed from the vault, dragged through the streets and burned. Four of the defendants still remain in jail here and the others have been released in $5,000 bail.

Virginia's Anti-Lynching Law Stands Up

One white member of a Boydton (Virginia) mob has been sentenced to four years in the penitentiary and seven others are to face trial in December for yanking Milburn Neal from his home in the dead of the night, hauling him a mile out into the country, walloping him with hickory sticks and then carrying him back home.

Of course, the mob could have been rougher. It might have strung Neal up and completely lynched him properly. In view of the fact that his only crime was that he put his wife in a Catholic hospital, the mob figured the "punishment" suited the "crime."

Two features of this case are noteworthy: first, Neal is white, and second, the conviction of the white mobbist was the first secured under the Virginia anti-lynching law, designed to protect Negroes from lawless whites.

Backwoodsman Neal probably never heard of the anti-lynching law before, and if he had known about it, he would probably have opposed its enactment into law; and yet, he is its first beneficiary.

ANTI-LYNCHING MEASURE AGAIN IN CONGRESS

Afro American

Representative Stone Would Create Mob Law Commission

7-21-30

Baltimore Md

TO REPORT JAN. 1

Citizens Should Write, Urging Passage.

(Washington Bureau of the AFRO)

WASHINGTON. — A joint resolution has been introduced in the House of Representatives to create a Mob Law Commission to investigate and study the lynching of citizens by mobs or otherwise, in order that a proper law may be enacted.

The measure provides that the commission shall report its findings and recommendations to Congress on or before January 1, 1931. It was introduced by Representative U. S. Stone (Rep.), of Oklahoma.

The resolution has been referred to the House Committee on the Judiciary, and is waiting to be reported out by that body.

Mr. Stone Speaks

When interviewed and questioned about the [illegible] by an AFRO reporter, Mr. Stone, the sponsor of the measure, said:

"When I introduced the resolution, I did so with the view of suggesting legislation that would meet the approval of the administration. If this is not done, two or three men opposed to a measure, can kill it.

"There is a difference between a bill and a resolution. A proposal of the nature of the Dyer Anti-lynching bill, unless it secures the endorsement of the administration, will never pass Congress.

"If the commission, as proposed in the resolution is appointed, then it will be considered the mouthpiece of the President. Any report they make will have the support of the administration behind it."

Representative Stone is a Republican from a district which is nominally Democratic. In his hometown of Norman, Mr. Stone feels that, although it is a Democratic stronghold, 90 per cent of the people would endorse his actions if called upon to vote for it.

"With due respect to the Democrats," Mr. Stone said, "lynching is not a party issue. In many instances it is not a matter of color, either. It is primarily a matter of common sense and justice.

"The mind of a mob is like that of a crazy man. Intelligent people who get into a mob, become crazy like the mob. In every case I have heard, law-abiding citizens are opposed to it in every way possible."

Regarding himself personally, Mr. Stone said:

"In 1918, I ran for governorship of Oklahoma. The colored papers of the state gave me credit for being the first white man that ever came out in a campaign against lynching in both the white and the colored papers. I ran the same statement in white and colored papers that I was opposed to the evil.

"In 1922, I ran for the Senate, and also included the anti-lynching plank in my platform.

"In 1928, when I was elected to Congress from a Democratic district, the people knew that I was for anti-lynching legislation. The circumstances under which I was elected indicates to me that the best class of people are opposed to this disgrace. Republican and Democratic papers in Texas and Oklahoma are coming out in editorials against the recent outbreaks in those sections."

Citizens' Support Needed

Whether the resolution will be reported out of the committee, or be allowed to rest in a pigeon-hole, depends upon public interest. Citizens can expidite the consideration of the measure by bombarding their representatives with requests for immediate action.

The fate of the measure now rests with the following members of the Judiciary Committee, who should be written to, and urged to report the resolution favorably.

Republican representatives, George S. Graham, Pa.; Richard Yates, Illinois; L. C. Dyer, Missouri; Charles A. Christopherson, South Dakota; Earl C. Michner, Michigan; Andrew J. Hickey, Indiana; J. Banks Kurtz, Pa.; C. Ellis Moore, Ohio; Geo. R. Stobbs, Massachusetts; Fiorello La Guardia, New York; Homer W. Hall, Illinois; Carl G. Bachman, West Virginia; Charles J. Sparks, Kansas; Charles A. Jones, North Carolina, and Charles E. Swanson, Iowa.

DePriest Endorses

In a leter to Mr. Stone, Congressman DePriest said:

"I beg to express my hearty approval of Joint Resolution, 359, creating a Mob Law Commission for the study of mob law, etc. I shall be glad to co-operate with you in any way you can suggest."

Anti-Lynching Law Still Dead Issue With Law-makers; No Appointments

Norfolk, Va

WASHINGTON, D. C.—No remedial legislation relieving Negroes from mob violence, disfranchisement and discrimination was passed by the second session of the 71st Congress, which closed July 3, the session being devoted mainly to consideration of tariff revision, income tax reduction, an omnibus rivers and harbors bill, public construction work, and appropriation bills.

From a purely racial viewpoint the most outstanding achievement of the session was the defeat of Circuit Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina. He was nominated to be an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, but was rejected after determined opposition to his confirmation developed among colored people and organized labor. The vacancy to which he was nominated was filled after his rejection by the appointment of Owen J. Roberts of Philadelphia.

No Anti-Lynching Law

No anti-lynching legislation was considered at this session. Toward the end of the session, Representative U. S. Stone, Republican, of Oklahoma, introduced a joint resolution providing for a commission to investigate and study the lynching evil in the United States. It was referred to the judiciary committee, there to be pigeon-holed.

Congress gave the President an appropriation for a commission to study and review conditions in Haiti. The commission completed its investigation and submitted its report to the President in March. The President asked Dr. R. R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Institute, to form a committee to undertake an exhaustive investigation into the educational system of Haiti. Dr. Moton and his committee were invited to sail with the commission, but he had not had time to complete his plans and it was not until the middle of June that the committee headed by Dr. Moton sailed for Haiti, where it completed its survey this week.

Colored Statesmen Ignored

As a consequence of the recommendations of the committee, which investigated conditions in Haiti, a non-military minister, Dana G. Mronro, has been appointed to Haiti. He is white. Appointment of a Negro as minister to Haiti had been proposed several times, and the report was frequently circulated that there was objection to a colored man representing the United States in Haiti by the Haitian government. The State Department always denied such reports and said that appointment of a minister was not under consideration, would not be so long as the American High Commissioner remained in Haiti.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

Last week, we carried an editorial under the above caption, listing Michigan as one of the eight states of the United States where there is no capital punishment. This paper has not advocated the abolishing of the death penalty, but as this is a live question in South Carolina, we take pleasure in again discussing this with our readers by giving the following story sent out by the League to Abolish Capital Punishment:

The Story of Michigan

Michigan abolished capital punishment in 1846, but as regularly as epidemics of mumps and measles Michigan has witnessed ineffectual attempts to restore the death penalty.

2 Lynchings in 81 Years

In one of these the victim was a colored boy who worked on a farm in the western part of the state and in a quarrel with his employer over unpaid wages attempted to kill him. He was taken from jail and lynched by a mob during the period of the civil war when misguided people were attributing the cause of the Civil War to the Negroes.

On the night of May 23, 1893, a lynching occurred at Corunna. William Sullivan, a wandering hobo of low grade mentality, was given employment on the farm of Layton Leck near Durand. One day while working in the woods with his employer Sullivan killed Leck with an ax. He then went to the house and shot Mrs. Leck. Sullivan disappeared, but was apprehended after several months, convicted of murder and sentenced to prison for life. Public feeling towards Sullivan was so intense that after his conviction a mob forced its way into the county jail at Corunna, took the convicted murderer from his cell, placed [illegible] about his neck and dragged him a distance to a tree, where they hanged him.

The Law's Tragic Mistake

But there are cases in which the law makes terrible and irreparable blunders. About 40 years ago a man by the name of Fitzgerald was hanged at Sandwich after being convicted of the murder of a girl. Two years later a man named Sellers confessed on his deathbed that he was the murderer. This confession enlightened the public mind, but it accomplished little for Fitzgerald, who had been officially murdered by due process of the law. Michigan has had some disagreeable experiences which might have been aggravated by capital punishment. Three or four will suffice.

The Thacker Case

W. H. Thacker, of Benzonia, Mich. bought poison at a drug store, explaining that he was going to kill some rats. A few weeks later his wife died under suspicious circumstances. An examination by an expert chemist disclosed poison enough in her stomach to to kill several persons. Thacker was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. Several months after his friends, in cleaning the house where he lived, came upon a letter written by Mrs. Thacker in which she declared that she was in ill health and tired of life and intended to commit suicide by taking some of her husband's rat poison.

A FEDERAL LYNCH LAW

Call

9-5-30

Kansas City, Mo.

The opposition of southern states to the Dyer anti-lynching law was based on their contention that it usurped the police power which properly belonged to the states.

In view of the recent wave of lynchings throughout the South and the total breakdown of local law enforcement machinery is it not time to renew the fight for a federal anti-lynching law? In spite of all the protestations of southern leaders, lynching goes on apace. It will always go on as long as sheriffs and militiamen who have been reared to believe in it are entrusted with preventing it. It is time for the government to step in.

IDIOCY FROM THE NORTH

Two negroes hanged in Mississippi on September 10 make the total of lynchings for the year 18 so far as against 12 for 1929. This increase makes agitation for a federal anti-lynching law the more effective, and arrangements have already been made for the drafting of such a bill and for its introduction in the coming session of Congress. In 1923 a federal anti-lynching law passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 230 to 119, only to be defeated by a filibuster in the Senate. But after such a close squeak, the annual number of lynchings decreased for a time; and public sentiment, expressed through the more responsible of the newspapers and through the utterances of public men, has been setting itself definitely against this national shame. It is not unlikely that a federal law would receive an even kindlier reception now than it did eight years ago. Gradually it has come to be true that the lynching mob is made up of the more irrespoisible elements of the community and at least in public its acts are disavowed by respectable persons. Moreover the negro is becoming an economic power in the community; not only his labor but his property has value. This last, of course, will weigh the scales in favor of the federal law, if it is passed. Not his champions among the white race but his own efforts toward making himself a factor to be respected in the community will be the means of protecting the negro from lawlessness.

The foregoing example of Northern logic in regards to Southern affairs is from the New York Nation, widely known as a liberal publication. The Nation usually exhibits good sense, but not in this instance.

No responsible citizen of this country, whether he be a Northerner, Westerner or Southerner, condones or defends lynching of human beings. Yet intelligent people know that a Fedeal anti-lynching bill is neither sensible nor desirable. The individual States are amply qualified to punish members of mobs who take the law into their own hands and commit murder, and the States have demonstrated it on numerous occasions.

The movement for a bill placing more power in the Federal government is in line with the trend of our times, for we are drifting further and further from the old-fashioned doctrine of States Rights. But if a Federal anti-lynching bill is introduced it will be killed. As The Nation says, such a bill was defeated in 19'2 by the filibuster method, but the most famous filibuster ever staged in the United States Senate was that which killed Senator Lodge's Force Bill during Harrison's Administration in 1890. It was a bill designed to place Federal bayonets at Southern voting polls to enable negroes to vote. The filibuster lasted for nearly two months.

Lodge's Force Bill represented the attitude of the North toward the South, and an anti-lynching bill comes from the same source.

As recently as 1928 Congressman L. C. Dyer of Missouri prepared an anti-lynching bill providing that every county in which a lynching occurred should be fined $10,000. Thus the thousands of innocent and law-abiding citizens of a county would be fined for the crimes of an irresponsible and lawless few.

It will be both the pleasure and the duty of Southern Senators to fight any proposed Federal anti-lynching bill to the last ditch.

Despite the number of lynchings that have occurred this year, there has been a decline of this form of lawlessness in the last few years. Perhaps the mob and its murderous spirit will never be totally wiped from our civilization, but an enlightened public sentiment will do more toward removing it than anything else. Certainly a Federal law will accomplish nothing in that direction.

INCREASED LYNCHINGS, BUT PROGRESS JUST THE SAME.

Final reports show that there were 25 lynchings in the United States during the past year, one more than twice the number of 1929, and three more than twice the number of 1928. This is a regrettable increase, and is 25 lynchings too many, of course, but just the same it does not indicate that we are slipping back into a state of savagery. In fact, we did far better than was ordinarily the case in years of depression, and while slipping for the time being, the record really indicates progress when compared with those established in former years.

The New York World has looked up the records for lynchings covering the period from 1885 down to this year. It finds unmistakable evidence that this form of lawlessness increases in hard times and decreases in periods of prosperity. Here are it's figures:

"In 1892, which marked a period of depression as serious as the one we are now going through, 255 persons were lynched in this country, the largest number on record. In 1908, another bad year, there were 100 lynchings, as compared with 63 the year before and an average of 71 for three years before that. In 1921 the next very bad year, there were 64, as compared with 61 in 1920. Since then the total has dropped sharply, until in 1928 it was 11, and in 1929, 12.

"This year, with the return of depression, there is an increase. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reports 25, which is more than double the number of the year before. Twenty-five lynchings are twenty-five too many: it cannot be pretended that they reflect any credit on us. Yet even this figure can give those who are waging a fight against lynching reason to believe that their efforts have not been in vain. Set against the figure of 1892, it shows that we have less than a tenth of the lynchings we had some forty years ago. Corrected for population increase, which has been 100 per cent., it shows that we have relatively only a twentieth of the lynchings we once had. In other words, even allowing for the bad showing of this year, progress has been made. There is every reason for thinking that if the opposition to lynching continues to be as resolute as it has been since the war the evil will shortly be wiped out altogether."

In making his report on the year's lynchings—and his total is only 21—Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, cites encouraging figures as well as the disheartening ones covering the lynchings, for he shows that there were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western States and 35 in Southern States. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precuations taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 52 negro men and 2 negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

The offenses for which persons were lynched were: Rape, murder, attempted rape, killing officers of the law, robbery, being a witness, bombing houses, and others in which the causes were not known.

For the first time in a number of years we list North Carolina among the States reporting lynchings. There was one in North Carolina, and thus we have a black mark on a record book which had been remarkably clean for a number of years.

Lynchings During 1930

The record of lynchings for 1930, twenty-five, as compared with twelve during the previous year, is most depressing. There had been hopes that the comparatively low figures of recent years might be maintained and that there might even be a reduction in the number of instances of mob murder. Not since 1926, when there were thirty lynchings, have mobs so frequently taken the law into their own hands. In 1919 there were 83 lynchings, in 1909 there were 87 and in 1899 there were 107. In 1892 the record was 255.

A firmer determination by officers of the law to do their duty in protecting prisoners, attempts at expediting trials and the arousing of public sentiment, especially in the south, against this evil had been regarded as promising factors. Georgia was the home of a movement, the formation of interracial committees of good will, from which much was expected. And yet that state again heads the list with seven lynchings. Between 1889 and 1928 it had 457. The others last year took place in Alabama and Texas; which had four each; Mississippi, three; South Carolina, two, and Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma, one each. Indiana, with two, was the only northern state that had any lynchings.

This sinister showing has revived the demand for a federal anti-lynching law, providing heavy penalties for counties or communities wherein such outrages occur. But as President Hoover recently said with reference to the activities of gangsters and racketeers, this is distinctly a matter for the police power of the states. While there have been more lynchings this year than last, in several notable instances local authorities, by a show of courage and force, have defeated the efforts of organized lawlessness. The officers of the law have the remedy in their own hands and they ought to use it.

LYNCHINGS

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People keeps a grim account of the lynchings from year to year. In 1930 there were 25 lynchings, and that is a curious fact, because there were only 12 lynchings in 1929.

A scrutiny of the lynching records for 45 years—since 1885—shows a diminishment of this particular form of mob violence over the whole period. But the diminishing curve is not smooth. There are peaks at the points representing the years 1892, 1908, 1921 and 1930. In 1892, 255 persons were lynched in the United States, the largest number of all recorded years. In 1908 there were 100 lynchings, as compared with 63 the year before. In 1921 there were 64 as compared with 61 in 1920. During the war years the figures were higher, of course.

The statistics establish a connection between lynchings and bad times. The years 1892, 1908, 1921 and 1930 were years of economic depression. Misfortune, evidently, does not chasten men or humble them, but sharpens their lust for blood.

But there is a brighter side of the picture. In 1930, a shameful year in the recent lynching records, there were only one-tenth as many lynchings as in 1892. The population of the United States has increased 100 per cent since 1892, therefore lynching has decreased to one-twentieth of the 1892 rate.

Although 25 lynchings in 1930 were 25 too many, the millions of citizens who abhor this cowardly murdering by mobs have good reason to believe that the practice is on the way to extinction. By 1940 lynching will have become an unusual crime, profoundly shocking all save the most degraded element of the population.

The United States lynching record during 1930 was a sad disappointment. There were 25 lynchings, an increase of more than 100 percent over the year before. Indiana, with only about 2.5 percent of the country's population, furnished 8.3 percent of the total lynchings. And on trial, the first defendant in the Indiana lynching case was acquitted. Although lynching is one of the most horrible features of society in the United States, it is admittedly anything but easy to put an end to it. Where public indignation is lacking, the most conscientious authorities are practically helpless against the outrages of mob savagery.

More Lynchings Blow at Progress of the South

The fact that lynchings in 1930 were twice as numerous as in 1929 is very discouraging. For some years mob murders had been steadily decreasing, and many optimistic observers thought a year might come soon in which there would be none at all.

The outlook is not completely disheartening. Twenty-five or 30 years ago lynchings ran as high as 255 in one year. The setback in 1930 need not be regarded as a start toward the return of any such ghastly figure as that. The sudden increase this year will doubtless spur private citizens, public officials and social organizations to further and stronger action against lynching.

A study of recent lynchings in the South shows that they occur usually in communities where the economic and educational standards are low. This suggests constructive work in education and social welfare.

LYNCHING

Lynchings in the United States in 1930 numbered twenty-five, or an increase of more than 100 per cent over the year before, and the fact has been greeted with the sorrow and indignation it deserves in every section of the country. As is usually the case, most of these outrageous crimes against society were committed in the Southern States, but there were several of them outside the section below the Mason-Dixon Line. By comparison with thirty years ago when there were as many as 200 lynchings in a single year, we may say that progress has been made toward the elimination of perhaps the most horrible anomaly in our civilization. On the other hand, we must not become complacent as long as there is either a single lynching in a year or any effort at such fearful barbarity. In other words, we want to eradicate the savagery that prompts lynching as well as prevent it from expressing itself.

One thing particularly noticeable and gratifying this year is the fact that newspapers and individuals as a general rule have not seen fit to abuse and belabor the South as barbarous end uncivilized in toto because certain communities forget themselves and allow the worst human instincts play. The truth is that the vast mass of public opinion in the South is as outraged when a lynching occurs as could by any means be possible elsewhere. It is likewise true that nothing is gained and much is lost when there is a disposition to indulge in really unwarranted criticism of any one State or section. The only remedy for lynching is the expression of public indignation and that remedy is being applied far more widely and effectively than used to be the case. There is no excuse whatever for lynch law, but the removal of its fearful way is a national and not a sectional problem.

THE LYNCHING RECORD.

The twenty-five lynchings in 1930 were just twenty-five too many. They are without palliation or excuse, for in each case they are an attack on the law itself. In gathering the statistics of lynchings, care must be taken to define the term. It does not include miscellaneous mob killings, or even the shooting of those who are avoiding arrest. Properly speaking, the term lynching should apply only to instances where a considerable number of people revert to barbarism, take a prisoner already in custody away from the legal officers, and execute their own ideas of vengeance, in total disregard of the due processes of law. To defend lynching, one must assume that the courts will not do their duty, and that government has failed.

The New York World adds an interesting comentary to the lynching record. It shows by reference to the records compiled by the World Almanac since 1885 that this form of lawlessness increases when times are bad and decreases when times are good. The lowest record was made in 1928. In 1892, which marked a period of depression fully as serious as that at present, 255 persons were lynched in this country, said to have been the largest number on record. In 1908, another bad year, there were 100 lynchings, as compared with 63 the year before, and an average of 71 for the three years before that. In 1921, the next bad business year, there were 64, as compared with 61 in 1920. Since then the total has dropped steadily until in 1928 it was 11, and in 1929, 12.

Whether general unemployment in itself leads to crimes of violence that arouse human passions, or whether in hard times a submerged element of one race becomes unduly jealous of the progress of another race, is a problem that might well be studied. How else is there to be explained the fact that in 1930 the number of lynchings doubled the number for either 1928, or 1929?

Another interesting phase of the picture is that there has been no lynching in Virginia—and in fact no serious attempt at lynching—since passage of the act of 1928, making lynching a State offense, and empowering the Governor to use all means at his disposal for prosecution of those taking part in such mobs. North Carolina has been free of lynchers since it sent the members of two would-be lynching parties to the State penitentiary. Where officials take a positive stand, the evil can be and has been stamped out.

A Bad Lynching Record.

Among the bad features of 1930 was its lynching record. Twenty-five mobs took the law into their own hands during the year. This checks against only ten in the country in 1929 and is very bad. The list would have been larger had not some fearless and intelligent officers stood forth to discharge their duties. Notably this was true of a Missouri sheriff only two weeks ago who denied a mob, bent on lynching a negro guilty of a terrible crime, access to his prisoner. He defeated the mob.

In 1926 there were 30 lynchings but the three years witnessed fewer mobs.

Georgia is at the head of the list with seven victims. Alabama had four and Texas had four. Mississippi had three, South Carolina two and Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma one each. Indiana was the only state outside the South, counting Oklahoma as a southern state, which suffered from a mob outrage and it goes on the dishonor roll with two.

Mobs have little success when they have to deal with courageous officials. Unfortunately officers are not always chosen in local communities for their [illegible]age.

Twenty-Five Lynchings

After the comparatively good record of only 1[illegible] lynchings in the United States in 1929, the [illegible] year stained its record with more than twice that number—25.

Twenty-four of this year's lynching victims were negroes. Twenty-three of the lynchings were in southern states, the exceptions being two in Indiana. Georgia led with seven. Of striking import, however, is the fact that only three of the 25 were for assaults upon women.

Florida had only one—that of Hodaz and, that we are sorry to say, in this county. He was the only white man of the 25.

There is hope for improvement in the coming year. The leading women's organizations of the South have formed a joint body to oppose resort to mob law. They have started the fight by declaring that lynching is a protection to womanhood. Through continued appeals to officers of the law and to the better sentiment of each community, these women hope to greatly reduce mob executions and to make lynchings only unpleasant memories of a less enlightened past.

MOB SAVAGERY IN 1930

According to figures supplied by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, there were 25 lynchings in the country during the year 1930—which to serious-minded citizens is a painful reminder that the forces of intolerance, ignorance and racial prejudice are still active in our civilization.

For a number of years past there has been a steady decline in this form of lawlessness but the recent upward turn of these manifestations of mob savagery is discouraging evidence that the sense of social responsibility is still lamentably weak in certain elements of our population. Whereas in 1921 64 lynchings were recorded, the annual total had dropped to 12 in 1929.

Sociological authorities are convinced that the best hope of improvement in the situation is predicated upon a systematic campaign of education among both white and colored populations and the cultivation of co-operation between the more enlightened leaders of both races. Movements in this direction set on foot by the press and public leaders of the southern states have exerted a very effective influence and are to be credited with a large share of the results in cutting down the number of lynchings in recent years. With fearless co-operation on the part of the prosecuting and law-enforcement authorities, doubtless the record for 1930 would have been much more creditable.

However, as the New York World reminds us, even the record of this year can give those who are waging a fight against lynching reason to believe that their efforts have not been in vain. "Set against the figure of 1892 (when 252 persons were lynched), it shows that we have less than a tenth of the ly[illegible] we had some forty years ago. Corrected for population increase, which has been 100 per cent, it shows that we have relatively only a twentieth of the lynchings we once had. In other words, even allowing for the bad showing of this year, progress has been made. There is every reason for thinking that if the opposition continues to be as resolute as it has been since the war the evil will shortly be wiped out altogether."

ECONOMIC ASPECTS OF LYNCHING

The New York World after a study of lynchings for the year, which were reported as 25, discovers that more lynchings occur in times of depression than in more prosperous eras. It supports its contention by citing figures for various years, each coming close on the heels of a bad business period.

The error in this calculation is that the World defines lynchings in the common form—that is violence done by an angry mob. Actually there are hundreds of lynchings that are never classified in that group. Chicago's gang massacres are lynchings, and so was the killing of Ella Mae Wiggins in North Carolina.

In the broader sense, killing of persons suspected of crime by agents of the law when not justified fall into the same category.

Only those where racial differences are involved have any marked economis aspect.

The Lynching Record

~~There were 25 lynchings during~~ 1930. That is a record of 25 lynchings too many and one ~~which does not~~ reflect any credit on the nation. However, those who are directing the fight against lynchings need not feel that their efforts have been in vain.

In 1892, which from an economic standpoint was as bad a year as 1930, there were 225 lynchings. There is a peculiar relationship between economic depressions and the extent to which men permit their passions to become unbridled. In 1908 another bad year, there were 100 lynchings as compared with 63 the year before and an average of 71 per year for the three years before that. In 1921, the next bad economic year, there were 64 lynchings compared with 61 in 1921. The drop since then has been very sharp. In 1928, there were only 11 lynchings, and in 1929 but 12. The lynching record, considered with the increase in population, which is 100 per cent since 1892, shows a twentieth of the lynchings we had then. Even allowing for this year's increase, great progress has been made.

Instead of considering the record for 1930, opponents of lynching should consider the entire record since 1892. If this is done, it is obvious that the time will come when a lynching in this country will be a very rare exception. Every intelligent person will welcome that time.

Lynching

Optimistic observers who thought a few years ago that lynching was about to die out in the United States get a jolt in the 1930 figures on this American form of lawlessness. Twenty-five lynchings are recorded in the closing twelvemonth by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in its annual summary of lynching. This compares with 12 in 1929, a jump of 100 per cent.

The increase is bad enough, but when it is compared with the figures for 25 or 30 years ago, when lynchings—accepting the word in its commonly accepted meanings as "rope-hangings," and not in its broader, which would include bandit invasions, machine-gun murders and the like—ran as high as 255 in one year, it is still possible to credit ourselves with some progress along the road away from lawlessness.

Georgia led in these rope-hangings last year. As usual such incidents are not confined to the South. Two are reported as having taken place in Indiana. The popular tradition that "lynching" is the South's only remedy for offenses against women is further repudiated by the 1930 figures. In only three of the cases were such assaults offered as an excuse.

It is a depressing record. But there is hope in the long view of the problem. Better education and a slowly rising standard of public intelligence is pushing back these outbursts of sadistic behavior, in spite of discouraging reports for 1930.

ONE OF THE TASKS AHEAD

According to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 25 lynchings took plac in the United States in 1930 as compared with twelve in 1929. All bu three of the victims of this mob violence were Negroes. Seven of the lynchings occurred in Georgia, four each in Alabama and Texas, three in Mississippi, two each in Indiana and North Carolina, and one each in Florida, South Carolina, and Oklahoma.

It is not provable that this increase in lynching is a reflection of growing disrespect for law in the United States. At the same time, it is quite reasonable to connect the two. Mob law, it seemed a few years ago, had about reached the vanishing point. Is the practice of it being renewed because the elements from which mobbers come have witnessed so often of late the ease with which the underworld puts the law under foot and settles its affairs on the spot?

Anyhow, such a supposition is so reasonable that the Wickersham commission might well take cognizance of the increase in lynch law and consider whether it has any connection with the underworld's habit of thumbing its nose at the government. One of the biggest tasks before this country, if not the biggest task—not even excluding the task of beating back from business depression—is to restore law and order where now is the chaos of prohibition. If lynch law is trying to keep up with gang law, we can't get at the mob too soon.

MORE LYNCHINGS

The fact that lynchings in 1930 were twice as numerous as in 1929 is very discouraging. For some years mob murders had been steadily decreasing, and many optimistic observers thought a year might come soon in which there would be none at all.

The outlook is not completely disheartening. Twenty-five or 30 years ago lynchings ran as high as 255 in one year. The set-back in 1930 need not be regarded as a start toward the return of any such ghastly figure as that. The sudden increase this year will doubtless spur private citizens, public officials and social organizations to further and stronger action against lynching.

A study of recent lynchings in the South show that they occur usually in communities where the economic and educational standards are low. This suggests constructive work in education and social welfare.

LYNCHING IN 1930.

One of the most regrettable developments of the year that has just closed was a marked increase in mob violence. While 1929 was marred by only twelve lynchings, 1930 was disgraced by twenty-five mob executions. This represented an increase of more than 100 per cent in the lynching record, right on the heels of a rising hope that the country was approaching a day when this blot upon American civilization would no longer exist.

Tuskegee

Of the victims of mob violence last year, one is reported to have been a white man, while twenty-four were negroes. The record by states has been published as follows: Georgia, seven lynchings; Alabama and Texas, four each; Mississippi, three; Indiana and South Carolina, two each; Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma, one each. As will be seen from the foregoing, Georgia led the country in mob executions, having almost twice as many as any other State.

THE LYNCHING RECORD.

During the year 1929 there were twelve lynchings in this country; twenty-five is the record for 1930. The increase is deplorable. We were not as civilized in 1930 by 100 per cent. as in 1929. But the situation is not hopeless. The relapse is not as startling as the figures suggest when considered in connection with earlier figures.

Attention has been called to twenty-five or thirty years ago, when the lynching total ran as high as 255 in one year. We have progressed far since that record was established. Mobs are less sure of themselves and officers of the law and the courts are exhibiting when occasion demands, a sterner quality of backbone.

It should be added that lynching is no longer geographical. It is not confined to the south. There is no longer an exclusive "lynching belt." Nor has any section done more than the south to discourage the mob method of punishment.

BACKSLIDING

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People say twenty five persons were lynched in the United States in 1930, as against twelve in 1929.

Only three of the twenty five lynchings were for criminal assault.

That there is improvement in the lynching situation is believed by optimists when two or three years of lessened lynching statistics pass.

But, seemingly, there is no good ground for belief that our civilization is in this respect improving.

Whenever the lynching list gets down to such figures that there is a disposition, on the part of law abiding persons, to boast, up it goes again.

Many regard the best remedy for lynching the automatic removal law but even that has not worked wonders in Kentucky. Eventually the law will provide that no member of the family of an ousted sheriff or jailer should succeed him.

THE LYNCHING RECORD.

Lynching continues, sad to say, one of our infamous national outdoor sports. By glancing at the New York World Almanac, which carries statistics on lynching since 1885, it can be seen that this form of lawlessness increases when times are bad and decreases when times are good. In 1892, which marked a period of depression as serious as the one we are now going through, 255 persons were lynched in this country, the largest number on record. In 1908, another bad year, there were 100 lynchings, as compared with 63 the year before and an average of 71 for three years before that. In 1921, the next very bad year, there were 64, as compared with 61 in 1920. Since then the total has dropped sharply, until in 1928 it was 11, and in 1929, 12.

This year, with the return of depression, there is an increase. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reports 25, which is more than double the number of the year before. Twenty-five lynchings are twenty-five too many. Georgia led in lynchings last year. As usual these incidents are not confined to the South. The popular tradition that lynching is the South's only remedy for offenses against women is further repudiated by the 1930 figures. Thirteen More Than The Previous Year

GEORGIA IN THE LEAD

24 Of The Year's Victims Were Negroes

New York Dec. 28—There have been 25 recorded and authenticated lynchings in 1930, as against 12 during 1929, according to a summary for the year issued today from the office of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth avenue.

Of the victims 24 were Negroes and one a white man.

Georgia heads the list of lynching states for the year with 7 mob victims, Alabama and Texas had four each, Mississippi 3, Indiana and South Carolina 2 each, and Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma had one each.

The offenses which brought about the lynchings include not stopping an automobile when ordered, being active in politics, testifying against a white man in court, quarrelling with a white man, murder, assault and attempted assault, robbery and in one case, offense unknown.

One of the mob victims, George Hughes was burned alive in the jail at Sherman, Texas, and the body of George Johnson was publicly burned at Honey Grove, also in Texas.

In a statement on the increase in lynchings, made by Walter White, acting secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, increasing repudiation by white women of the south, of lynching as a "protection of womanhood" is hailed as an encouraging development. The statement reads as follows:

"In 25 lynchings during 1930, rape was assigned as an excuse in only three cases. That lynching is not and has never been primarily a 'protection of white womanhood' in the south or elsewhere, is attested by the increasing number of resolutions passed by leading white women in southern states repudiating this form of barbarity. During the year representative white women of 12 southern states including church, educational, voters, Y. W. C. A. and club groups have issued two statements declaring they desired no such protection,' characterising lynching as 'the complete breakdown of government and the triumph of anarchy' and stating that 'it brutalises the community where it occurs, including the women and children who frequently witness its orgies, and particularly the youth who are usually conspicuous participants.'

"Prompt action by Congress on lynching is vitally necessary. In periods of depression when tempers are short mob hysteria flames up far more quickly than in normal times. As the present unemployment crisis seems likely to be with us for some time to come, prompt Congressional action can save the lives of men and women as yet unlynched.

"Even leading white editors of the south now recognize that only the federal government can cope with this evil. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reiterates the position it has held for twenty years. that the states have shown themselves powerless to cope with a form of brutal atrocity wich would call forth the indignation of all America if it took place in some foreign land. The states still fail to punish or in the vast majority of cases, even to prosecute known and identified lynchers. A case in point is the lynching at Marion, Indiana, where the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People furnished the names of 27 known participants, with no effective action by the authorities.

"Congress will have to act to stamp out lynching if the United States is not to continue being disgraced and humiliated before the civilized world."

A Plea For Federal Intervention to Check Crime Made by N. A. A. C. P. Leader. Ga. Took Lead With Seven Killings

NEW YORK, Dec. 31— Twenty-five persons had been lynched in the United States in 1930 as against twelve in 1929, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue, announced Saturday. Of this year's victims twenty-four were Negroes and one was a white man. In 1929 all but four of the victims were Negroes.

Georgia Heads List

Georgia heads the lynching States with seven victims, Alabama and Texas had four each, Mississippi three, Indiana and South Carolina two each, and North Carolina Florida and Oklahoma had one each. According to a statement by Walter White, acting secretary of the association, attacks on women were charged in only three cases this year, the offenses including failing to stop an automobile when ordered, being active in politics, quarrelling with a white man, murder, assault and attempted assault, robbery and testifying against a white man.

Sees Need Of U. S. Action

Mr. White's statement said that "during the year representative white women of twelve Southern States, including Church, educational, voters', Y. W. C. A. and club groups have issued two statements characterizing lynching as "the complete breakdown of government and the triumph of anarchy' and stating that ' it brutalizes the community where it occurs.' "

Declaring "prompt action by Congress on lynching" to be made "vitally necessary," Mr. White commented that in periods of depression "tempers are short" and "mob hysteria flames up more quickly than in normal times."

INCREASED LYNCHING NUMBER

The lynching record of 1930 while smaller than what it was a decade or more ago was larger than what it has been in more recent years, and appals because it was felt that the time had arrived when reason and good citizenship were pervading those who indulged in such lawless offenses. It is sad to note that in this country of boasted Americanism twenty-five persons were summarily put to death, some of whom, no doubt, were innocent of the offense charged. Anent the record, the New York World states:

> By glancing at The World Almanac, which carries statistics on lynching since 1885, it can be seen that this form of lawlessness increases when times are bad and decreases when times are good. In 1892, which marked a period of depression as serious as the one we are now going through, 235 persons were lynched in this country, the largest number on record. In 1808, another bad year, there were 100 lynchings, as compared with 63 the year before and an average of 71 for three years before that. In 1921, the next very bad year, there were 64, as compared with 61 in 1920. Since then the total has dropped sharply, until in 1928 it was 11, and in 1929, 12.
> This year, with the return of depression, there is an increase. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reports 25, which is more than double the number of the year before. Twenty-five lynchings are twenty-five too many; it cannot be pretended that they reflect any credit on us. Yet even this figure can give those who are making a fight against lynching reason to believe that their efforts have not been in vain. Set against the figure of 1892, it shows that we have less than a tenth of the lynchings we had some forty years ago. Corrected for population increase, which has been 100 per cent, it shows that we have relatively only a twentieth of the lynchings we once had. In other words, even allowing for the bad showing of this year, progress has been made. There is every reason for thinking that if the opposition to lynching continues to be as resolute as it has been since the war the evil will shortly be wiped out altogether.

As the cause of lynchings a correspondent in the same paper made the following est and contrite confession:

Let me say that lynching is not done wholly in defense of womanhood. Sad to say, I in my youth was the ringleader in a lynching bee just this side of the Mason and Dixon line during my first few weeks on the road as salesman. I assure you we did not lynch our man in defense of womanhood, although there were whispered rumors of a woman being connected with the victim of the lynching.

Prior to this lynching of which I speak I had attended a similar affair in——and seen an aged man tossed out of the second-story window of a court room, a rope slipped about the neck of what looked exactly like a bundle of rags, and a mob of men and boys proceed to drag the remnant of it through the middle of the main street until an arch was reached that crossed four corners of two intersecting streets, where the rope was thrown over its middle, pulled up and left swinging from the center. This was a good example of just how the thing was done, an example I never forgot how to follow. The presumed offense was supposed to be against a two-year old child, but I very much doubt the truth of it, now that I've grown much older, for the child never was produced, neither was its name or its precise habitat ever give[illegible]

A Bad Lynching Record

According to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the first six months of 1930 saw 12 lynchings—the same number of lynchings which it recorded for the whole year of 1929. The Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute makes the total for the first half of the current year only 9. It employs a stricter definition of lynching than is used by the N. A. A. C. P., and is perhaps the safer guide. No good purpose is to be served by including in the lynching category killings growing out of encounters not clearly examples of mob violence. To do that is to disturb the focus on the evil that it is sought to exterminate, to increase the difficulty of interpreting statistics, and to minimize the progress that is being made in creating a public opinion hostile to summary mob executions.

But even on the face of the conservative Tuskegee figures, the record for the first half of 1930 is depressing. The Tuskegee records put the lynchings for the whole year of 1929 at 11. Already there have been 9 lynchings and the year is only half gone. If the second half of the year should show no improvement, 1930 will have a higher lynching total than any year since 1926 when the total was 30. That would be a highly depressing development in view of the steady decline of the lynching curve during the past decade, with its drop from a high mark of 64 in 1921 to an all-time low mark of 11 in 1928.

When one contemplates the mob carnage of 1930 and one or two of its most harrowing installments, one can understand the spirit, even if one can not approve the recommendations, of the message addressed by the Committee on Race Relations of the Philadelphia Society of Friends, to Governor Moody of Texas. The suggestion that the States in which lynchings have occurred this year set aside the Fourth of July as a day of mourning and sorrow, and that they join in asking Congress to enact an anti-lynching law, may have a certain appeal for well-meaning Friends in Philadelphia, but those who make it are disconcertingly innocent of Southern psychology. The lynching problem is not to be successfully attacked in the South by combining the tactics of Mother's Day and Federal Prohibition. The most useful attack on it is from within—by a steady mobilization of public opinion against summary mob action of every kind, and in support of the employment of the police force and the organized militia to the limit to prevent mob action or to punish those who participate in it. This form of attack is bringing results and, in the end, not too long delayed, we predict, it will conquer.

Lynchings Decrease

NEW YORK, Dec. 27. (AP)—The year 1930 has seen 25 lynchings as compared with twelve in 1929, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said today in an annual summary.

Twenty-four of the victims were negroes, the association said. Georgia had seven lynchings, Alabama and Texas four apiece, Mississippi three, Indiana and South Carolina two each and Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma one each.

Walter White, acting secretary of the association, hailed as an encouraging development "the increasing repudiation by white women of the South of lynching as a protection of womanhood."

"Of twenty-five lynchings in 1930," he said, "criminal assault was assigned as an excuse in only three cases."

25 Lynchings Reported In Year; Georgia Has 7

NEW YORK.—There have been 25 recorded and authenticated lynchings in 1930, as against 12 during 1929, according to a summary for the year issued today from the offices of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue.

Of the victims 24 were Negroes and one a white man.

Georgia heads the list of lynching states for the year with 7 mob victims, Alabama and Texas had four each, Mississippi 3, Indiana and South Carolina 2 each and Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma had one each.

The offense which brought about the lynchings include not stopping an automobile when ordered, being active in politics, testifying against a white man in court, quarreling with a white man, murder, assault and attempted assault, robbery and, in one case, offense unknown.

One of the mob victims, George Hughes, was burned alive in the jail at Sherman, Texas, and the body of George Johnson was publicly burned at Honey Grove, also in Texas.

In a statement on the increase in lynchings, made by Walter White, acting secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, increasing repudiation by white women of the South, of lynching as a "protection of womanhood" is hailed as an encouraging development. The statement reads as follows:

"Even leading white editors of the South now recognize that only the federal government can cope with this evil. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reiterates the position it has held for twenty years, that the states have shown themselves powerless to cope with a form of brutal atrocity which would call forth the indignation of all America if it took place in some foreign land. The states still fail to punish or in the vast majority of cases, even to prosecute known and identified lynchers. A case in point is the lynching at Marion, Indiana, where the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People furnished the names of 27 known participants, with no effective action by the authorities.

"Congress will have to act to stamp out lynchings if the United States is not to continue being disgraced and humiliated before the civilized world."

Important developments in the fight to curb the evil include:

A survey of laws now on state statute books regarding the prevention of lynching and other crimes of mob violence to be undertaken by the University of North Carolina law school.

Announcement by George Fort Milton, editor of the Chattanooga News and chairman of the Southern Commission on the Study of Lynching, that "if such a step seems necessary," the project would include preparation of a uniform anti-lynching law for presentation to the various states for their adoption.

Editorially The World (New York) said Monday:

"By glancing at The World Almanac, which carries statistics on lynching since 1885, it can be seen that this form of lawlessness increases when times are bad and decreases when times are good. In 1892, which marked a period of depression as serious as the one we are now going through, 255 persons were lynched in this country, the largest number on record. In 1908, another bad year, there were 100 lynchings, as compared with 63 the year before and an average of 71 for three years before that. In 1921, the next very bad year, there were 64,, as compared with 61 in 1920. Since then the total has dropped sharply, until in 1928 it was 11, and in 1929, 12.

"This year, with the return of depression, there is an increase."

Southern Law School To Study Lynching Cause

ATLANTA, Dec. 29.—The Southern Commission on the Study of Lynching last week announced that the University of North Carolina Law School would undertake a survey of the laws now on the state statute books regarding the prevention of lynching and other crimes of mob violence, the apprehension and punishment of lynchers and the effectiveness of methods for preventing and punishing "such disgraceful episodes."

The announcement by Chairman George Fort Milton, white, editor of the Chattanooga News, also stated "if such a step seems necessary," the project would include preparation of a uniform anti-lynching law for presentation to the various states for their adoption.

As causative factors of mob violence discussed at a meeting here the commission listed "tensions resulting from economic competition of racial groups, the interacting effect of pauperized education and community backwardness and the cultural and religious backgrounds of communities in which lynchings occur."

LYNCHINGS.

Little satisfaction can be derived from the fact that there was no increase in lynchings last year, for even a single application of lynch law would leave an indelible and shameful blot upon the escutcheon of any year.

Of the 12 victims of lynching parties in 1929, eight were negroes. An old man and a woman were the pathetic victims of two of these outbreaks of mob emotionalism. All mob murders were committed in the south, a fact deeply regretted by the more orderly and rational element in that section. The damning record stands: Florida, 4; Mississippi, North Carolina and Texas, two each, Kentucky and Tennessee one each.

Where Judge Lynch usurps the authority of established courts of justice and nullifies the constitutional guarantee of a trial by jury, it is a reflection upon the community where the outrage is committed. Where constituted authorities fail to punish the perpetrators the reflection is upon both the government, and the community. How can these six commonwealths explain away their failure to punish a single lyncher last year?

When organized mobs can break into jails and torture and murder the untried quarry dragged from his cell and then return to their normal walks of life certain of amnesty the pious declarations of public officials and citizens for obedience to law possess the hollowness of insincerity. Of the man, who is judged a felon if he is too honorable to report the Volsteadian delinquencies of his host or neighbor, it is not expected that he assist the law in bringing to trial and punisment those who execute the judgments of Judge Lynch.

Louisville News

New York, Jan. 10.—many editors of white dailies have commented on the lynching statistice for the year 1929 sent out by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, among the clippings received being editorials from the Columbus, Ohio, Dispatch; the Atlanta Georgia; the Durham, N. C., Herald; the Philadelphia Public Ledger; the Springfield, Mass., Republican; the New Haven, Conn., Register; and the Norfolk, Va., Virginian Pilot. Excerpts from the editorials are as follows: 30

Norfolf Virginian Pilot:

"If the figure for 1929 is accepted as the twelve listed by the National Association and if that figure is compared with the yearly figures from Tuskekee ,the past year had one more lynchings than 1928,, but far less than any other year."

Columbus Dispatch: Ky.

"It is notable that attacks by Negroes upon white women, which to a certain type of mind justifices mob violence, were only three in number. There is room for suspicion that this charge has more than once been fastened upon a hapless victim in order to lend justification to acts that are utterly without justification by any measure of right or fairness."

New Haven Register repristed from Waterbury Republican

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reports that there were 12 lynchings in 1929; the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute reports 10. The difference is presumably due to a different in classification of cases on the borderline between lynching and murder. However that may be, the record for the year is virtually that of 1928, when there were 11 lynchings according to both the Association and the Institute. Ten or 12 lynchings are 10 or 12 too many, but the annual lynching record continues at the new low level towards which it made a sharp declination in 1928."

Phildelphia Evening Public Ledger:

"Twelve known lynchings occurred in this country during the last years, according to statistics compiled by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People —Futhermore, it is peported that not a single lyncher has been purnished during 1929. These crimes are a dark bolt upon the nations record, while the failure to push the perpertators reflects no credit upon the forces of law and order."

Springfield Republican:

"The number of lynchings prevented reflects both a strengthening of the forces of law and order backed by intelligent public opinion and a continuance of the lawless mob spirit which these forces have to deal with. On the whole, the record is one of progress that is still much too slow."

Tuskegee Has Records of Only Nine Lynchings

Nine lynchings in the first six months of 1930 is the number given in the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., [redacted] Principal, informed The World yesterday. Dr. Morton's letter says:

"I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find, according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, that in the first six months of 1930 there were nine lynchings. This number is five more than for the first six months of 1929; four more than for the first six months of 1928 and is the same as for the first six months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; it is four more than the number for the first six months of 1924; six less than the number for the first six months of 1923; twenty-one less than the number for the first six months of 1922 and twenty-seven less than the number (thirty-six) for the first six months of 1921.

"Of the persons lynched one was white and eight were Negroes. The offenses charged were rape, five; murder, one; bombing house, one; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, one; attempted rape, one.

"The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Florida, one; Georgia, one; Mississippi, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three."

LYNCHINGS INCREASE

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, do not agree as to the number of lynchings that have taken place since the first of the year.

The association has records of a dozen while Dr. Moton lists only nine. Twelve is equal to the total number of lynchings reported in 1929, so no matter which figure is correct the chances are that the steady decline in mob law executions will receive a considerable setback this year.

No particular significance can be attached to the increase, which is likely to be slight. It is probably no more than a variance from the downward trend which is not apt to be interrupted.

The decline in lynchings during the last decade has been so rapid and the totals for the last few years so low that there is not a great deal of hope of continued yearly reductions.

Mob law is gradually dying out. There is not a county in any state in the country in which lynchings are not rare, but out of the hundreds of counties in the Southern States in which racial prejudices are quickly aroused it is not surprising that occasional lynchings are reported.

The lynching rate, like the homicide rate, is not something which can be gloated over even when it declines. Each individual case, in a certain sense, represents a disgrace.

The record as a whole, however, does not represent serious evidence that State governments have broken down, as was charged at the negro convention in Springfield, Mass., Tuesday when the subject was brought up.

The situation on the whole is well in hand. It is much better in hand, in fact, than the control of crime in many of the large cities where murder goes unpunished and criminals unapprehended.

Except in very rare cases when mob lynches a man it gets the guilty person, and one who has committed a crime that carries with it the death penalty.

TWENTY-FIVE LYNCHINGS IN 1930

By glancing at The [redacted] which carries statistics on lynching since 1885, it can be seen that this form of lawlessness increases when times are bad and decreases when times are good. In 1892, which marked a period of depression as serious as the one we are now going through, 255 persons were lynched in this country, the largest number on record. In 1908, another bad year, there were 100 lynchings, as compared with 63 the year before and an average of 71 for three years before that. In 1921, the next very bad year, there were 64, as compared with 61 in 1920. Since then the total has dropped sharply, until in 1928 it was 11, and in 1929, 12.

This year, with the return of depression, there is an increase. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reports 25, which is more than double the number of the year before. Twenty-five lynchings are twenty-five too many: it cannot be pretended that they reflect any credit on us. Yet even this figure can give those who are waging a fight against lynching reason to believe that their efforts have not been in vain. Set against the figure of 1892, it shows that we have less than a tenth of the lynchings we had some forty years ago. Corrected for population increase, which has been 100 per cent, it shows that we have relatively only a twentieth of the lynchings we once had. In other words, even allowing for the bad showing of this year, progress has been made. There is every reason for thinking that if the opposition to lynching continues to be as resolute as it has been since the war the evil will shortly be wiped out altogether.

Substitute For Lynchings

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reports 2 ~~lynchings for 1930~~, which probably means that Tuskegee will report 20. Tuskegee never reports a lynching until it has been proved that there was a lynching; the National Association is not so careful. But even 20 means double the number of lynchings reported last year.

Doubtless any number of reasons will be advanced for this appalling increase, and doubtless most of them will overlook the simple, complete and obvious explanation. This is the vast increase in unemployment. Thousands of the singularly tough element that composes Southern lynching mobs have had nothing to do this year, and time has lain heavy on their hands. Under such circumstances, it was inevitable that they should amuse themselves by murdering a few more Negroes.

Thoughtful observers will not fail to notice another curious fact: the rapid decline of lynching paralleled almost exactly the rise of the Ku Klux Klan. And when the Klan began to decline the lynching rate bounded up again. The thrill that came from parading in a nightshirt palled on the communities, and with boredom come again the lust for blood.

Apparently the Southern mob needs excitement, and apparently, also, the excitement which pleases it most is excitement accompanied by bloodshed. The conclusion is inescapable that some gory sport—bullfighting, for instance—would be an effective outlet for this recurring blood lust.

LYNCHING

LYN[illegible]NGS increased 100 per cent in num[illegible]er in 1930 over the preceding year. In 1930 there were twenty-five lynchings. This number is reported by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which has kept records for several years.

This increase is depressing but not discouraging. Although the number jumped 100 per cent in a year, it is far lower than it was years ago, when sometimes 250 or more lynchings were reported each year in this civilized country. The outcry against lynchings evidently then has had considerable effect but it is a disgrace that even one lynching should occur in America

A few lynchings have been prevented by action of the authorities but only in a few cases of actual lynchings have the mob leaders been made to answer for taking the law into their own hands. There has been too much of a tendency to condone these lynchings in some sections of the country and to accept them as matters of course when certain crimes are committed. That attitude is wrong. Lynching cannot be condoned on any ground. And any state that sits back after a lynching and makes no effort to bring the perpetrators to justice has failed in a vital duty.

WILMINGTON, DEL.

DEC 30 [illegible]

LYNCHINGS DOUBLED THIS YEAR.

The fact that the number of lynchings for 1930 mor than doubled those recorded for the previous year i discouraging and depressing. The cases in which me were put to death by mobs in the United States ha dropped to 12 in 1929—against 25 this year—had led t the hope that the barbarous practice was graduall being overcome and soon would be a matter of memor only.

Nevertheless, the extent of mob executions is decreasing, as is shown by the figures of the last quarte of a century or so. In 1892 the number of lynchings reached the high water mark of 225, and in 1909, another "demonstrative" year for mass violence, there were 107. In 1919, when the human thought was still inflamed by the World War, there were 83 victims. From this total the lynchings dropped to 30 in 1926, and continued to decline, but during the present year they again turned upward. Georgia continues in the lead of states.

It is interesting to know that but one Northern State—Indiana—blotted its good name for fairness to al races. A Hoosier mob put two to death, anticipating cour procedure which would doubtless have imposed capita punishment.

There can be no doubt that the laxity of sheriffs an other officials is responsible in some cases, for the continuance of this disgraceful form of mass violence. State officers, especially in sections where such violence is resorted to, are more often in sympathy with the lynchers seeking the life of an offender, or one suspected of crime, than they are zealous in upholding or enforcing the law.

One may rightly conclude that lynching is a demoniacal form of madness which seems to seize the masses especially in states where the Negro element predominates in population, and where the race is still handicapped by prejudice.

Lynchings are almost always ascribable to ignorance. The brutality and inhumanity, perhaps, may eventually give way to education and enlightenment. But the reform is slow.

Most of the victims are of the colored race, and while the evidence against them would in almost all cases bring adequate penalties from the courts, the horrors of a lynching seem to be resorted to with barbarous fury, and while there are laws against mob vengeance we do not recall any of them being seriously applied by any of the states—not even Indiana.

R[illegible]AL OF THE LYNCHING EV

In the year ust ended the number of lync in the United States—twenty-five—was more th twice that which disgraced the previous year and also more than twice that in 1928. This is a highly discreditable blot on the record of the twelve months just ended.

It would be worse than idle to ignore the humiliating phenomenon. That sort of recession is to be deplored by all good Americans. By way of explanation it is pointed out that periods of business depression and widespread unemployment are also periods of increased displays of violence by mobs.

No sociologist has explained the exact nature and the causes of this correlation. Perhaps jobless men are especially likely to join in lawless actions because of bitterness and resentment aroused by experiences of their own tending to break down their reliance upon the approved processes of the established social order. Discontent with economic conditions undoubtedly at times weakens the will to resist assaults upon the foundations of civilized society. The year having been economically subnormal, moral lapses on the part of susceptible and emotional groups may have been inevitable. This is a reasonable assumption if history is a guide to sound generalizations.

Every effort should be made to re-enforce the antilynching tendency which mainly has characterized the last two decades. Lynchings are preventable in practically all cases if public officials do their duty and if the general public sustains them in so doing.

Among the many events of 1930 that will not be cherished in after life is the year's unenviable record for lynching. There were twice as many of these crimes of violence perpetrated in the year that is just closing as there were in 1929. Whereas, in the former year there were only twelve recorded and authenticated lynchings there were during this year twenty-five. Of the victims one was a white man and the other were negroes.

One of the best answers to the contention of the defenders of lynching that this crime is necessary to protect women, is revealed in the causes given for mob outbreaks. The offenses which resulted in lynchings include not stopping an automobile when ordered, being active in politics, testifying against a white man in court, quarreling with a white man murder, criminal assault, attempted assault and robbery.

Georgia heads the list of lynching states for the year. It has a terrible record. There were no less than seven mob victims in that state. Alabama and Texas had four each, Mississippi three, Indiana and South Carolina two each and Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma had one each. It should be and doubtless is a source of extreme gratification to all Tennesseans that the record of our state has not been marred during the year by a single mob outbreak.

It is not encouraging to contemplate the mob statistics for the past year. We had hoped that there would be a steady and continuous decline in crimes of this character until finally lynchings would live only as a disagreeable memory. Failure of the states to punish or even prosecute lynchers has resulted in a feeling of security for those who take the law into their own hands.

In periods of depression there is naturally more crime than there is in times when conditions are more promising. Mob hysteria flames up far more quickly than is the case in normal periods. The economic situation during the year no doubt had something to do with the discouraging total of lynchings.

But whatever the cause or however deplorable the situation may be we must take courage and continue our efforts to eradicate this evil that is like a cankering sore upon the body politic. We cannot tolerate nor plead any extenuation of any offense that strikes at the very vitals of the government itself. We must press on with renewed determination to create such a sentiment as will make assaults upon the majesty of the states unthinkable.

Lynching

(Nashville Banner)

Lynchings in he United States in 1930 numbered twenty-five, or an increase of more than 100 per cent over the year before, and the fact has been greeted with the sorrow and indignation it deserves in every section of the country. As is usually the case, most of these outrageous crimes against society were committed in the Southern States, but there were several of them outside the section below the Mason-Dixie Line. By comparison with thirty years ago when there were as many as 200 lynchings in a single year, we may say that progress has been made toward the elimination of perhaps the most horrible anomaly in our civilization. On the other hand, we must not become complacent as long as there is either a single lynching in a year or any effort at such fearful barbarity. In other words, we want to eradicate the savagery that prompts lynching as well as prevent it from expressing itself.

One thing particularly noticeable and gratifying this year is the fact that newspapers and individuals as a general rule have not seen fit to abuse or belabor the South as barbarous and uncivilized in toto because certain communities forget themselves and allow the worst human instincts play. The truth is that the vast mass of public opinion in the South is as outraged when a lynching occurs as could by any means be possible elsewhere. It is likewise true that nothing is gained and much is lost when there is a disposition to indulge in really unwarranted criticism of any one State or section.

Just when the country is encouraged to believe that lynching is dying out in United States a year's record comes along completely to discourage any such belief. The year 1930 was such a year. It produced, according to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 25 of such crimes, or more than double the total of the preceding year. It is a discouraging picture.

The situation is much better in modern years than it was 30 or 40 years ago, but 25 lynchings are exactly 25 too many. There is no cause or reason for the infliction of capital punishment on any person in defiance of the United States constitution and all human right. However gross the offense may be, the law stands ready to punish it and will do so in due time if given the opportunity.

Times were different in the old days when through inadequate transportation and other causes, America was mostly rural. The people were not grounded in the law as thoroughly as they are now and while they had no "gangs," in the modern sense of the word, they were readily formed into groups to punish acts that caused general indignation and fury. The lynching record was accordingly high.

The worst year in American history in this respect was 1892, when the United States was beginning markedly to change from rural to urban. In that year 255 persons were lynched. In 1908 another bad showing was made with the lynching of an even 100 persons. In 1921 the total was 64, an increase of four over 1920. Since then the total has dropped sharply until in 1928 it was 11 and 1929 only 12.

We now have, in our worst recent year, less than one-tenth of the lynchings of our worst year some 40 years ago. But even such a gain is not in accordance with our improvement in all other lines.

MOB SAVAGERY IN 1930

According to figures supplied by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, there were 25 lynchings in the country during the year 1930—which to serious-minded citizens is a painful reminder that the forces of intolerance, ignorance and racial prejudice are still active in our civilization.

For a number of years past there has been a steady decline in this form of lawlessness but the recent upward turn of these manifestations of mob savagery is discouraging evidence that the sense of social responsibility is still lamentably weak in certain elements of our population. Whereas in 1921 64 lynchings were recorded, the annual total had dropped to 12 in 1929.

Sociological authorities are convinced that the best hope of improvement in the situation is predicated upon a systematic campaign of education among both white and colored populations and the cultivation of co-operation between the more enlightened leaders of both races. Movements in this direction set on foot by the press and public leaders of the southern states have exerted a very effective influence and are to be credited with a large share of the results in cutting down the number of lynchings in recent years. With fearless co-operation on the part of the prosecuting and law-enforcement authorities, doubtless the record for 1930 would have been much more creditable.

However, as the New York World reminds us, even the record of this year can give those who are waging a fight against lynching reason to believe that their efforts have not been in vain. "Set against the figure of 1892 (when 252 persons were lynched), it shows that we have less than one-tenth of the lynchings we had some forty years ago. Corrected for population increase, which has been 100 per cent, it shows that we have relatively only a twentieth of the lynchings we once had. In other words, even allowing for the bad showing of this year, progress has been made. There is every reason for thinking that if the opposition continues to be as resolute as it has been since the war the evil will shortly be wiped out altogether."

BLOTS ON THE RECORD

This is January 2 and so far we have heard of no lynchings. It would be a stimulating illustration of respect for the law of the land and biblical command if the people of the United States, and particularly the southern section thereof, could keep every day as spotless in this respect.

During 1930 there were 25 lynchings in our country. During the previous year there were 12, the year before 11.

Figures on lynching statistics and financial depressions indicate quite clearly that low economic levels are accompanied by distressing increases in fatalities resulting from mob violence.

The largest number of lynchings ever recorded in the United States occurred during 1892, a year of depression. From this figure, lynchings declined until a low of 63 was reached in 1907. The next year, 1908, was one of depression and lynchings totaled 100. Again they took a drop. In 1920 they declined to 61. In 1921 the nation went through another economic crisis and lynching tragedies numbered 64. Since then steady progress in the elimination of this evil has been made until 1930.

It is distressing to note the effect of economic troubles in an increase in this form of human violence, yet a study of the whole effort is cause for good cheer. Except for these four set-backs, the past four decades have marked a wholesome arousal of public opinion in people in all sections of the country, all races and both sexes, crystallizing in a determined purpose to blot out crimes of this inhuman character.

It is the hope of all law-respecting, Christian men and women that the year 1931 will serve to make yet more resolute their program for the prevention of lynchings and mob violence and for the strengthening of respect for the dignity and majesty of the law in the minds of all the people of these United States.

The Lynching Record

There were 25 lynchings during 1930. That is a record of 25 lynchings too many and one which does not reflect any credit on the nation. However, those who are directing the fight against lynchings need not feel that their efforts have been in vain.

In 1892, which from an economic standpoint was as bad a year as 1930, there were 225 lynchings. There is a peculiar relationship between economic depressions and the extent to which men permit their passions to become unbridled. In 1908, another bad year, there were 100 lynchings as compared with 63 the year before and an average of 71 per year for the three years before that. In 1921, the next bad economic year, there were 64 lynchings compared with 61 in 1921. The drop since then has been very sharp. In 1928, there were only 11 lynchings, and in 1929 but 12. The lynching record, considered with the increase in population, which is 100 per cent since 1892, shows a twentieth of the lynchings we had then. Even allowing for this year's increase, great progress has been made.

Instead of considering the record for 1930, opponents of lynching should consider the entire record since 1892. If this is done, it is obvious that the time will come when a lynching in this country will be a very rare exception. Every intelligent person will welcome that time.

DISGRACEFUL was the American lynching record for 1930 which marked a decided backward step. There were 25 lynchings as compared with 12 in 1929. Georgia led with seven, and need not boast of this leadership. Florida was represented with one, according to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. All were Southern states, except Indiana, where two were reported. American civilization is not yet out of the jungle when it permits mob slaughter.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., Sept. 28.—(AP)—H. E. Ross, 45, proprietor of a dry cleaning establishment, was shot to death and his wife wounded shortly before last midnight when a negro intruder, discovered in the Ross home, opened fire on the couple with a revolver.

Mrs. Ross told police she and her husband were awakened by a noise in another part of their home from where they were sleeping and that her husband went to investigate.

Ross encountered the negro in the bathroom and was struck down by two bullets, one entering the chest and the other his head. Mrs. Ross said she started to go for aid and that the negro then fired at her, the bullet taking effect in her leg.

A negro giving the name of G. H. Henderson was arrested late today in connection with the case but was not positively identified by Mrs. Ross. He was taken into custody as he left a train at Decatur.

Fear of violence prompted authorities here today to transfer the prisoner from the city jail to the Madison County jail.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Sept. 29.—(AP)—National guardsmen attacked a crowd around the Madison county jail here tonight with tear gas bombs and then advanced against the crowd with drawn bayonets when the group attempted to advance on the jail where G. E. Henderson, negro, is being held in connection with the slaying Saturday night of H. E. Ross, Huntsville businessman.

The tear gas bombs were thrown in front of the crowd as the group continued to edge closer to the roped off area where the guardsmen were on duty.

An unfavorable wind drove the tear gas back into the faces of the guardsmen and as the crowd continued to advance the guardsmen formed a line and advanced with drawn bayonets.

As the guardsmen pushed the crowd back members of the crowd retaliated with rocks and bricks.

Several guardsmen were struck by the rocks and bricks, but none was seriously injured.

One of the guardsmen struck down a member of the crowd with the butt of his gun when he said he saw the man hurling rocks. The injured man was taken to a local hospital, where he was identified as Tommy Baker, lightweight boxer. Hospital attaches said Baker was not seriously injured.

Guardsmen drove the crowd nearly a block toward the business section of Huntsville and then returned to their posts inside the roped off area around the jail. The crowd immediately began reforming just outside the line, but no further demonstration occurred.

The troops were called out to preserve order after a crowd of several hundred had gathered about the jail and some members had shouted that they would "get him."

The first troops mobilized were reinforced this afternoon by Company B, 127th engineers, of Athens, who were brought here at the request of Major Raymond Jones, commanding the 127th battalion of engineers, who was placed in command by Governor Bibb Graves.

The guardsmen were called to duty at the request of Probate Judge Paul Speake and Solicitor James Pride, who feared the crowd gathered about the jail might get out of hand of Madison county officers, who were doing everything possible to protect their prisoner.

Henderson was arrested on a train at Decatur yesterday and returned here as a suspect. Officers so far have not positively identified him as the slayer of Ross and who wounded Mrs. Ross in the leg with a bullet fired as he fled through the kitchen into the darkness. Mrs. Ross has not been able to identify Henderson, although the hat dropped by the intruder fits him and his shoes fit the tracks outside the Ross home.

At Montgomery, Governor Graves directed that additional troops be held in readiness to be sent here if conditions warranted increased military forces.

HUNTSVILLE, ALA., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Order was restored in this harrassed city tonight as two companies of Alabama National Guardsmen were demobilized and the two negroes they were called to active duty to protect were removed from the Madison County Jail to Birmingham for safekeeping.

The negroes, G. E. Henderson and Rufus McCoy, were the object of a mob which gathered around the jail and was dispersed only after the guardsmen loosed tear gas bombs and advanced on the milling crowd with fixed bayonets.

Henderson is held as a suspect in the slaying of H. E. Ross, prominent Huntsville business man, Saturday night and McCoy is held for the slaying of J. C. Mathes, Phoenix, Ariz., traveling salesman. McCoy is said by police to have confessed to killing Mathes and throwing his body into the Tennessee River near here.

The negroes were carried to Birmingham after officers spirited them from the jail and announced that they were en route to the State penitentiary at Montgomery. It was understood they would be carried to Montgomery later this week.

The troops were called out at the direction of Gov. Bibb Graves at Montgomery following a telephone conversation with Madison County authorities, early Sunday. The two National Guard companies, A and B, 127th Engineers, were under command of Maj. Raymond Jones who was placed in charge of the situation by the governor.

GOVERNOR PREVENTS LYNCHING

Informer
10-18-30

Very much unlike our own retiring governor, Dan Moody, the governor of Alabama last week dispatched troops to the scene of a threatened lynching and gave them orders to protect the prisoner; and the troops obey him. This action is also in decided contrast to the attitude of County Commissioner A. C. Neal of Georgia who, after the lynching of a wounded and defenseless Negro accused of a crime, said that "I believe I am safe in saying that the action of the men who took the Negro from the jail is not only condoned, but has met with practically unanimous approval."

Governor Bibb of Alabama has been praised and is still receiving the compliments of a peace loving and grateful public which is pleased to have the good name of that state protected from the heartless work of demented hoodlums. Georgia and Texas, at least as far as the better thinking members of both races are concerned are still smarting over the shame and humiliation which have come because the heads of the state did not have the courage to protect the law and to enforce the demands of simple civilization. Georgia continues to murder and to burn men and women of black skins; and the citizens, even the heads of the state, applaud the action. In Texas, not only was a man burned to death and the property of many whose sole offense was the possession of a black skin, destroyed, but even the courthouse was burned while supposed defenders of the law were at work. And there can be no doubt that Texas, because of the publicity which came from the incident, has suffered.

Houston Texas

All persons laying claim to any degree of civilization realize that a state can be no better than those whom it elects to lead it. Any political system which can boast of no more than the selection of men to head the state who think so little of their oaths and obligations as is evidenced by Georgia and Texas, is fundamentally unsound. Georgia and Texas boast of the Democratic primary system. They claim that politics and the state would be ruined were Negroes to participate, but The Informer claims that the depths have already been reached. Even were all of the things which are claimed for Negroes true, their participation could result in nothing worse. To be reduced to the point of praising a man for doing his duty is rather bad. It means that it is exceptional for that to happen; and yet the attitude of the south toward the lynching of human beings has resulted in just that. There is little in such accomplishment of which to boast.

Nelson said that he and his brother had an argument with Price over some harness, and that they became excited over it. He said that Price struck him on the head with a sodawater bottle and hurt him. The prisoner, according to the signed confession, said that he left the Price place, went to his home, secured a shotgun and went down to a creek and waited for Price to come by.

"When Price came to the creek he had a shotgun and I asked him why he had hit me with the bottle. I fired a load of No. 5 shot at him. The shot missed and then I fired the second charge and Mr. Price fell to the ground. I left the scene, made my way over to Selma and came down the Southern Railway," was the further statement of Nelson.

Los Angeles Mob Bent On Lynching

Los Angeles, Dec. 29.—(AP)—Threats of mob violence early today resulted in a heavily armed squad of police being rushed to the outlying Lincoln Heights jail to guard and remove to other jails two men alleged to have confessed having assaulted two young women last Wednesday night.

The police action resulted when officers at the Lincoln Heights station reported many telephone calls had been received warning them a mob was forming to get the prisoners, who gave their names as Salome Morales, 26 and Jesus Orozco, 24.

The men, detectives said, confessed having assaulted two sisters Christmas Eve, after robbing the girls' escort.

Capture of the men yesterday ended a man-hunt that began the night of the attack. A series of similar assaults on Los Angeles women has occurred in recent weeks.

NEGROES SPIRITED AWAY

Violence Feared Against Trio Accused Of Attacking White Woman

PUBELO, Col., Sept. 1—(AP)—Fear of mob violence caused officers to remove three negroes from jail here Sunday night who had been arrested earlier in the day for an alleged assault on a white womah.

The woman was attacked by three men .after they had bound and gagged her and her husband in a holdup on the Pueblo-Canon City Highway. The three men left in the couples car.

The three suspects, Sam Johnson, Pueblo, 22; Ellis Byrd, 19, and Jim Thomas, 24, both of Hasway, Tex., were taken to another city.

ACCUSED NEGRO PROTECTED FROM MOB BY JAX PEN

Sheriff Has Had One Till With Lynchers and He Takes No Chances

While a Gadsden county mob was in search of a negro wanted for an alleged attack upon a white girl, the negro was safely confined in the county jail here, it was learned today.

The negro, John Williams, was rushed here late Sunday night by Sheriff B. S. Gregory, of Gadsden county. The removal order was signed Sunday by Judge E. C. Love of Quincy.

ASSAULTS WOMAN

Williams was arrested in connection with the recent mistreatment of a young married woman at Happy Hill, near the Gadsden-Liberty county line in west Florida. He was taken to jail at Quincy, but was removed from there when mob violence was threatened.

It was the second attack by a negro upon a white woman to take place in Gadsden county in a month. The first negro was taken away from Sheriff Gregory and lynched.

MOB OVERTAKES HIM

Sheriff Gregory was on his way to Jacksonville with the negro when the mob overtook him near Oak Hill.

Reports current yesterday that the Williams negro had been lynched by a mob in Liberty county were not true. A mob of enraged Gadsden county citizens searched Liberty county, but Williams already was in jail here.

Florida Sheriff Shot To Death

BLOUNTSTOWN, FLA., April 21.—(AP)—Charged with shooting to death Sheriff C. D. Clark on the street here this morning, J. T. Blackwell, former operator of a fishing camp stand, was removed to a jail in an unnamed county tonight.

Feeling over the shooting was given by officers as the reason for Blackwell's removal which came after a coroner's jury had held him for first degree murder. The town was quiet. The Grand Jury will assemble early next week to investigate the case. 4-22-30

Deputy Sheriff McClelland said that Blackwell shot the sheriff apparently without giving any warning. He said Blackwell drew a pistol as the sheriff walked by in the street and commenced firing. About ~~five or six~~ shots were fired, he said, [illegible]

McClelland said that ill feeling had existed between the men for some time. Recently, he said, Blackwell had been charged with wife desertion. County Judge C. R. Brown said Blackwell had been charged with violating the liquor law some time ago but that the charges had been nolle prossed. No one could say what was the cause of the difficulty today.

Three Negroes Held in Connection With Jenkins Slaying Brought To Tower Without Disorder

9-16-30

Prompt action on the part of machine gun and rifle detachments of three companies of the 122d infantry, Georgia National Guard, Monday morning ended what for a time threatened to become a serious mob menace to three negroes held in the Bartow county jail at Cartersville.

On orders from Governor L. G. Hardman, Adjutant-General Homer C. Parker early Monday morning ordered the detachment to the north Georgia town where, under command of Lieutenant Colonel Charles E. Thompson, Jr., a military cordon was thrown about the new jail at 4 o'clock and at 10:45 the trio, one wounded, were placed aboard an Atlanta train, arriving here shortly after noon.

Atlanta, Ga.

The prisoners who were brought to Fulton tower for safe-keeping were John Willie Clark, said by Sheriff G. M. Gaddis to have confessed to the slaying ten days ago of Chief of Police Joe Ben Jenkins; the suspect's brother, Sidney Clark, held on suspicion of having aided the alleged slayer to hide and escape, and a negro named Young, who authorities believe drove John Willie Clark away after the shooting.

Detachments Ordered Out.

Three company detachments were ordered out at 4 a. m.—a rifle detachment of Company I at Marietta; and machine guns of Companies D and H of Atlanta. Company I was in command of Captain G. H. Smith and Lieutenants William M. Ward and L. A. Hibble, while Captain Marion Williamson and Lieutenant H. B. Mayes commanded Company D, and Lieutenant L. P. Webb Company H.

The trip to Cartersville from Atlanta was made in two large coaches, the time required being only little more than an hour. The Marietta detachment reached the jail 29 minutes after being called upon.

One of the outstanding features of the maneuver was the orderly manner in which citizens of Cartersville acquiesced to military protection of the prisoners. Not a vestige of disorder was evidenced, and the smoothness with which Colonel Thompson detailed units to patrol and guard duty worked largely to bring about this situation.

Weapons Out of Sight.

En route to the scene, Colonel Thompson, in a talk to members of his immediate command, gave explicit orders that no weapon was to be drawn unless he gave definite orders. He told the guardsmen that their object was to reinforce the sheriff's office and protect the jail against any eventuality. All men were adjured to be courteous and to keep crowds from gathering in the vicinity of the jail.

Shortly after 9 o'clock orders from General Parker reached Colonel Thompson informing him that Governor Hardman had instructed him to bring the three prisoners to Atlanta on the first train. Preparations were made looking to the safety of the negroes and a way was cleared between the jail and the station. The public generally viewed the scene from the public square and exhibited no resentment or disorder; city officials co-operating to the fullest extent with military authorities.

At 10:30 orders were given to dismantle the six machine guns and ammunition base. At 10:40 all equipment was being placed on the train for Atlanta, and five minutes later Cartersville was devoid of all signs of military occupation.

Parker Lauds Cartersville.

The adjutant general, after his return, issued the following statement; commending the people of Cartersville, the state peace officers and the national guard units on duty there:

I have just returned to Atlanta from Cartersville where a detachment of the Georgia national guard, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Charles E. Thompson, Jr., 122d infantry, Georgia national guard, is now on duty at the Bartow county jail. Peace and tranquillity have been restored to the people of that community and the majesty of the law is once again enthroned.

In justice to the people of the city of Cartersville and the county of Batrow, I wish to state that people who ought to know have advised me that the mob which encompassed the jail at Cartersville most of the day Sunday and practically all night last night were not local citizens, but were from other communities.

I found the sheriff of Bartow county, Honorable G. W. Gaddis, to be a fearless and courageous official. To properly perform his duty seemed to be his sole purpose. I cannot commend his attitude and that of his deputies, the mayor of Cartersville, his police force, the peace officers from the adjoining counties who spent the entire night with Sheriff Gaddis in the jail, and the good citizens of Bartow county and the city of Cartersville, too highly for the splendid manner in which the ugly situation that had existed at Cartersville for the last 24 hours was handled.

The Georgia national guard is to be commended for the excellent manner in which it performed its duty in the premises and its promptness in answering the call. In exactly 30 minutes after the troops were ordered to proceed to Cartersville, Company I, of the 122d infantry, with station at Marietta, was surrounding the jail at Cartersville. Within less than an hour and a half a detachment from the 122d infantry, with station at Atlanta, was in Cartersville with machine guns.

No further trouble is anticipated by the local peace officers or by the military authorities.

MAYOR DENIES HE ASKED TROOPS.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., Sept. 15.—(Special)—Mayor J. J. Hill and Sheriff George M. Gaddis said here today that reports that they had asked for troops to be sent to Cartersville late Sunday night to protect John Willie Clark, alleged slayer of Police Chief Joe Ben Jenkins, were erroneous.

Sheriff Gaddis stated that Adjutant General Homer C. Parker, accompanied by his personal aide, Colonel Arthur McCollum, had come here earlier in the night to investigate the situation. When Adjutant General Parker left here, Sheriff Gaddis said, Colonel McCollum remained in charge, with the understanding that troops were to be called if necessary. About 4 o'clock Monday morning, Colonel McCollum decided troops were needed, and, under the authorization of General Parker, ordered them to report here. This they did, and the prisoner was taken to Atlanta without any disturbance.

Negro Caught After Chase Of Five Hours

9-15-30

CHATSWORTH, GA., Sept. 14.—(AP)—Chased by bloodhounds for five hours, Willie Clark, 38, negro, wanted for killing Chief of Police Joe Ben Jenkins, of Cartersville, Ga., Sept. 5, was captured this morning eight miles South of here, by Sheriff B. B. Butler.

Sheriff Butler said the negro admitted the crime and was turned over to Sheriff Gaddis, at Cartersville.

Sheriff Butler had been on the lookout for Clark, having received word that he was en route from Chattanooga in a car. The negro's car, which had run off a fill and had been abandoned, was first found by the officers who then took up the trail of the fugitive.

THE CARTERSVILLE CASE.

A few days ago a negro desperado committed the shocking crime of shooting down and killing the chief of police of the neighboring city of Cartersville. He was a beloved and brave officer of long service to his community.

~~Constitution~~

The murderer escaped, was chased for several days and captured on Sunday morning, in a wounded condition, and brought to the Cartersville county jail. Sunday night a mob menaced the jail, bent upon lynching the prisoner. In the absence of an immediate posse comitatis sufficient to control the situation the sheriff called upon the governor for military support. The governor ordered the same and the adjutant general mobilized three companies at Cartersville, the mob dispersed before them, the prisoner on a litter was brought to Atlanta, and law and order prevails in the threatened community.

9-16-30

Atlanta, Ga.

The governor of the state is to be praised for the promptness and fullness with which he met the critical emergency. He did his duty without hesitation that the state might not be made the victim of a great public wrong. The sheriff of Bartow county is to be commended for his quick sense of the situation and his courage in calling for the power of the state to back his efforts to defend the laws. Lieutenant Colonel Charles E. Thompson, of the 122d regiment, in charge of the military units, acted with firmness, tact and decision, supporting the civil authority successfully.

The greater praise, however, must go to the good citizens of Cartersville and Bartow county, who abated their rage over a most aggravating crime and yielded submission and support to the law already acting and adequate to insure justice. Thereby they saved themselves and the state from a stigma—for the law had its prisoner in hand and the law only should be relied upon to determine his guilt and punish it in due and proper form.

GIA CITY QUIET AS SLAYER REMOVED

Killer of Cartersville Officer Taken to Atlanta.

Troops Withdrawn From Former Town After Signs of Violence Disappear.

ATLANTA, Sept. 15 (AP).—John Willie Clark, escaped Negro convict, charged with slaying Police Chief Joe Ben Jenkins, of Cartersville, was removed from that city today to the Fulton county jail here by national guardsmen.

Guardsmen sent to Cartersville to protect the Negro were withdrawn on order of Adjt.-Gen. Homer C. Parker. They were dispatched there yesterday at the request of Cartersville authorities, but encountered no trouble in removing the Negro and two companions said to have been with him when he killed Jenkins more than a week ago.

All was orderly at Cartersville today and there were no indications of an attempt to take the Negro from authorities.

Clark was captured yesterday near Chatsworth. Officers wounded him twice during the chase and took him to jail at Cartersville.

A crowd collected around the jail, but officers spoke to the men and they became quiet.

Fearing the crowd might get beyond control, officers asked Gov. Hardman to send troops there. Adjt.-Gen. Parker dispatched fifty men from Atlanta and twenty-four from Marietta, with two machine guns, to Cartersville. He went there himself and learned that quiet had been restored, and carried out the governor's orders that the men be withdrawn.

New Bloodstained Evidence Discovered on Farm Where Mother and Babe Were Murdered.

WAYCROSS, Ga., Oct. 20.—While additional blood-stained evidence was uncovered today in the double tragedy in which Mrs. Jim Parker and her 18-month-old baby were murdered eight miles north of Waycross, and their bodies buried in a pea field in the Waresboro community, Jim Parker and Cora Hazen, charged with the murder, were secreted in jails in separate towns as a step against mob violence. Ware county officers declined to reveal where the man and woman were taken.

Parker was removed from the Ware jail here by order of Solicitor General Allen B. Spence, of the Waycross circuit, and the Hazen woman, who was serving a year's sentence at the state farm in Milledgeville at the time the murder charge was made against her Sunday, was ordered brought to south Georgia, but not to Waycross.

While no demonstration was raised here, feeling is known to be bitter, and Solicitor Spence said he decided to take every precaution.

Following the discovery of the bodies of Mrs. Parker and child late Saturday, and identification by Raybon Johns, of Hickox, father of Mrs. Parker, a coroner's jury decided that the woman and her child died at the hands of Jim Parker and Cora Hazen.

Blood stains were found today on the floor of a small bedroom at the rear of the Parker farmhouse, and additional stains were discovered on a bed mattress. Clothes of Mrs. Parker and the child also were unearthed. They were buried about 20 steps from the spot where the two bodies were found Saturday.

W. J. and H. J. Mullis, prominent citizens of Waresboro community and leaders of the search for the missing woman, today made an appeal to the public. "After having worked diligently for some months on the Parker tragedy in our community," their statement said, "picking up evidence thread by thread, and having brought to light this brutal tragedy and having turned the case with all evidence over to legal authorities, which authority we are assured will mete out speedy justice, we appeal to citizens to quietly let the law take its course, as we feel that any violence would only add to the demoralization of our people and a blot upon the fair name of our county and all south Georgia."

BREAK FRUSTRATED—SAWS FOUND IN PARKER'S CELL

WAYCROSS, Ga., Oct. 20.—A jail-break plot in the Ware county jail was revealed by Sheriff Eloyd C. Warren here today, the plan having been frustrated when a wholesale number of hack saw blades were found in a cell occupied by J. R. Rigdon and Jim Parker.

Jim Parker was removed from jail today, being held on a murder charge in connection with the double murder of his wife, Mrs. Ethel Parker, and their 18-month-old daughter, the bodies having been found Saturday buried eight miles north of here on the Parker farm. He was carried to a near-by county, where he is being held for safe-keeping.

Rigdon is in jail on several charges, having already been convicted for the possession of liquor

The blades were smuggled into the jail by two parties, both of whom are under arrest, Sheriff Warren revealed. Twelve of the blades are alleged to have been carried into the cell by Mrs. J. R. Rigdon, who was admitted by the jailor when she said she wanted to see her husband.

The woman denies she had anything to do with the affair, but Sheriff Warren stated that he has evidence where she bought the blades and that she carried them into the jail wrapped up in a sweater.

The other 12 saws were carried in by a young man named King, son of a prisoner, Tom King, who is being held on a charge of cattle stealing. The youngster admits the act, saying that he was directed to buy the blades and bring them to his father.

The discovery of the saw blades was made last Friday night, but the sheriff did not reveal it until today. After Parker was removed from Waycross today the facts were made public by Sheriff Warren.

BLAKELY, Ga., Dec. 22.—(AP)—Death in the electric chair, January 16, was the sentence pronounced here Monday on Edgar Jenkins, negro, for attacks on two white farm girls, 9 and 11 years old.

The negro was convicted by a jury in superior court after deliberating but four minutes. The trial lasted two hours.

The verdict of guilty without recommendation for mercy automatically carried the death penalty and sentence was pronounced by Judge M. J. Yeomans immediately after the jury foreman reported.

Jenkins was tried on an indictment containing two counts, in which separate attacks were charged. He was convicted on both counts without recommendation.

Judge Yeomans, after the trial, said that it was the first time in his recollection as a judge that a Georgia jury had convicted a defendant on two charges at the same time and sentenced him to die in both instances.

Jenkins was escorted from the jail by 25 armed deputies, who had been sworn in for special service to maintain order during the trial. He was placed in an automobile with guards and another machine followed with more armed deputies and taken to a jail in another locality.

There was no disorder here during or after the trial.

NEGRO IS RUSHED TO FULTON TOWER

Suspect in Attempted Criminal Assault in LaGrange Is Brought to Atlanta by Sheriff.

Constitution

4-10-30

Atlanta Ga.

Mob violence, anticipated at LaGrange Wednesday night, threatening a call of national guardsmen from Atlanta, was averted late in the afternoon when Sheriff H. N. Brady and an armed escort secretly rushed Leonard Philpot, 49-year-old negro, charged with attempted criminal assault against two white women, to Fulton tower.

Civil authorities of LaGrange and Troup county Wednesday morning called Governor L. G. Hardman and asked national guard protection. High excitement was reported following arrest of the negro and seven others Sunday and Monday.

Officials Go To LaGrange.

Adjutant General Homer C. Barker and Colonel Arthur McCullum, of the state staff, left immediately for LaGrange for a personal investigation of conditions before taking action. They found the town quiet but serious trouble anticipated by authorities if the negro, charged with the attempt, was kept in LaGrange over night.

Arrangements were made for his transfer to Atlanta for safekeeping. Three cars carrying an armed escort of a dozen men took the negro from the jail and started him toward Atlanta.

At Newnan they were met by another car containing deputy sheriffs of Fulton county, who accompanied them to Fulton tower.

Pending developments companies E, F and H of the 122nd infantry, the latter a machine gun company, were assembled at their armory and kept in readiness to answer a hurry call. They were under the command of Major Thomas L. Alexander, commanding officer of the second battalion.

The negro, Leonard Philpot, was carried to Atlanta in an automobile by Sheriff H. N. Brady, a county policeman and two city police officers. They used three cars and drove at top speed from LaGrange to Atlanta.

Threats of Lynching.

The negro was taken to Atlanta following threats of lynching which began when eight negroes were jailed here following four attempted assaults within an hour last Saturday. The first was one in which a negro forced his way into the home of his intended victim and pursued her into the back yard. Attracted by her screams, neighbors appeared and the negro fled.

While police were at the home investigating the attack a call came from the home of a physician, where a similar incident had occurred. A negro forced his way into the home through a side door. The wife of the owner of the home ran to the home of a neighbor who fired at the negro. Thirty minutes later it was reported to the police that a negro had attempted to attack the wife of a mill operative.

Eight Negroes Jailed.

Eight negroes were arrested Sunday and Monday, but on Tuesday five were released. A group of men gathered at the jail Tuesday night, but the mayor dissuaded the leaders from violence, as the assailant had not been identified.

Wednesday afternoon one of the women went to the jail and the rumor spread that she had identified one of the three negroes as her attempted assailant. More talk of mob action started and the negro presumed to have been identified was taken to Atlanta.

NEGRO ADMITS MURDER AND ASSAULT PLOT

Constitution

4/28/30

Atlanta Ga.

SYLVANIA, Ga., April 27.—(AP)—Sheriff J. J. Griffin, of Screven county, announced today that Leroy Scott, 17, negro, has confessed he struck a Screven county woman over the head with an ax and then attempted to attack her daughter last Monday. Sheriff Griffin said the negro had been under arrest since Wednesday.

The confession, which goes into minor details of the murder and assault plot, which had been brewing in the negro's mind for weeks, was made in the presence of Sheriff Griffin, Sheriff J. L. Herrington, of Burke county; W. G. Neville, solicitor of the Ogeechee circuit, and H. A. Herrington, Screven county policeman.

The negro was arrested last Wednesday and placed in the Screven county jail. He was suspected from the start, officers stated, but they wanted to check up on his movements during the day of the crime to ascertain if it was possible for him to have been away from his work long enough to commit the crime.

In his confession the negro told of his every movement on a farm four miles south of this city on the day of the crime. He said he went to the field with a white farmer by whom he was employed and his brother, Nealy Scott, entering the field about 1:30 p. m.

Soon after that he said he left the field, climbed a fence, removed his shoes and then ran to a cow lot, from which he crossed the road to a woodpile, where he procured an ax. Then he went to the farmer's residence, stole softly into the room where the farmer's wife was seated and, approaching her from behind, struck her a blow over the head with the ax. He said that he meant to kill her.

Crossing the hall he found the farmer's daughter. There was a struggle. The girl, he said, begged for him to leave her alone and she would give him a sum of money that her father had planted outside the house.

The farmer's wife revived. Grasping a shotgun she appeared on the scene and the negro fled without completing his purpose.

The negro said that he returned to the field in a circuitous route and resumed his work. The farmer, when officers suspected the negro, didn't believe the latter was guilty, because he said he did not believe that the negro had been gone from his sight long enough.

But the officers after making a close check-up found that it was entirely possible for the negro to have committed the crime. His arrest followed.

The negro was moved from Screven county jail to the Burke county jail at Waynesboro yesterday, and from the latter jail has been taken to other and safer quarters, officers announced, but they refuse to disclose the location of the negro.

He will be brought back to Screven county for trial on Monday, May 21, it is stated.

Pres. Watkins Of Peace Officers' Assn. Writes On "Wise Procedure"

Macon, Ga., July 15—Two recent cases in Georgia where "the wise procedure of peace officers and court officials precluded the possibility of mob violence," were related in letters addressed to members of the Georgia Sheriffs and Peace Officers Association by Police Chief Ben T. Watkins, president.

Lynchings were possibly averted this year in Troup and Screven counties by the courage and intelligence of sheriffs and judges, according to the Macon chief.

"I am proud of Georgia's record for the past few years and believe that by taking precaution we can continue without lynchings in this our great state," Chief Watkins said.

Feeling was intense and mob action was threatened when Leonard Philpot, Negro, was accused of attempted criminal assault of a white woman in Troup county on April 5, the letter states. Sheriff H. N. Brady of Troup county made arrangements for the immediate transfer of the Negro to the Fulton tower, where he remained until the day of his trial.

"In the meantime the circuit judge, Judge Roop," Chief Watkins continues, "realizing the possibility of mob action if the Negro was taken back to Troup county jail had the place of trial changed from Troup county to Coweta county. When the day for trial came the Negro was taken from the Fulton tower to the court room in Newnan, Coweta county, by an armed escort. The Negro was duly tried and giver a sentence of forty years in prison, which is equivalent to life imprisonment, for the convicted Negro is 49 years old."

The second case cited by Chief Watkins is that of a 17 year old Screven county Negro who plead guilty to having entered a white man's house in his absence and after striking his wife over the head with an ax, attempted to attack his 18 year old daughter. The mother's injuries were not fatal and presently she appeared on the scene with a shotgun whereupon the Negro fled.

"For days large groups of men searched for the criminal," the latter says. "When the Negro, who later confessed to the crime, was apprehended, he was removed by Sheriff J. T. Griffin to a strong prison in a distant county, thus avoiding the possibility of a mob's storming the local jail and taking the prisoner into its own hands.

"The criminal remained in jail in another county until the time of the trial, when he was brought, quite unannounced, before court of Judge H. B. Strange and having already pleaded guilty was sentenced to thirty years in prison. After the sentence was imposed, he was taken by an armed escort to another county to await assignment in a Georgia prison.

"In both cases threatening mobs were forming and the judges took very effective steps to keep the prisoners within the hands of the officers of the law..

The statesmanlike procedure of Sheriff H. N. Brady, of Troup county, and Sheriff J. J. Griffin of Screven county, in removing their prisoners to distant strong jails and the wise co-operation of Judge Roop and Judge Strange are to be commended by the Christian citizens throughout Georgia and the south."

SHERIFF PREVENTED LYNCHING

Unfortunately, a few nights ago, near Dublin, this state, a colored man ran his automobile into a wagon in which there was an elderly white man. In some manner the white man was killed. After apprehending the colored man, a mob gathered to lynch him. The brave sheriff, impelled by his duty, faced the mob and made an appeal for law and order. His forceful way had its affect on the mob. It dispersed and the prisoner's life was saved. If other sheriffs would do likewise, there would be less lynching. The Dublin sheriff deserves a just mede of praise. Without learning the other side of the occurrence, the mob wanted to take snap judgment. The accident might have been unavoidable. But when it comes to a case of this kind guilt is immedately placed upon the culprit.

A LYNCHING AVERTED

(Atlanta Constitution)

The mayor, minister and leading men of Bainbridge who persuaded an angry mob bent on lynching a negro, to dispense and "let the law take its course" deserve the fullest praise and thanks of the state.

The reported offense of the drunken Negro, "uttering insulting remarks to two white women," was aggravating, but furnished no pretext for a mob to usurp the place of the courts and violently execute the culprit. The Negro was already in the hands of the law and securely in jail.

There is no justification for lynch law until organized law has been destroyed, its forces disarmed, and the processes of anarchy and savagery only remain for the use of the people. That condition does not exist in Georgia and to have allowed a driveling, drink-demented Negro to be lynched for a possibly unconscious impudence would have been an enormously greater crime than that avenged in hate and fury.

By the prompt and conservative action of the good men of Bainbridge that crime was prevented on Monday night and the state saved from another dark and bloody chapter in a record of law obsevance that has been brightening for many years.

Yet there remains a need for the friends of law and order and justice to keep their educative services at work in their communities, teaching their fellow men that obedience to law is duty to God."

Every good citizen owes it to his own security and the honor of the state to oppose his voice and influence against every suggestion that the law cannot be trusted and the "savagery of the pack" must be resorted to upon any sudden provocation.

Dave Chapman Is Identified as One of Two Who Shot Police Chief.

Atlanta, Ga.

DARIEN, Ga., Sept. [illegible].—(AP)—Captured last night near Darien, a negro giving his name as Dave Chapman, 36, was identified by Special Officer [illegible] J. Anderson, of Darien, as one of two negroes who participated in the shooting two weeks ago of Police Chief R. L. Freeman, of Glynn county.

The negro was taken to the Brunswick jail for safe keeping.

Anderson, a special officer, was wounded when two negroes attempted to hold up a bank he was guarding. Chief Freeman was killed and two other officers wounded when they went in pursuit of the negroes.

One negro was shot to death in the Darien jail after he had been arrested as a participant in the shooting of Freeman, and another negro died as a result of gunshot wounds received when he ws captured by a posse.

Chapman was arrested September 16 and held several days on a minor charge. He made bond and was released.

After his release, Mayor Young, of Darien, questioned Brunswick officers in regard to a negro he was seeking. The officers told Young Chapman answered the description. Mayor Young then said the negro was the man wanted a the companion of the negro Grant, lynched after his arrest for killing Freeman.

Brunswick officers immediately began a search for Chapman and last night found him at Meridian, a small community on the "Ridge road' near Darien.

Brought back here, he was immediately identified by Anderson as one of the men involved in the attempted bank robbery.

Negro Convict Is Sent To Atlanta

Alleged Slayer Removed From Georgia Village

9-16-30

ATLANTA, GA., Sept. 15.—(AP)—John Willie Clark, escaped negro convict charged with slaying Police Chief Joe Ben Jenkins of Cartersville, was removed from the city today to the Fulton County jail here by National Guardsmen.

Guardsmen sent to Cartersville to protect the negro were withdrawn on order of Adjt. Homer C. Parker. They were dispatched there yesterday at the request of Cartersville authorities, but encountered no trouble in removing the negro and two companions said to have been with him when he killed Jenkins more than a week ago.

All was orderly at Cartersville today and there were no indications of an attempt to take the negro from authorities.

Clark was captured yesterday near Chatsworth. Officers wounded him twice in the chase and took him to jail at Cartersville. A crowd collected around the jail but officers spoke to the men and they became quiet.

Fearing the crowd might get beyond control, officers asked Gov. Hardman to send troops there. Adjt. Gen. Parker dispatched 50 men from Atlanta and 24 from Marietta with two machine guns to Cartersville. He went there himself, learned that quiet had been restored and carried out the Governor's orders that the men be withdrawn.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Sept. 24.—(AP)—Thomas county officers announced the arrest late tonight of a 20-year-old negro and expressed the belief that he was the man who attacked a nine-year-old white girl near here this afternoon.

The officers refused to divulge the name of the suspect, saying he had been placed in jail in an unannounced county seat.

Atlanta, Ga.

Despite the announcement a crowd of men gathered at the Thomas county jail and at a late hour had not been dispersed. Sheriff Gordon Davis said that while there was considerable feeling over the crime he did not expect any violence. The sheriff said the accused negro would not be brought back to Thomasville.

A few hours of the attack a crowd estimated by officers at several hundred had gathered at the scene of the crime. Search for the negro was aided by track dogs brought here from Camilla, Ga.

Several other suspects were in jail, the sheriff said, and at midnight officers were investigating a "tip" about five miles north of here.

The girl told officers she was grabbed up by a negro while she was walking along the road on her way home from school in Thomasville. Her parents heard her screams and rushed to her rescue. They said they saw the negro drop the girl and run. The girl was examined by a physicians who said that with the exception of bruises on the throat and fright she was not hurt. The victim told her parents she could identify the negro.

The negro suspected of the crime was tried and acquitted in Thomas county court recently on a charge of attacking a negro girl.

In the home of the negro's father, officers said they found clothing bearing marks of having been worn through a swamp. The parents of the child said the assailant ran toward a swamp. He was found riding in a truck not far from the scene of the crime.

Negro Convict Is Sent To Atlanta

Alleged Slayer Removed From Georgia Village

ATLANTA, GA., Sept. 15.—(AP)—John Willie Clark, escaped negro convict charged with slaying Police Chief Joe Ben Jenkins of Cartersville, was removed from the city today to the Fulton County jail here by National Guardsmen.

Guardsmen sent to Cartersville to protect the negro were withdrawn on order of Adjt. Homer C. Parker. They were dispatched there yesterday at the request of Cartersville authorities, but encountered no trouble in removing the negro and two companions said to have been with him when he killed Jenkins more than a week ago.

All was orderly at Cartersville today and there were no indications of an attempt to take the negro from authorities.

Clark was captured yesterday near Chatsworth. Officers wounded him twice in the chase and took him to jail at Cartersville. A crowd collected around the jail but officers spoke to the men and they became quiet.

Fearing the crowd might get beyond control, officers asked Gov. Hardman to send troops there. Adjt. Gen. Parker dispatched 50 men from Atlanta and 24 from Marietta with two machine guns to Cartersville. He went there himself, learned that quiet had been restored and carried out the Governor's orders that the men be withdrawn.

Negro in Darien Case Taken to Another Jail

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 15.—(AP)—Fred Bryant, Jr., one of three negroes held in jail here in connection with recent disturbances at Darien, Ga., was removed from jail Monday morning and taken to an unknown destination.

Bryant and the other negroes were arested after Chief Freeman of the Glynn county police and two negroes had been killed last week during disorders that followed the attempted robbery of the Darien bank.

COURAGE AND LAW WON.

Tuesday evening a deplorable and possibly tragic event was prevented here in Atlanta by the diplomacy and courage of Captain Grover Fain of the city police force. An angry company of men, aroused to avenge the brutal murder of a fellow worker, Motorman McWhorter, gathered at the colored clinic of Grady hospital, evidently designing to drag out the wounded desperado charged with the murder.

Constitution

Captain Fain met them, commanding protective patrolmen, and persuaded the gathering to realize their obligation as law-abiding citizens and retire from their purpose to override the course of justice. With great tact he poured oil of humor upon the more rabid insurgents and finally, by a brave declaration that none of them could mistake, he warned them not to cross the deadline between law-observance and law defiance. They understood him and went away, leaving the law and its courageous captain in control of the situation.

9-11-30

One can easily sympathize with the feelings of outrage that moved the men who thought to defend their peaceful occupations by day and night from murderous bandit assaults upon them. And every one must commend them for listening to reason when spoken to with sympathy and courage by an officer of the law.

Atlanta, Ga.

Justice in Georgia, especially in Atlanta, can be safely trusted to protect the people, or punish those who despoil them of property or life. We must all rest upon that trust. The mob spirit is always a lawless one and no work ever done by it has served the causes of order and justice.

The public of the city and state will applaud both the bravery and fidelity of Captain Fain and the good citizenship of the men who surrendered to his persuasion and authority.

Two Griffin Slayers Rushed to Atlanta

Threatened by a mob which was reported to have been forming in Spalding county, where they were held in jail charged with the shooting last Saturday night of Bill Joe Ellis, 60, prominent farmer, Lon and Ira Reid, negroes, were rushed to Atlanta late Wednesday and placed in Fulton county jail for safe keeping.

Ira Reid, alias Williams, Spalding county officers said, was arrested with his brother Tuesday night, and during Wednesday was said to have confessed that he and Lon Reid did the shooting. News of the alleged confession leaked out and a mob was forming when the officers took the prisoners from the jail and secreted them until they got an automobile to bring them to Atlanta. When the crowd reached the Spalding jail they were told that the negroes were not there, and the mob disbanded when a heavy downpour of rain fell.

The farmer, police said, was lured to his home Saturday night and there faced by a negro gunman, who shot him.

CHICAGO, May 8— A lynching was barely averted in Chicago Monday. Only the charge of a detective squad, armed with pistols and tear bombs, saved the life of a colored youth, suspected of insulting a white woman, who was being manhandled by a mob near Blue Island avenue and W. Roosevelt road.

The victim of the mob, James McQuitter, 24, said that he was innocent of the charges made against him. He was treated at the Maxwell police station.

Police failed to find the woman who McQuitter was accused of insulting. A squad led by Sergt Daniel Healy dispersed the scores of crazed white men who were beating McQuitter.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 23.—(AP)—Luther Bell, negro poolroom operator, was rushed from Evansville today to the state reformatory at Pendleton on receipt of reports that negroes were threatening to storm the jail here and avenge the slaying last night of Ernest Tidrington, negro political leader.

Tidrington, long a power in Republican politics here and throughout the state, was shot by Bell as a result of enmity arising during the recent mayoralty campaign in which Tidrington supported Frank Greise, Democrat, who won the office. Bell surrendered.

Reports reached the sheriff's office today that angry groups of negroes were forming in "Baptist Town," a settlement where most of Evansville's 4,000 negroes reside.

MARION, Ind., Oct. 10 — Marion authorities expressed themselves Tuesday as being fully confident that there would be no more demonstrations of racial feeling as the result of the shooting fray of Hezekiah Burden. Burden, who is the stepfather of Herbert Cameron, mentioned as a member of the trio, who were accused of robbing and murdering Claude Deeter, white, on August 6 and attacking a girl companion of Deeter.

Burden was indicted by the Grant county grand jury on a charge of assault and battery with intent to commit murder. Burden [illegible] his stepdaughter and two policemen before he was himself wounded and finally captured Sunday.

Abraham Smith and Thomas Shipp, Cameron's alleged associates, were lynched here by a mob on the court house lawn following the alleged murder of Deeter. Cameron barely escaped the same brutal result as befell Shipp and Smith.

Since the lynching, Burden is said to have been morose and in a threatening mood, police were told by acquaintances of Burden, who is now being held at the reformatory at Pendeton for safe keeping and out of reach of possible mob violence. It is said that he remarked on at least one occasion that he was going to avenge "himself on a couple of cops."

ATTEMPTED JAIL DELIVERY FRUSTRATED

An attempted jail delivery and possible lynching was prevented Saturday night at Salem, Ind. The law enforcement agencies acted in concert, and killed one of those who attempted to enter the jail. The town marshal was badly wounded, and the sheriff and his wife each sustained slight wounds from which they are expected to recover.

The events which lead up to the assault on the jail are not pertinent to the question. The fact that the officers of the law acted quickly, with decision and considerable bravery is highly important, otherwise it is possible that the total of 25 lynchings that disgraced the nation in 1930 might have been raised to 29.

The lynch route of wreaking vengeance on lawbreakers is a relic of the middle ages and an almost typically American method. There is nothing to recommend it. It is followed by expensive and frequently painful legal consequences. The slow operation of the law is no adequate defense.

Grant county is just now entering upon the aftermath of its terrific orgy of August when some of the accused are about to be brought before the bar of justice. It is not the province of The Chronicle to accuse or defend those who will appear as defendants. Let it be sufficient to say that if there had been no lynching there would be no trial of the accused lynchers, with the awful worry that accompanies the act of a man being brought to trial where his life is at stake.

FULTON, Ky., May 14.—Twenty Kentucky National Guardsmen will stand guard tomorrow during the trial of Roy Spirnger, charged with the murder of Frank Barrett, Fulton merchant, and the wounding of Bailey Huddleston, Fulton chief of police. The detachment will be under the command of Gen. Wm. H. Jones, adjutant general of Kentucky.

Memphis, Tenn.

Spirnger, confined in the Eddyville Penitentiary, will be brought to Fulton early tomorrow morning and guarded by the detachment during the trial. The request for troops was made by Circuit Judge Joseph E. Warren, who asked Gov. Flem D. Sampson to send them here to prevent possible violence.

Barrett and Huddleston were shot when the officer arrested him in Barrett's store on a charge of stealing merchandise. Spirnger is alleged to have opened fire when they attempted to force him into an automobile to drive him to jail. Barrett died soon after but Huddleston has almost recovered.

NEGRO IS GUARDED AFTER CONFESSING MURDER ATTACK

Constitution

BALTIMORE, Jan. 4.—(AP)—Alonzo Price, negro who police said confessed killing Reuben Heyman and assaulting Mrs. Dorothy Burgess early yesterday, was under constant guard today at Mercy hospital where physicians said he would recover from wounds received in a pistol battle that resulted in his capture. 1-5-30

In the meantime the state's attorney's office set machinery in motion for a speedy trial.

Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Burgess, whose story to police early yesterday morning, started an all-day search before the negro was caught, was under care of a physician at her home for hysteria.

Detectives said they got a deposition signed by Price and verifying the young woman's account of the crime in detail.

After a visit to the hospital Price's wife said that he had suffered from shell shock in the World War and that today he remembered nothing of yesterday's events.

The young woman said he forced her companion to drive to a lonely spot. There she said the negro shot him dead, and drove to another secluded road where he attacked her.

VICTOR MOSER IS MURDER VICTIM

Watervliet Youth Shot To Death By Colored Man On Street Here At Midnight.

Victor Moser, 18, is dead from a bullet fired into a crowd of young men by Joe Stevenson, 25, a colored man, shortly after midnight Tuesday. Moser died at about 3:30 Wednesday morning at the St. Joseph sanitarium where he had been taken by the Keasey ambulance after first aid had been administered by Dr. F. W. Brown. George Peterson assisted in taking Moser to the hospital.

The bullet penetrated the skull at the forehead and entered the brain.

The details of the tragedy as revealed Wednesday morning from such information as could be hastily gathered are as follows:

Joe Chapman, 22, of 330 No. Olive street, South Bend, and Joe Stevenson, 25, 122 Roy street, Kalamazoo, both colored, held up Louis Cohen and Margaret Kimball, 30, in front of the residence of the former's brother, Abraham Cohen, in South Bend, about 7:30 Tuesday night as the couple were in a new Oldsmobile car, parked in front of the residence. At the point of a gun the two men forced admission to the car and compelled Cohen to drive away. After proceeding a short distance one of the holdup men took the wheel and drove for hours, finally pulling into this city about midnight.

This is the story told by Cohen and Miss Kimball to the officers of their kidnapping.

Getting low on gas the driver pulled up in front of the Nelson Bros. service station and while one of the men remained to guard their prisoners, the other entered the American Cafe, an all night restaurant, and asked about getting gasoline. At this time Cohen asked his guard to be permitted to get out of the car, and, dropping to the ground, crawled around the rear of the car and called for help.

In the restaurant, besides Moser were Merle Seale, Raymond Knapp Merrett Knapp, Bob Danneffel, Bert Fillmore, all Watervliet young men and they all rushed out the door. At this one of the negroes started shooting into the crowd with a 22 calibre revolver, discharging the weapon several times. Moser fell to the sidewalk mortally wounded. In the meantime the woman had gotten out of the car. The negro who did the shooting leaped onto the running board and the other negro attempted to start the car as Cohen reached in and grabbed the ignition key. The two negroes are then said to have leaped from the car and ran north. Merle Seale turned in an alarm to the officers which was responded to by Deputy Sheriff Phil Cutler and Charles Andrews, Police Officers Orange Stineman and Bart Rose, and Nightwatch C. L. Ramer. Information of the shooting was immediately telephoned to Hartford, Paw Paw and other places and the man hunt was on.

Joined by a posse of 30 to 40 local volunteers, the officers tracked the two negroes in the freshly fallen snow across the Butternut street bridge, through the Lewis Addition and east on the Pere Marquette tracks toward Hartford.

The tracks of the two negroes did not lead into Hartford but skirted the edge of the town. Some of the posse with Deputy Andrews were unable to follow his pace and fell behind. Andrews, plunging ahead alone, followed the tracks of the two men in the snow. Near Stoughton's Corners, a mile and one-half north of Hartford, Andrews met up with two state police who were out on the hunt and the three came upon the two negros in a cornfield. The men surrendered without any resistance. They had thrown the gun away and were unarmed when taken by the officers.

The two members of the state police who were in at the capture are F. J Peter and W. J. Kreitlow.

Negroes Rushed To Jail.

The negroes were rushed to the county jail at St. Joseph by the officers and Cohen and the woman are also being held at the jail until a checkup on their story is made. Cohen is said to be a brother of Abraham Cohen, well known South Bend bakery owner, and is reported to have had $150 in currency on him.

Moser Popular Watervliet Boy.

The tragic death of young Moser on the eve of Christmas is a blow to the members of his family and a shock to hosts of friends in this city. Victor was prominent in high school athletics and played on the football and baseball teams in school and in independent teams after leaving school. He was employed at the Nelson Bros. Garage

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moser of East Watervliet, two sitsers, Frances and Gladys, and one brother, Donald Moser.

Intense Excitement Over Shooting.

There was intense excitement in this city following the cold blooded shooting to death of the well known Watervliet boy. Probably a hundred persons remained up all night, or until word of the capture of the murderers was received. The two negroes were taken about three o'clock in the morning.

Lynching Threats Heard.

The hour at which the capture of the negroes was effected may possibly have averted a lynching party as threats were heard on the street the next morning that hanging would be too good for the pair. The spiriting of the men to the county jail before daylight and before many had learned of the shooting probably saved the officers more trouble.

By The Associated Press

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 21.—Efforts of a mob to storm the Buchanan County jail early and gain custody of Raymond Gunn, Negro trapper, charged with the murder of Miss Velma Coltsr, nineteen-year-old school teacher, were frustrated today by the combined resources of the sheriff, the city police and a National Guard tank company.

Approximately 150 men, said to have gathered from Maryville, Mo., home of the teacher, and from other nearby Missouri towns, first appeared at the jail here shortly after midnight.

Sheriff Protects Prisoner

Sheriff John Roach talked to the mob leaders through a heavily barred door, and told them he would protect his prisoner in every way possible.

All deputy sheriffs immediately were called for duty. They were not molested upon arriving at the prison and entered the jail. City police also responded to the alarm, as did the St Joseph tank company of the Missour National Guard.

The guardsmen placed a tank equipped with a machine gun at the jail entrance. Slowly the mob members, reinforced by spectators from St Joseph, were driven away from the jail. After about three hours police guard lines circled the building, keeping all unauthorized persons at least a block distant.

Members of the mob held a meeting on a street corner two blocks away, and it was said they decided to go to Plattsburg, where reports declared the Negro had been taken.

Mob Is Dispersed

Officers [redacted] said the Negro, alleged to have confessed att[redacted] beating the school teacher to death had not arrived and was not expected. The mob also was not reported at Plattsburg, and St. Joseph officers believed they had gone home.

It was understood late today that Gunn, thirty-year-old ex-convict, still was in the county jail here. Officers, however, were reticent. He served a term in the Missouri penitentiary for conviction of attacking a co-ed in the Missouri State Teachers College at Maryville.

Miss Colter, whose mutilated body was found Tuesday night in the rural schoolhouse where she was the single teacher, also attended the college.

Officers there said the negro, alleged to have confessed beating the school teacher to death, had not arrived and was not expected. The mob also was not reported at Plattsburg, and St. Joseph officers believed the members drove in motor cars to their respective homes after failing to obtain entrance to the St. Joseph jail.

It was understood late today that Gunn, 30-year-old ex-convict, still was in the county jail here. Officers, however, were reticent concerning his whereabouts. He served a term in the Missouri penitentiary for conviction of assaulting a co-ed in the Missouri State Teachers' College of Maryville.

Jackson, Miss.—(AMP)—Fearing that three men suspected as the slayers of James Goode, a policeman, might be lynched, officers of Vicksburg spirited the suspects here and placed them in jail for safe-keeping.

Goode was slain Saturday night as he was questioning three Negroes who were loitering on a street corner. A few hours after the killing James Brown, James Miner and George Moore were arrested as the suspected slayers. The feeling was very intense against the men so officers, under the cover of darkness and with talk of lynching going the rounds, brought their prisoners here. 1-14-30

Since their arrival the prisoners have been closely questioned in the effort to fasten the crime on one of them and charges of accessory to the crime on the other two. Public feeling against the officer excited by the tragic battle eased sufficiently today to permit Sheriff Matthews to retain Chapman in the county jail here until his preliminary hearing is held and formal charges decided on, but both the jail and prohibition headquarters were under guard.

Montgomery Ala

On the report of Asst. U. S. Atty. Sack that Chapman fought the duel in self-defense and was fortunate to escape with his life, Commissioner Doran announced in Washington that he would not suspend the officer.

Chapman, in his jail cell suffering from a slight wound received in the fight, was pleased with this decision. "I will tell all there is to tell at the proper time," he said.

His counsel, Brewer and Brewer, of Clarksdale, advanced the self-defense plea for his coming arraignment. Ed Brewer, of the firm, declared that "Chapman shot in self-defense."

Doggett was well known throughout the delta for his charitable acts, his friends said. Many came here to console his widow and two children.

Much excitement and conflicting reports arose after the shooting but friends of both sides agreed that the trouble came up over bond disagreement in liquor cases. Doggett was known as a man who went professional bond in prohibition cases.

F. N. Collier, of the legal staff of the federal prohibition department at New Orleans, was dispatched here by O. D. Jackson, 10th district prohibition administrator and opened the government's investigation of the shooting. He will make a report to Washington.

National Guard Again On Duty In Missouri Town After Attempt Is Made to Lynch Negro Mail Carrier.

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Oct. 15.—National guardsmen mounted machine guns at Ste. Genevieve's ancient courthouse tonight and patrolled the streets with fixed bayonets to prevent threatened attempt to liberate nine members of a mob which attempted to lynch the town's only remaining negro citizen.

The rest of the negro population fled after three negroes aroused feeling to high pitch by murdering two men. Only Louis Ribeau, veteran negro mail carrier, dared to remain.

Taken by Mob.

Late last night a mob kidnaped Ribeau from his home. In trying to put him in an automobile, his captors became confused and Ribeau broke away, to escape to the woods along the Mississippi river.

Nine members of the gang were captured by Sheriff Zeigler. The national guard units, which previously had been recalled in the belief there would be no further violence, then posted soldiers throughout the city and placed machine guns at vantage points.

Ziegler said he feared an effort would be made to free the nine men he jailed. About 20 men, he said, formed the group which dragged Ribeau from his home.

The three negroes, two men and one woman, who killed Harry panchot and Paul Ritter during a holdup, remained in jail in St. Louis, where they were spirited after a mob formed here.

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Oct. 13.—Troops patroled the streets of this Mississippi River town tonight, while negroes stayed within doors or fled to the river bluffs, fearful of the mob spirit which pervaded the city.

Two negroes and their negro woman companion, immediate objects of the citizens' wrath, were spirited to St. Louis to escape being lynched. They murdered one man and critically injured another yesterday.

After they had been smugggled out of town and after the National Guardsmen arrived under orders of Gov. Henry S. Caulfield, Chief of Police John Herter announced that he believed there would be no trouble.

Negroes Flee Town.

Negro residents, however, continued to leave their homes after a band of men demanded that they quit the town. The troops wherever possible stopped the fleeing negroes to assure them they would be protected if they remained in their houses.

The negroes, J. B. Lee, Guy Taylor and Vera Rogers, confessed that they killed Harry Panchot, and wounded his companion, Paul Ritter.

Panchot and Ritter give the negroes a ride in their automobile. After holding them up, the negroes admitted shooting Panchot to death. Then they wounded Ritter and threw him into the Mississippi River. When he attempted to swim to shore they pelted him with stones.

Authorities rescued him, arrested the negroes and took them to jail in Ste. Genevieve. A mob there threatened to tear down the jail. The negroes next were spirited to Hillsboro, where another mob formed. The governor then ordered out the troops and the negroes were hurried to St. Louis.

Violence Feared If Slayers Of Man Are Caught

Montgomery, Ala.

STE GENEVIEVE, MO., Oct. 12.—(AP)—A widespread search was on here today for four negroes, one a woman, who shot and killed Harry Panchot, 45, and critically wounded Paul Ritter, 38, after robbing them at Little Rock Boat Landing about two miles north of here early today. After shooting the men the negroes robbed them, then threw them into the Mississippi River and threw rocks at Ritter when he did not sink.

Authorities anticipated mob violence if the negroes were found. Crowds gathered outside the jail after 20 negroes were rounded up, but at noon only small groups remained. Sheriff Louis Zeigler swore in 10 deputies.

Panchot, a service car driver, was engaged by the negroes to take them to Little Rock Boat Landing early today and Ritter, a stationary fireman, went along for the ride. On reaching the landing the negroes paid Panchot, Ritter said, and then started shooting. They took $10 and a watch from Ritter and a small amount of money from Panchot's pockets. Panchot was killed by a bullet through the heart and Ritter was shot through the abdomen by a bullet which entered his spine, paralyzing his legs. When he attempted to swim the negroes hit him on the head with rocks.

A watchman on a boat heard his cries and rescued Ritter while the negroes fled. The watchman also recovered Panchot's body from shallow water. Ritter is in a St. Louis hospital in a critical condition.

SCORES FLEE FROM SCENE

Macon, Ga.

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Oct. 13 (AP)—More than 100 Negroes, virtually the whole Negro population, had left town tonight after the confession of three Negroes, two men and a woman, to the murder of Harry Panchot and wounding of Paul A. Ritter, both white, yesterday.

The only two Negro families left here were guarded tonight by militiamen, called by Gov. Henry S. Caulfield at the request of Sheriff Zeigler to prevent mob action.

Three Negroes Confess

The three Negroes, giving the names J. C. Lee, 28, Guy Taylor, 26, and Vera Rogers, 30, were taken secretly to the Hillsboro jail, 30 miles away, after the confession that they shot and killed Panchot, a lime kiln laborer and shot Ritter, then threw him into the Mississippi river in the course of a holdup. They admitted throwing rocks at Ritter when he attempted to swim to shore.

From the Hillsboro jail the Negroes were taken to St. Louis for safekeeping. Sheriff Zeigler said he believed the feeling here had lessened and while militiamen patrolled the town, no further threat of mob action was expected.

Governor Caulifield's action in calling out the two National Guard companies was hastened by a message from the Commission for Interracial corporation of Atlanta, Ga., asking him to "take steps to save Missouri and the South from the bolt of another lynching."

NEGRO MAILMAN ESCAPES FROM LYNCHING MOB

Troops Recalled, Sheriff Arrests Nine in Missouri Outbreak

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Oct. 15—A mob that broke into the home of Louis Ribeau, Negro mail carrier, late last night in an attempt to lynch him, was robbed of its quarry when he broke away and escaped.

National guardsmen were recalled and the city placed under martial control early today.

Nine suspected members of the mob were arrested.

Racial feeling had been running high in Ste. Genevieve since Sunday, when three Negroes, one a woman, confessed to murdering Harry Panchot, a white man, and fatally wounding Paul Ritter in a holdup.

Riots were threatened all day Monday, and Gov. Caulfield ordered out two detachments of National Guardsmen. All Negroes in town, except Ribeau and his brother, fled in terror. The three prisoners were removed to St. Louis for safe keeping.

Ritter died in a hospital here yesterday. When the news became generally known last night, the mob formed, swore vengeance and attacked Ribeau's home.

The guardsmen returned this morning, took charge of the town, declared martial law and sent detachments to patrol the streets.

Fear was expressed by Sheriff Zeigler after the arrest of the nine men, whose names were withheld, that an attempt might be made to free them from the county jail.

Authorities were unable to estimate how many men were in the mob, but it was believed that they numbered about twenty. They were unmasked and went to Ribeau's home in several automobiles.

It was reported the mob searched for Ribeau in nearby woods for an hour after his escape. Zeigler said it appeared certain that the Negro evaded the mob.

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Oct. 15.—A mob that broke into the home of Louis Ribeau, Negro mail carrier, last night in an attempt to lynch him, was foiled when he broke away and escaped.

Nine suspected members of the mob were arrested by Sheriff Ziegler, who called for the soldiers when he feared the situation was getting out of hand.

The mob, according to Ribeau's brother, who fled from the house, battered its way into the mail carrier's home about 11 P. M., dragged Ribeau out and was trying to put him in an automobile when he wrested loose and fled.

Chicago, Ill.

STE. GENEVIEVE, Mo., Oct. 17. — (Special) — This little town, situated on the Mississippi river in the eastern part of the state, has been in a turmoil since Sunday night when a white man was killed and another shot by two alleged bandits who are now in jail.

Harry Panchot, a salesman, and Paul A. Ritter, a laborer, are the white victims of the robbers. Panchot was slain outright and his body was thrown in the Mississippi river while Panchot, shot in the stomach, managed to escape death when he was rescued from the river by a river guard.

Almost immediately following the crime two men and a woman were arrested and, according to statements given by the sheriff of Ste. Genevieve county, they have confessed to the murder, giving robbery as the motive. The trio, now held in jail at Hillsboro, 30 miles from Ste. Genevieve, are J. C. Lee, 28; Guy Taylor, 26, and Vera Rogers, 30. All are well known in this section as rough characters.

Almost on the heels of the murder and shooting for which the three were arrested the mob got busy. All Sunday night and Monday there were threats of a triple lynching. Plans were on foot to pull off a kind of celebration that would put Mississippi to shame. White men and women were pouring into Ste. Genevieve from all surrounding towns. They were armed and in festive mood. Sheriff Zeizler and Chief of Police Herter realizing that they were incapable of coping with the situation, spirited the prisoners to the Hillsboro jail.

The rumblings of the mob became so loud and threatening that they were heard by the interracial commission of Atlanta, Ga., and caused this commission to telegraph Governor Caulfield of Missouri to prevent the lynching. The governor immediately dispatched three national guard companies to the scene to see that no damage was done, but the troops arrived after the mob had gone to more than one hundred families and ordered them to get out of town before 5 o'clock Monday.

Most of the families quit their jobs immediately and, like cattle trooping before a group of herders, began to evacuate the town. Although they were guilty of no crimes, they were leaving their homes and belongings because a mob had been cheated of its lynching intentions. One man, however, refused to leave home. He was Louis Ribeau, a mail carrier, who declared that he had violated no laws and that he would not desert his home to satisfy the whim of a bunch of white hoodlums.

For two days state troops have had to guard Ribeau. Governor Caulfield, who at the time of his election promised voters that he would see that all laws are enforced rigidly, has declared that there will be no lynching in Missouri during his administration if he has to shoot every member of every mob that forms. The promptness with which he sent troops to this town proves that he means what he says.

Ste. Genevieve, in the county by that name, is the center of the brick industry of lower Missouri. The population numbers less than five thousand and most of the employees work at brick kilns or on the Mississippi. Of the 100 dark families who live here the majority have reputations for being law-abiding and industrious.

BOONVILLE, Mo., Sept. 10.—(AP) Tony Vriski, 22, of St. Louis, inmate of the state reformatory here, today was in the Missouri penitentiary at Jefferson City for safekeeping after having kidnaped and killed C. E. Chrane, for 18 years superintendent of Boonville schools, late yesterday.

Vriski was taken to the prison because officials feared mob violence.

Vriski, a houseboy in the home of the reformatory superintendent, Colonel Theodore Ziske, stole a revolver from a locker, slipped away from the reformatory, came upon Chrane in his car and forced Chrane to drive across the Missouri river. After shooting Chrane he threw the body into a field and drove on, only to ditch the car two miles away. A truck driver captured him after a struggle. Vriski was intoxicated. He was serving for robbery.

Whereabouts of Negro, Who Admitted Killing Rural Teacher, Not Known

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 21 (AP)—Efforts of a mob to storm the Buchanan county jail early today and gain custody of Raymond Gunn, Negro trapper, charged with the murder of Miss Velma Colter, 19-year-old school teacher, were foiled by sheriff's deputies, city police and a National Guard tank company.

Approximately 150 men, said to have gathered from Maryville, Mo., home of the teacher, and from other nearby Missouri towns, first appeared at the jail here shortly after midnight. Sheriff John Roach talked to the mob leaders through a heavily barred door, and told them he would protect his prisoner in every way possible.

All deputy sheriffs immediately were called for duty. They were not molested upon arriving at the prison and entered the jail. City police also responded to the alarm, as did the St. Joseph tank company of the Missouri National Guard.

Tank Guards Door

The guardsmen placed a tank equipped with a machine gun at the jail entrance.

Slowly the mob, reinforced by spectators from St. Joseph, was driven from the jail. After about three hours police guard lines circled the building, keeping all unauthorized persons at least a block distant.

Members of the mob held a meeting on a street corner two blocks away, and it was said they decided to go to Plattsburg where reports declared the Negro had been taken.

Officers there said the Negro, alleged to have confessed attacking and beating the school teacher to death, had not arrived and was not expected. The mob was not reported at Plattsburg, and St. Joseph officers believed the members drove in motor cars to their respective homes after failing to obtain entrance to the St. Joseph jail.

Whereabouts Not Known

It was understood late today that Gunn, 30-year-old ex-convict, still was in the county jail here. Officers, however, were reticent concerning his whereabouts. He served a term in the Missouri penitentiary for conviction of assaulting a co-ed in the Missouri State Teachers' college of Maryville.

Miss Colter, whose mutilated, partly nude body was found Tuesday night in the rural schoolhouse where she taught, also attended the college.

Buchanan county officers believe prisoners in jail here can easily be guarded from any violence. The cells are in the center of the building. Seven heavy steel doors must be opened before entrance can be made into the cell rooms.

Lynching

To the Editor of The [redacted]

The outbreak of the lynching spirit in the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine illustrates the ease with which an orderly assembly may degenerate into a mob. The press reports that in the midst of the hysteria some one cried out, "Lynch him," when Judge Ben Lindsey narrowly escaped drastic mob violence. A mob may be defined as a group of humans possessed of the devil.

We are wont to regard lynching as a summary form of vengeance wreaked upon the Negro who commits some heinous or revolting crime. But as a matter of fact, it is but the wreaking of summary vengeance of the aroused evil spirit upon any convenient victim. The Negro bears the great brun of lynching because, as Mr. Dooley says, "he is too aisily lynched." We should always keep in mind that the record discloses some fifteen hundred white mob victims during the past fifty years, which ought to be sufficient to impress upon the American people the enormity of the evil. Remedies for lynching are too often proposed and advocated as if intended for the peculiar and especial benefit of the colored race. But the evil is deeper than race and the remedy must be as deep as the evil. The spirit back of lynching is a moral malady whose remedy must be of a moral nature.

Lynching Feared

RALEIGH, N. C. Jan. 30.—(ANP)—Dave Locke, who was arrested in Wallace, N. C., charged with the murder of a white woman, was rushed here to the state prison, by three deputies, to prevent him from being lynched.

According to officers, Locke confessed to the Duplin County police that he killed Mrs. Stephen English the murdered white woman, and later he denied the confession. He was arrested along with Dave Brockington Sunday morning for investigation.

When questioned he is supposed to have told officers that he killed the woman and that Brockington had nothing to do with it. It was this confession that aroused the anger of the whites of Wallace, and it is believed that had he not been rushed away he would have been lynched.

Locke worked at a sawmill and was discharged Saturday, the day of the murder. He was captured near the house of the murdered woman Sunday. His actions since his incarceration have led to the belief that he mentally was unbalanced.

KENANSVILLE, N. C., March 23.—David Locke, a Negro worker is alive here today simply because a lynch gang mixed its jails. The lynchers assembled, spread a rumor that Locke had confessed to the rape and murder of the 20-year-old wife of Steve English, a white farmer, and demanded Locke for burning at the stake. They would have lynched him, for the Southern sheriff has almost never resisted the ruling white autocracy when it wants the blood of a Negro, and usually does everything he can to help the lynchers. However, in this case, the Negro worker was in another jail.

Before the killers could make new plans, several white men came forward admitting that English had tried to hire them to kill his wife, and one of them told of seeing English headed for his home with a shovel handle, hearing the sound of the blow, and the fall of the woman's body. They said English wanted to change wives, and did not like, in this fundamentalist territory, to go through the publicity of a divorce. English is on trial. But nobody thought it much out of the way to sacrifice a Negro worker to straighten out the white planters' marital tangle.

KENANSVILLE, N. C.—(Special)—Only the fact that he had been transferred from the local lock-up to the Raleigh jail saved David Locke from a lynching.

Locke together with David Brockington was charged with murder, and the "usual crime" upon the pretty twenty-year-old white wife of Steve English, white farmer.

Members of the mob were told that Locke had "confessed" his heinous crime. A lynching was certain as the mob formed outside the jail. They dispersed reluctantly when advised that the prisoner had been moved elsewhere.

Husband Arrested

Tuesday, English was arrested for first degree murder of his own wife at their home, near Wallace.

The white man slew his wife because "he did not love her anymore" but "loved another woman," witnesses testified at the hearing.

Raeford Albertson, white, who also was held without bond as a material witness, testified that English offered him "a Ford automobile and money" if he would kill Mrs. English. Albertson said he agreed, but when he and English went to the English home on January 18, he "got cold feet."

Shovel Handle

The youth testified that then English himself went into the house "with a piece of wood something like a shovel handle."

Pretty soon he heard a blow, Albertson testified, and then a noise "as if a chair had turned over."

Charles Albertson, brother of Raeford, testified that English also attempted to hire him to kill Mrs. English.

English did not himself take the stand.

Conscience Bothered

Raeford Albertson testified today that all the while he kept his silence. A few days ago, though, he said, his conscience began bothering him and he went to Pete Carter, white, and told him the story. The sheriff was summoned and Albertson was arrested. He repeated his story and last Wednesday English was arrested.

Three of them were released immediately, one was sent to Charlotte, and the others kept here for further questioning. Officers stated that they did not believe they had the "right man" yet.

The report of the arrest caused quite an excitement, and as shades of night fell, a mob of more than a thousand whites went to jail to get the prisoners. Restraining White Mobs Part of Race Problem

At Concord, N. C., a lynching appears to have been averted by the timely arrival of troops. Circumstances were right for mob violence, but the sheriff and governor took no chances.

Their action speaks well for their sense of duty. The reputation of the state, as a place where law and order will be maintained, has been saved.

Lynchings are forever giving the South a black eye. It cannot be denied that there is provocation at times. For instance, this latest disturbance resulted from a Negro's criminal attack on a 15-year-old white girl. That such a crime calls for severe penalties cannot be denied by anyone.

But too often does a southern lynching mob exact its revenge from the wrong man. Though none of the seven Negroes imprisoned in the Concord jail, when it was besieged Friday night, was identified as the girl's attacker, all would have been treated with violence had the aroused crowd forced an entrance. There might have been a massacre of innocent men.

That is the main trouble with avenging mobs. They are in no mood to exercise discrimination. Justice demands that the Negro who attacked the Concord girl be given the extreme penalty of the law, but mobs, running amuck in quest of vengeance, are more likely to deal an injustice.

Southern whites are proud of their ability to handle the race problem. We are not arguing that, in a general sense, they fail. The sheriff of Concord and the governor of North Carolina handled it pretty well, indeed, the other night. They restrained a white mob that was bent on satisfying a blood lust at any cost. For white mobs constitute part of the race problem.

CONCORD'S LYNCHING MOB HAD PICKWICKIAN COLOR

Governor Gardner acted with commendable promptness in ordering out militia to protect the jail at Concord, around which had gathered a mob full of threats against a negro prisoner accused of a capital crime.

Maintenance of the State's practical immunity from the crime of lynching is one of the most important assets our Governors have to protect. Before Ella May Wiggins was lynched by gunfire on the highway, we had escaped for years the stigma of this crime in its fatal significance. There was the Needleman case and there was the unsuccessful effort to lynch an innocent negro at Asheville. Governor McLean and the law authorities acted promptly and effectively in both these instances. The Wiggins case followed a threat of the Gastonia press which no one had taken seriously. It was a crime of surprise. But Governor Gardner has shown through a long string of troubles with rioting mobs that he will not hesitate to call out the power of the State to act in prevention of the one crime that can be related directly to civic anarchy.

Yet we imagine that the Concord mob was very largely composed of an element that wished scarcely more than an exhibition of sentiment. It milled about the jail, made threats, broke a few window panes, but it evidently lacked that deadly determination which other mobs have shown in the past. It had no leaders ready to dare extremes. There was nobody in the mob itself who seemed ready to come to an issue with officers within the jail who must be supposed to have been ready to protect the prisoner with gunfire, if the mob had shown itself a thing of courage and decision. It was a cautious mob, in all respects. It was thinking of its own skins. It was remembering the success of the State in punishing similar ventures. From the point of view of the Governor, troops were indicated and he ordered them to take charge. But the whole matter could have been resolved without them.

The memory of the oldest inhabitant of Wake County includes the record of only one lynching in this vicinage. We have been free of the basic crime, as becomes the seat of the State government. The nearest we ever came to breaking that record was the opera bouffe appearance in front of the then new Wake County jail by a large mob of variously incited orators, who on a summer night turned out to demonstrate their feelings. The jail itself was an impregnable fortress, assuming that the Sheriff and his deputies concluded to stick, instead of to quit. They stuck, and after the vaudeville performance had been in progress an hour or more, Governor Bickett appeared in person. He was, also, a dapper person, in correct summer costume, dressed carefully to the last pat to his tie and the final crease to his trousers. He took off his straw hat and proceeded to make oration to the mob. It seemed that a speech was what they wanted. The Governor got a hand and a cheer, and there was a general dispersal!

We always have thought that Governor Bickett took this mob in its own spirit of humor. Its humor was ugly, but humorous. His was cheerful and optimistic. Certainly no county in North Carolina ever had a more meticulous advocate of peace and order.

Somehow, reading between the lines of the dispatches, we imagine the alleged Concord mob was of the same experimental and sportive temper.

FEAR LYNCHING; RUSH WHITE MAN AWAY TO SAFETY

9-27-30

GREENVILLE, N. C., Sept. 26.—Rushed to this county Friday night, Sept. 19, to avoid mob violence, John Daniels, young white man of Martin county, was carried to the penitentiary at Raleigh Saturday morning for safekeeping pending his trial at Williamston on a charge of the murder of Jim Ange, whose body was dragged from the Roanoke river.

[illegible]

Circumstances leading to the finding of the body in the river resulted in the arrest of young Daniels, who was known to have been with Ange just prior to the announcement of his disappearance Sunday. He had been a close companion of the dead man for several weeks prior.

Officers are of the opinion that they have evidence sufficient to convict Daniels on the charge following his admission that he shot Ange, but that it was accidental. Ange was shot through the head with a shotgun, and the alleged murderer contends that the gun was fired while the two were sitting on the bank of the river, at which time he was tampering with the gun.

Ange, being a Civil war veteran, was known to have had about $75 in his pocket which he had received from his pension check, but when the body was found no money was on his person.

Troops May Be Sent To Oklahoma Town

Montgomery, Ala

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA., July 14.—(AP)—Following receipt of word from county authorities at Erick, Beckham County, that they had the situation in hand, Gov. W. J. Holloway tonight cancelled an order sending 100 men and 10 officers of the 179th Infantry, Oklahoma National Guard, to the town to assist in quelling racial disorders.

The troops under command of Charles F. Barrett, adjutant general, were being mobilized when the Governor withdrew his order.

H. C. Ivester, Beckham County attorney, and M. L. Inman, sheriff, who previously had requested the Governor to send troops to assist them, told Gov. Holloway after looking over the situation they believed help was not necessary.

The trouble was precipitated last Friday when Mrs. Henry Vaughan, who formerly lived in Erick, was beaten to death by a negro on the Vaughan farm home near Shamrock, Texas, just across the Oklahoma line.

Jessie Lee Washington, negro, is being held in the Oklahoma Reformatory at Granite, where he was rushed by a Texas officer Saturday to evade a mob in Shamrock. Washington confessed he killed Mrs. Vaughan with an iron bar, authorities say.

Early Saturday night a mob of several hundred men invaded the negro quarter of Shamrock apparently bent on burning the negro houses, most of which had been deserted by their occupants in response to signs posted about the town in the afternoon warning the negroes to "leave town before sundown." The sheriff and a posse met the mob with drawn revolvers and the gathering dispersed without trouble.

Later Saturday night several hundred men gathered in Erick and forced all negroes there to leave, warning them not to return.

L. E. Holly, deputy sheriff, estimated today 200 negroes had fled westward.

Minor disturbances continued today, but these, County Atty. Ivester said, were among members of the mob who apparently were divided in sentiment on the point of allowing negroes to return.

Walter Hadley, secretary to Gov. Holloway, said he had been told by the County Attorney of Greer County at Mangum that he had received reports night riders were organizing to drive negroes out of that county. Granite, where the accused negro is held, is in Greer county.

The report of Washington's removal from the Granite, Okla., reformatory, where he had been held following threats of mob action, was to the effect he was being taken to Wheeler for arraignment and preliminary hearing. Fear was expressed that if the negro is arraigned there, officers might be unable to give him protection.

Frank Tackett, father of the slain woman, and Leo Rosson, brother-in-law, both were reported to have gone to Wheeler, accompanied by several others from Erick.

In a tense special meeting today, Erick business men flatly refused to approve the action of the "hoodlum gang, that chased negroes from this community over the weekend. The business men counseled cool-headed action and refused to attach their names to the petition suggesting that negroes not be allowed to reside in this section.

FEAR OF RACE RIOT DIES IN OKLAHOMA

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 14.—(AP) Following receipt of word from county authorities at Erick, Beckham county, that they had the situation in hand, Governor W. J. Holloway tonight cancelled an order sending 100 men and 10 officers of the 179th infantry, Oklahoma National Guard, to the town to assist in quelling racial disorders.

Montgomery, Ala

The troops, under command of Charles F. Barrett, adjutant general, were being mobilized when the governor withdrew his order.

H. C. Ivester, Beckham county attorney, and M. L. Inman, sheriff, who previously had requested the governor to send troops to assist them, told Governor Holloway after looking over the situation they believed help was not necessary.

The trouble was precipitated last Friday when Mrs. Henry Vaughan, who formerly lived in Erick, was beaten to death by a negro on the Vaughan farm home near Shamrock, Texas, just across the Oklahoma line.

Jesse Lee Washington, negro, is being held in the Oklahoma reformatory at Granite, where he was rushed by a Texas officer Saturday to evade a mob in Shamrock. Washington confessed he killed Mrs. Vaughan with an iron bar, authorities say.

Early Saturday night a mob of several hundred men invaded the negro quarter of Shamrock, apparently bent on burning the negro houses, most of which had been deserted by their occupants in response to signs posted about the town in the afternoon warning the negroes to "leave town before sundown." The sheriff and a posse met the mob with drawn revolvers and the gathering dispersed without trouble.

Later Saturday night several hundred men gathered in Erick and forced all negroes to leave, warning them not to return.

L. E. Holly, deputy sheriff, estimated today 200 negroes had fled westward.

Minor disturbances continued today but these, County Attorney Ivester said, were among members of the mob who apparently were divided in sentiment on the point of allowing negroes to return.

NEGROES RETURN TO TEXAS HOMES.

SHAMROCK, Texas, July 14.—(AP) Negroes who left their homes here after Saturday's warning that they get out of town were returning today under assurances from Texas rangers and city and county officers they would be given full protection.

Sergeant M. T. Gonzaullos and Rangers W. H. Kirby and J. P. Huddleston, all of Dallas, sent here by Governor Moody, announced they were equipped to put down any disorders which had been threatened after the slaying of Mrs. Henry Vaughan by a negro last Friday.

Gonzaullos and his men set up two machine guns and assembled tear and gas bombs for emergency use.

Jesse Lee Washington, negro, accused of beating Mrs. Vaughan to death with a piece of pipe, was held in Granite, Okla., and Judge W. R. Ewing, of the 31st district court, was expected tomorrow to consider plans for convening a grand jury to indict Washington. It was likely his trial would be rushed.

Sheriff Rescues Colored ✓ Slayer from Lynch Mob

Shamrock, Texas.—A colored man was held in a secret hidi[illegible] somewhere across the Oklahoma line today while officials waited for the murderous fury of a thwarted Shamrock mob to die down.

To Sheriff Claude McKinney, of Collingsworth County, was given the credit for saving Jesse Lee, colored farm hand, from an infuriated group of men and boys who wanted to lynch him for attacking and killing a white farm woman, Mrs. Henry Vaughen, 25.

Sheriff McKinney led an armed posse of 200 which searched the countryside for Lee after the woman's death was reported. The sheriff himself found the fugitive hiding at a farm near the scene of the assault.

Realizing the mob would try to lynch Lee, McKinney made the prisoner lie down in the back seat of his touring car and drove through a crowd of more than 100 gathered in front of the Vaughan home. McKinney drove across the Oklahoma line, only a few miles distant, and had succeeded in secreting Lee before the mob realized it had been cheated of its victim.

The attack occurred in the Vaughan home while the woman's husband was in the field. When threatened, Mrs. Vaughan sent her small daughter for help. Vaughan rushed to the house to find his wife unconscious on the floor. Lee had fled. Mrs. Vaughan died shortly after in a hospital here.

23 Whites Face U.S. Charges

Chicago, Ill

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 25.—Twenty-three unnamed Beckham county whites, some of whom are county officials, are charged with mob violence and driving Race citizens from their homes near Erick, in a complaint filed by Roy Lewis, U. S. district attorney, here on July 18.

"The right to receive employment as a laborer for hire and earn a living and to lease lands is a fundamental right inherent in every free citizen, and a conspiracy by a group of people to prevent another group from exercising these rights because of their race or color is conspiracy to deprive them of a privilege secured to them by the Constitution and laws of the United States," said Lewis to a representative of The Chicago Defender.

The startling announcement of the federal district attorney came right on the heels of the disquieting statement eminating from the state capitol, where Governor W. J. Holloway was quoted as saying that "I am advised by Beckham county officials that things have quieted down and that they need no outside assistance to restore order."

"Can things be quiet in Beckham when more than 200 citizens are deprived of the right to return to their homes and crops?" asked the U. S. official. "Can things be quiet when 12 responsible white citizens come into this office and swear that peace officers of Beckham county operated with the mob in driving other citizens out of the community?"

Ernest Scott, Theodore Scott and Julius Alexander are the complaining witnesses in the information filed by Lewis. The defendants are charged with conspiracy to prevent non-whites from leasing, occupying and cultivating land in Beckham county, Okla. A complete list of all the names of persons driven out is in the hands of the United States attorney.

Protection for more than 200 people who were driven from their homes on July 13 and whose property was destroyed during the rioting was asked by the delegation. The riot followed the arrest of Jesse Lee Washington, accused slayer of Mrs. Henry Vaughn, who was found beaten to death on her farm home near Shamrock, Texas, July 11.

Washington stoutly denies his guilt. He was asleep in his cabin when informed that he was wanted on a murder charge. An investigation made at Elk City disclosed that the slain woman and her husband had been having domestic trouble over an extended period: that he had sworn to kill her if she ever attempted to leave him. Local citibens are wondering why Vaughn is not questioned by the authorities about the affair.

FEELING YET TENSE ON TEXAS OKLAHOMA BORDERS

Topeka Plaindealer

Erick, Okla., July 25—(ANP)—What bids fair to be a serious interracial clash is in the making along the Texas, Oklahoma border, unless forceful steps are taken to allay the ever increasing feeling between the races.

7-25-30

Mob rule has resigned. Innocent Negro citizens have been forced to leave their homes and their farms by the whites who are supposed to be sent upon avenging the death of Mrs. Ruth Vaughan, a young white woman who was alleged to have been killed by Jesse Lee Washington, a 27 year-old Negro.

Topeka, Kans

Following the capture of Washington an attempt to lynch him by the whites at Shamrock, Tex., was thwarted by the sheriff and his deputies and the intended victim was rushed to Granite Prison in Granite, Oklahoma, where he will be kept until his trial is held.

The white woman was a native of this little town at one time and to avenge her death, the whites drove all of the Negroes from the town and later other towns followed suit until there was a wave of mob violence and molesting of innocent citizens, unparalled perhaps even in this section. Hordes of blood-thirsty, whites roamed the section ordering the Negroes to get out and stay out.

TWO NEW ANGLES

Rumors are rife that after all, the real cause for the actions on the part of the whites is not to avenge the white woman's death, but an economic one. It has been known here that for sometime plans have been in the making for the expulsion of the Negroes in and around the little border towns. No good excuse could be found, so the execution of the plans had to be delayed. The murder of the white woman offered an excuse andthe program was inaugurated with great gusto by the champions of white supremacy and the virtue and lives of white women.

Killer Spirited Away to Prevent Mob Violence.

PAWNEE, Okla., Dec. 8.—Jess Powell, 65-year-old recluse farmer who went on a shooting rampage, ascribed by officers to "just plain meanness," killing two persons and wounding two others, was held in an unnamed jail tonight for safekeeping.

Memphis Tenn

Powell last night killed a youthful trespasser, wounded his companion and then fired a fatal shot from ambush at Deputy Sheriff Ed Hartwick, who went to Powell's farm to arrest him. He was captured early today at Ralston, Okla.

But before he was taken to jail Powell whipped an automatic pistol from his clothing, severely wounding Posseman Louis Raba.

Pawnee County's anger flared today as citizens thought of Hartwick's wife and seven children, including twin five-year-old boys. So the admitted killer was spirited to a point undisclosed by officers.

"Meanness" Blamed.

Sheriff Allen Jones, who ascribed Powell's orgy of gunfire to "meanness," said he anticipated no mob trouble.

Asked why he fired from his house, killing Floyd Bell, 18, and wounding Marion Kendall, 20, when they went to his barn to return a chain they had borrowed without permission to pull a horse from a ditch, Powell said:

"They were bothering me."

He said he fired later from ambush, killing Deputy Hartwick, because he thought Hartwick, Sheriff Jones and Undersheriff Lancaster "were a mob."

"I wante dto fight it out," was the way Powell explained the wounding of Posseman Raba, who was preparing to take the farmer into custody from Ralston officers to whom he had surrendered after fleeing his lonely home, six miles away.

Raba and young Kendall probably will recover.

OFFICERS FOIL ANGRY MOB ON LYNCHING BENT

GRANITEVILLE, S. C., May 21.—(ANP)—What seemed to be an inevitable lynching was thwarted here Wednesday when officers successfully eluded a mob inquest of Leroy Jackson and Ernest Jones, two youths arrested in conntction with attempted assault upon a five year-old white girl.

Whip

Following the attack a mob of more than two hundred men and women scoured the country in search of the youths who had been named in the case. Lynching was in the air and hourly the news of the capture and lynching was expected.

5-24-30

Governor Richards ordered the law enforcement officers to do everything in their power to prevent a lynching and augumented the corps, one group keeping tab on the movement of the mob and another searching for the youths. Fortune smiled on the accused and the officers reached their hiding place ahead of the mob bent upon taking their lives.

Chicago Ill

When the news of the arrest reached the city scores of armed men rushed to highways and others milled about the local jail, but the officers sensing the danger of a lynching carried their prisoners to the state prison.

Jackson was charged with attempting the assault and Jones was held as a material witness. The Jackson boy has denied that he was guilty of the attempted assault and has withstood the grilling of the officers.

According to reports here all plans for the lynching had been completed. So certain were the members of the mob that they would capture or wrest the youths from the officers, they had appointed a committee to select the tree from which the youths would be suspended and their bodies riddled with bullets. The tree was near the scene of the alleged attack and several men stood near there awaiting word of the capture. It was a sullen group that made its way from the selected spot when the news reached them that the officers had put ona over on the would-be lynchers and had landed their prisoners safely in the state prison.

EDGEFIELD, S. C. (ANP)—Officers here did not want to take chances with the possibility of a lynching so they carried [illegible] Nicholson, fourteen-year-old boy, to the state prison for safekeeping after the boy confessed that he had attacked a five-year-old white girl.

The attack took place twelve miles from here and the boy was captured a few hours later and brought here. He is alleged to have confessed that he had attempted to assault the child as she had said, and an examination of the child showed that she had been attacked but no serious injuries resulted.

Despite the calmness of the citizens when the report went the rounds that the boy had confessed, the officers decided that it was best to take no chances, therefore carried their prisoner to the state prison at Columbia.

AVOID LYNCHING AT DARLINGTON

Sheriff Rushed to Penitentiary Negro Who Killed Highway Engineer

Threatening prospects that an angry mob would gather to avenge the death of Oscar Britt, 35, white highway employee, caused Sheriff Register of Darlington to hurry the negro held for the murder from the Florence jail at midnight and place him in the state penitentiary before dawn Friday, it became known today.

The agitation had grown less Friday afternoon when Sheriff Register returned three negroes accused of complicity in the murder to the Darlington jail. Fear of a lynching has passed.

All four negroes were placed in the Florence jail Thursday night by deputies of Sheriff Register, who arrested them for the killing of Britt last Sunday night at Lamar. The arrest had been kept secret. Sheriff Register was then in Columbia with persons to be placed in the state hospital.

When Sheriff Register reached the vicinity of the killing late Thursday night, sentiment against the negroes had run high. Definite reports that a lynching mob might gather came to the sheriff.

Seizing James Murray, negro, held for the actual killing, as the prey which the mob would seek, Sheriff Register took him from the Florence jail near midnight, and sped across the country to Columbia. The guard about the remaining three negroes stood alert.

No mob formed when it became known that Murray was not in the Florence jail, and no disorders broke out, it is said.

Sheriff Register awakened J. Austin Latimer, secretary to Governor Richards, about 4 o'clock Friday morning, and procured papers necessary to hold Murray in the penitentiary for safekeeping.

"Sheriff Register declared in seeking the papers that he had heard a mob probably would he formed," Mr. Latimer said Saturday.

Murray was still in the state penitentiary Saturday, held for safekeeping for the Darlington officers.

ARMED FORCE TO TAKE NEGRO TO TRIAL SCENE

Sheriff, Aides Off This Morning for Bolivar.

TROOPS TO STAND GUARD

Officials Anticipate No Trouble in Removal of Prisoner, Charged With Attack on Middleton Tenn., Girl Last Dec. 6.

With 75 guardsmen in Bolivar and a smaller detachment ready to entrain here, the state last night had completed its preparations for the trial of Carey Gunn, 21 negro, who has confessed to the attack of Ada Cornelius, 15, school girl of Middleton, Tenn.

Gunn will be taken from the Shelby County jail this morning under an escort of sheriffs, deputies and guardsmen. The trial opens before Judge Baptist in Bolivar today.

Six officers and 75 enlisted men, under the command of Lieut. Col. R. H. [illegible] were dispatched from Jackson, Tenn., yesterday afternoon. The detachment is composed of 30 men each from the rifle and machine gun companies and 15 from the headquarters company of the Jackson guard unit.

Sheriff Knight in Charge.

Gunn will be taken to Bolivar early this morning by Sheriff Will S. Knight, Sheriff A. W. Neely, of Hardeman County, Deputies Brill Willis and W. H. Key, from Sheriff Knight's office, and Adjt. Gen. W. C. Boyd, Nashville, accompanied by the guardsmen.

Gunn has been in the Shelby County jail since last Dec. 6, when he was brought here for safe keeping following the attack. He is alleged to have confessed to Sheriff Knight shortly after he was brought to Memphis.

The negro attacked Ada while she was on her way home from school, slashing her throat when she screamed. He was arrested a short time later and Sheriff Neely in a wild night ride, eluded a mob to bring the negro to Memphis.

Sheriff Neely and General Boyd came to Memphis last night.

Anticipates No Trouble.

"I don't believe any rioting will occur," Sheriff Neely said, "and sincerely hope that there is no trouble, but we must be prepared for anything in this case.

"Residents of Hardeman County are all my friends and have known me all of my life, and therefore I don't believe that they will attempt violence

"When Gunn was arrested, it would have been impossible to hold him at Bolivar, for they really wanted him at that time."

Guardsmen were ordered out when the trial judge and the negro's attorney presented a petition to Governor Horton

GUARD TENNESSEE JAIL TO PREVENT LYNCHING

Union City, Tenn., Apr.___(By The Associated Negro Press) Fearing that a mob might attempt to lynch Shirley Wright, charged with attacking a fourteen year old white girl, extra guards were thrown around the jail here Saturday night and according to the sheriff will be kept on duty until the prisoner is tried or the feeling against him subsides.

The mother of the girl told police that Wright had entered her daughter's room through a window about three o'clock Friday morning and was about to rape the child when she awoke. Screaming the child ran to her mother's room, and the intruder made his escape but not soon enough to prevent Mrs. Curry, the white woman, from recognizing him.

Wright was arrested Saturday and placed in jail. Feeling was running high against him and there was much talk of lynching the prisoner. Wright is declared to have confessed that he went to the child's room, but denied that he attempted to rape her, or that he intended to molest her or her mother in any fashion. He is also said to have stated that he was drinking at the time.

Wife Of Sheriff Takes Courageous Part

Norfolk Va.

The alleged attack occurred last Wednesday morning and the family of the woman kept the matter quiet, simply telling the sheriff about the affair. In the meantime, a search was made for the youth and it was discovered that he had left town. Saturday the sheriff was advised that Spindle was returning to town and sent two deputies out to meet him. They arrested and rushed him to an adjoining county for safe-keeping.

By this time news of the attack had leaked out and when the report of the capture of the youth was circulated a mob of some one hundred men and women formed and went to the jail in quest of their prey. When they arrived they were met at the jail door by Mrs. Morrow, who told them that Spindle was not there.

To convince them that the youth was not there, she permitted the husband of the alleged victim and another member of the mob to come in the jail for a search, but kept the others on the outside. When the two investigators returned and informed their companions that their victim had been carried away and that they had been outguessed, the mob dispersed.

Sheriff Morrow has been commended for his action by the best citizens here and Mrs. Morrow for her courage in facing the mob of blood-thirsty men and women. It is also reported that McKissack, the husband of the white woman, entreated the mob to let the law take its course and to give the youth a chance before the courts.

According to the woman's statement, Spindle came to her home Wednesday morning and found her lying on the bed. He attempted to assault her but she succeeded in fighting him off. After his unsuccessful attempt he leaped through a window and made his escape. If Spindle has made a statement it has not been made public and neither has his whereabouts been disclosed.

DEALING WITH MOBS.

Down at Beaumont, a negro arrested for a series of atrocious crimes, was being sought by a mob. After they had been dispelled by tear bombs, they came back again, apparently more determined. Then the sheriff dealt the leader a slap in the face. That broke up the mob and they dispersed. No lives were lost and no property destroyed. The negro was tried and given the death sentence within eighteen minutes after the case was given to the jury. He will die in the electric chair and be just as dead as if the mob had stormed the jail and hanged him to a tree. And Texas will be spared the stigma of another lynching. All because a sheriff had the nerve to stand his ground in the face of a raging mob.

There is only one way for an officer to deal with a mob and that is in a firm and decisive manner. Mobs are never sane and deliberate; they are composed of men who permit their passions to run away with their better sense. They follow a leader much as a pack of wolves follows the leader. Once the leader is rebuffed, the mob recoils. It is the herd or mass instinct. Once a large number of men become frenzied with a mad desire to obtain someone for the purpose of wreaking vengeance upon him, they forget reason and common sense and follow anyone who will assume command. Leaderless mobs are rarely dangerous.

Officers can prevent mob action easier than they can stop it after it begins. Let the officers show that they mean business, that they will not tolerate interference in the enforcement of the law, and they will find that the mob will usually withdraw. But a firm stand must be taken at the outset. A leader who could be soundly slapped in the face by one courageous sheriff did not present a very heroic figure for the mob to follow. They withdrew and left the law to take its course, and the cause of justice was fully served. We need more sheriffs of that type in Texas.

A Lynching Prevented

Governor Moody has denied that, at the time of a previous lynching in Texas, he telegraphed the National Guard to hold the Negro if possible, but not to shoot. But even under the terms of such an order, Sheriff W. W. Covington of Beaumont, Texas would seem to have little difficulty in holding his man. Early Sunday morning when a sailor, at the head of a mob of forty, attempted to remove from the Jefferson County Jail a Negro accused of attacking a white woman, Sheriff Covington put an end to the lynching party with a stiff wallop to the sailor's jaw.

The success of this sheriff's attack leads to the suspicion that other lynchings might also have been averted by similar prompt action. Eight Negroes have been lynched this year in the South, and Texas has had more than its share of these outrages. In most of these cases the excuse was that the mob grew beyond the control of the authorities. If that was true, then the excuse becomes a black indictment of governmental methods in the South. If it was not true, and if, in each case, prompt and aggressive action would have saved the prisoner from a mob death, the authorities involved have even more to answer for.

Incompetence in police methods is bad enough, but there can be no defence for indifference to or sympathy with murderous mob instincts.

SALUTE THIS SHERIFF!

Since lynching records for the first six months of 1930 show a gain over 1929, one feels especially impelled to cheer the Sheriff of Beaumont, Texas. Several days ago he broke up single-handed what was intended to be still another lynching party.

Some forty men decided to attack the Jefferson County Jail, remove a Negro accused of attacking a white woman, and lynch him. They were led by a sailor, apparently self-appointed to the job.

At any rate, the mob marched to the jail. There the men met Sheriff W. W. Covington.

Without waiting for any debate, Covington proceeded to sock the sailor on the jaw. The sailor went down.

And the mob took to its heels!

We salute one sheriff who not only is wise in the ways of mob psychology but who has a stout fist to back it up. More sheriffs like him would wipe out the lynching which remains a blot on America's record of justice.

SHERIFF WINS RENOWN

A Texas sheriff won distinction and national renown last week when he slapped the leader of an embryo mob on the jaw, and with the one blow dispersed a lynching party.

Earlier in the evening a considerable crowd had gathered about the jail, the most of them probably merely curious to see what was going on. The sheriff, however, was ready for action, having armed deputies stationed at strategic points. Around midnight most of the crowd left the scene but one young buck, perhaps under the influence of mean liquor, rallied about 50 kindred spirits about him and was trying to induce them to make a rush with him on the jail. The sheriff walked up and landed a blow on the face of the leader that made him see stars, and the entire crowd, including the ambitious hero, fled into the darkness. The lynching party was over for good, and the chances are that there will never be another threat of lynching when that particular sheriff holds the prisoner.

The mob spirit is essentially one of cowardice, and those who form mobs are cowards, else they would not gang together for their violations of the law. In most cases they are whipped from the start when a determined officer of the law faces them. It is only as the officer shows weakness, or possibly sympathy with them, that the mobs gather courage to commit their crimes.

The Texas sheriff has pointed the way for other officers threatened with mob action. A sock on the jaw and the outbreak is over and the special deputies and the military, if it has been called out, can go home.

NO LYNCHING AT BEAUMONT

([illegible] News)

There was no lynching bee at Beaumont, Texas, the other night when a mob surrounded the Jefferson county jail and demanded that a Negro attacker be delivered into its hands for them to wreak their vengeance upon in the usual way. And why was there no lynching at Beaumont and why was Jefferson county's record not stained by another mob murder? The answer is Sheriff W. W. Covington. For once a Texas mob met a real man and knew its master. The state of Texas in general and the people of Beaumont in particular have reasons to be thankful that they have a man of courage and not a pusillanimous coward for sheriff. This newspaper has always contended and still contends that if the sworn officers did their duty lynchings in the south would be as scarce as in other sections of the country. It is the restraining influence of courageous officers rather than any particular virtues of the people of the north or east that they have fewer mob murders than the south.

Mob psychology is the same there as here and if it dared would kill exactly as they do in Texas or Georgia.

Now that it has been demonstrated that lynching murders can be prevented when officers rise to their obligations to the state, it is to be hoped that they will be fewer henceforth than in the past. When public sentiment holds the sheriff and other peace officers of a county or city to a strict personal responsibility for mob violence against human beings committed to their care until the court and jury in orderly fashion pass sentence upon them, mobbings will become as rare as burning people for witchcraft. Everyone knows that the mob is at heart cowardly. Conscience makes cowards of us all, we are told, and no intelligent man ever joins in such outlawry who is not conscious that he is in a rebellion against his state and is committing a heinous outrage against the commonwealth for which he should atone with his life. Let the mob meet a Covington and it slinks away into the dark like a whipped cur.

One cannot help contrasting the Beaumont incident with others in Texas recently and what a striking contrast it is to be sure. In one other instance the lynchers were allowed to carry out their nefarious orgy of murder as though one crime gave them license to commit another, apply the torch to their own temple of justice and mock the authority of the state as though it was the decent thing to do, all because there was no one to say them nay. But the example of Seriff Covington and his associates will show the timid officers in all the states that the mob can be restrained without bloodshed with the right kind of men in authority. Jefferson county should place its sheriff in its hall of fame and give him a special place in their hearts. He merits the highest reward for his courage and his valor. His act has gone far toward redeeming the fair name of the Lone Star State. May others profit by his example.

MOB FEARED IN RACE CLASH

Texas Sheriff May Need Aid to Save Negro Who Slew Woman

SHAMROCK, Texas, July 14 (U P).—Sheriff W. K. McLemore, who for three days has successfully defended the Negro [illegible] from threatening [illegible] said to-day he might be forced to call upon State Rangers for support.

A report reached the sheriff during the night that a mob was moving on Shamrock from across the Oklahoma border to burn the Negroes' houses, from which most of the inhabitants already had fled.

The mob actions began last Friday when Jesse Lee, a Shamrock Negro, who is believed demented, attacked and beat to death a white woman, Mrs. Henry Vaughan, 25, in her farm home near the State line.

McLemore found the Negro and escaped with him through angry groups of Shamrock citizens. He left Lee in a reformatory at Granite, Okla., for safe keeping.

Texas Mob Of 200 Disbands When Armed Officers Threaten To Shoot

Montgomery, Ala

SHAMROCK, TEXAS, July 13.—(AP)—A mob of approximately 200 men which formed last night, apparently bent on making reprisals against the negro population of the town for the slaying Friday of a white woman by a negro, disbanded after armed officers and citizens mustered by the sheriff threatened to shoot if the gathering did not disperse.

Tonight Sheriff W. K. Molemore said Wheeler County authorities were in command of the situation which developed after a negro had beaten to death Mrs. Henry Vaughan, white, with an iron bar Friday.

Jesse Washington, the negro accused of the slaying, is in the state reformatory at Granite, Okla., where he was taken hurriedly yesterday to forestall a threatened lynching here.

Most of the hundred or so negroes had left town before the mob formed last night after notices were posted about the negro section ordering them to "move out before sundown."

The mob went to the negro section threatening to burn houses occupied by negroes and to run out of town those negroes remaining here, but the sheriff's men stood in front of the houses with guns drawn and in some cases shoved back the bolder of the invaders. Faced with such stern resistance, the mob soon dispersed.

BY WAY OF GLORIFICATION.

This is written in glorification of a group of courageous Texas officers and their ingenious use of a rumble seat.

Texas, following several lynchings in which the outrage at Sherman, where a negro was strung up after the courthouse, where he had been locked in the vault, had been burned and the mob continued to spread destruction through application of the torch to more than a block of property owned by negroes, should welcome any action which will tend to offset its debit entries in the record books of law and order.

Officers, fully cognizant of their duty and their responsibility, have just removed part of the stigma recently placed upon their state by successfully fighting off a mob at Port Arthur. When a mob attempted to seize a negro, charged with attacks upon eight white women, the attack was fought off by officers, who fired shots into the air and tossed tear gas bombs into the milling mobsters.

As the crowd, which virtually had the negro in its hands, relinquished its grip under the officers' counter attack, the authorities pushed the black into the rumble seat of the fire chief's automobile, closed its protecting cover down upon him, and sped through the would-be lynchers to the jail at Beaumont, 22 miles away, where the prisoner was safely incarcerated. A few cars attempted to follow the machine, but the 22-miles-in-15 minutes pace set by the speeding fire chief soon outdistanced them and ended the imminent danger of another bloodstain upon Texas' already badly spotted record.

Three hurrahs and a tiger are in order for officers who fought off a mob which was manifestly bent on violence, a fire chief who has qualified as a Barney Oldfield and a rumble seat which was put to a most acceptable usage.

SALUTE THIS SHERIFF!

Since lynching records for the first six months of 1930 show a gain over 1929, one feels especially impelled to cheer the Sheriff of Beaumont, Texas. Several days ago he broke up single-handed what was intended to be still another lynching party.

Some forty men decided to attack the Jefferson County Jail, remove a Negro accused of attacking a white woman, and lynch him. They were led by a sailor, apparently self-appointed to the job.

At any rate, the mob marched to the jail. There the men met Sheriff W. W. Covington.

Without waiting for any debate, Covington proceeded to sock the sailor on the jaw. The sailor went down.

And the mob took to its heels!

We salute one sheriff who not only is wise in the ways of mob psychology but who has a stout fist to back it up. More sheriffs like him would wipe out the lynching which remains a blot on America's record of justice.

RANGERS SPEEDED IN TEXAS RACE WAR

Rushed to Shield Negroes From Mobs Threatening Reprisals for Oklahoma Killing

STATE GUARDS CAPTIVE

SHAMROCK, Tex., July 14 (AP).—Texas Rangers were en route to Shamrock from Austin today to prevent further action of mobs which have terrorized Negroes here and driven them in a body from Erick, Okla., as reprisals for the slaying of Mrs. Henry Vaughan by a Negro farmhand.

Four Rangers were ordered to Shamrock upon request to Governor Dan Moody by Sheriff W. K. McLemore who described the situation as threatening.

Several hundred men invaded the Negro quarters here Saturday night threatening to burn the homes of Negroes who had not heeded a posted warning to leave. Sheriff McLemore, with a corps of deputies, dispersed the mob, threatening to shoot any one attempting to fire the Negroes' cottages.

Peace officers at the nearby town of Erick, Okla., former home of Mrs. Vaughan, said a mob of similar size had driven every Negro from the town.

Jesse Lee Washington, Negro accused of having slain Mrs. Vaughan, wife of his employer, with an iron pipe, is reported in the Oklahoma State Reformatory at Granite. Peace officers hurried him away from the Vaughan farm after the slaying Friday with a mob pursuing in automobiles.

J. Berry King, Oklahoma's attorney general, has arranged a conference with authorities at Erick to determine if the State should take action against the leaders of the mob there.

A FEEBLE-MINDED NEGRO has been accused of attacking and murdering a white woman at her farm near Shamrock, Texas. The woman had formerly lived in Erick, across the Oklahoma border. When news of the murder reached Erick rioting followed in which a mob of white men drove out all the Negro inhabitants of the town and its vicinity. Nearly 300 have been rendered homeless, their property confiscated or destroyed. At Shamrock, Texas, threats against the Negro population were successfully forestalled by the firm policy of Sheriff McLemore, who, with only 12 deputies, faced a mob of 300 bent on mischief in the Negro quarter and told them that he would not move from their path even if it meant bloodshed. The accused Negro was saved from mob violence by the quick action of Sheriff McKinney, of Collingsworth County, who hurried him away to safekeeping in the first place, and later, with the aid of four Texas rangers, outwitted two bands of would-be lynchers and lodged him safe in jail at Pampa, Texas. Meanwhile, at Erick, a few citizens applied for federal aid, and United States Attorney Roy St. Lewis has issued warrants for twenty-three persons—some of them deputy sheriffs and other officials—under a statute that gives the federal government the right to prosecute where two or more persons band together to deprive citizens of the free exercise of their rights under the Constitution. Conviction under the statute carries a fine of $5,000, a sentence of ten years, and deprivation of the right to hold office. We commend Mr. Lewis's action to the notice of Senator Cole Blease, who is quoted as saying in a recent speech: "Whenever the Constitution comes between me and the virtue of the white women of South Carolina, I say 'To hell with the Constitution.'"

BROWNWOOD, Texas, May 16.—(UP)—Joe Shields, 3[illegible], arrested at Coleman after the triple slaying of his [illegible] wife and her parents, was spirited away tonight from the Brown County jail when officers learned that a mob was forming at Brooksmith, 15 miles southwest.

Officers refused to divulge their destination fearing the mob would storm the jail and lynch Shields.

Shields shot his wife today when she refused him permission to see their three small children, Sheriff W. H. Denman, said.

Alarmed by the shooting the woman's father, J. B. Shields, Brooksville merchant, approached his son-in-law. Without warning the younger man is alleged to have fatally wounded him. Later he killed his mother-in-law.

Posses who followed Shield's automobile captured him near Brooksmith after a running fight.

Lynching Averted With Moving of Texas Black

GRANDBURY, Texas, May 22.—(UP)—Quiet had been restored here Thursday after a negro who assaulted a white man was spirited away to a Fort Worth jail to prevent threatened mob violence close in the wake of two lynchings and burning of negroes' bodies in Texas.

The negro was said to have attacked Claude Wallace, clerk, when the latter refused him credit for a can of tobacco. The clerk sustained lacerations about the head and neck, and quick intervention of bystanders was believed to have saved him from more serious injuries.

Feeling was high, and at 10 p. m. Wednesday a mob formed in front of the jail, only to disperse when assured by officers that the negro had been removed.

BEAUMONT, Texas, June 29—(AP)—A hefty slap on the jaw, delivered by a robust and stout-hearted sheriff broke up an embryo lynching party here early today.

The wallop was landed by Sheriff W. W. Covington on a sailor who had appointed himself leader of about 40 men, remnant of a mob of 200 which had milled about the Jefferson county jail during the early hours of this morning. The blow sent the sailor and his "mobsmen" retreating in confusion, abandoning their attempt to remove from the jail a Negro accused of attacking a white woman.

Tonight all was quiet and authorities did not anticipate additional trouble.

The Negro, Rainey Williams, was rushed to the jail here yesterday from Port Arthur, 22 miles South, where the alleged attack took place.

For hours Sheriff Covington had armed men on guard outside the jail and within had picked sides, each with rifle and pistol, to beat off any attempt at mob violence. Covington had tear bombs ready, machine guns were set up, the police worked steadily to keep the crowd back from the jail and the fire department was prepared to put water hose in play.

After surging about, whispering, consulting and shouting "we want that Negro", the crowd began to melt away at 2 a. m., the hour which reports had said would bring an attack, and by 3:30 only about 40 men were left. These withdrew, leaderless, to a dock, where they sat, cursing Williams. A number suggested getting a rope, but newspapermen were closely watching so nobody made a definite move.

A sailor finally constituted himself the leader and was talking to his comrades about breaking in jail when Sheriff Covington accompanied by a number of deputies, arrived at the dock.

The sheriff a stout man, slapped the sailor, and he and his followers fled helter-skelter. They obtained their automobiles [illegible] those who had them — and quickly left the scene. Fifteen minutes later the jail yard and the immediate area about it was deserted, except for officers and reporters.

The slap had cured a situation which a few hours before had been of the gravest nature.

Williams, indicted six times by the Jefferson county grand jury, will be brought to trial Wednesday on one bill—that charging criminal assault on a Negress on May 3.

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, June 27 (AP).—A mob of 200 persons failed in an attempt today to lynch Rainey Williams, 38-year-old Negro, who had confessed to eight attacks upon white women within thirty days.

New York N.Y.

While officers fought off the mob gathered around the City Hall, where Williams was in jail, Chief of Police M. B. Word succeeded in sliding the Negro down the pole of the fire station in the building. Williams was placed in the rumble seat of Fire Chief Enright's car and the lid was closed. The motor of the fire chief's speedster was running and the car roared out of the station, headed for Beaumont.

The mob made a rush for the car and had succeeded in opening the rumble seat and partly dragging the Negro out when an officer fired two tear-gas bombs into the crowd and drove it back.

Two cars bearing members of the mob followed the fire chief's car, but only for a short distance.

Word from Beaumont at 11:30 A. M. said that the Negro had been safely lodged in the county jail there. The trip to Beaumont, twenty-two miles from here, was made in fifteen minutes.

Williams was arrested last night after a twenty-four-hour hunt for the attacker of a young white couple Wednesday night.

After he had confessed, an angry mob began milling about the City Hall this morning, discussing methods of seizing the Negro.

Police Chief Word and his officers barricaded themselves in the jail with shotguns and tear-gas bombs before effecting the ruse by which the Negro was rushed out of the city.

Tear gas bombs hurled into the crowd milling about the City Hall here caused members of the mob to relinquish their grips on the prisoner and allowed the car to speed out of town. Officers fired several shots into the air.

A few in the crowd attemptetd to follow the machine but gave up the chase a few miles from Port Arthur. Williams was placed in the Beaumont prison without further trouble. A few minutes after officers managed to get the negro out of town the crowd dispersed.

Williams was arrested after the eight women had been attacked on a highway near an oil refinery over a period of [illegible] days. The last attack occurred last Wednesday night.

After Williams had been lodged in the Beaumont jail a grand jury was called to investigate the crimes.

HOW TO STOP A LYNCHING

WHEN a stout-hearted Sheriff routed a mob of forty persons preparing to storm the jail at Beaumont, Tex., by walloping their leader on the jaw, he proved that lynchings can be prevented. That proof is further bolstered by the fact that similar mobs were routed last week in Texas and North Carolina by display of force by the authorities.

All too frequently in the past, over-cautious officials have played into the hands of mob movement by failing to take decisive action before the excitement of a crowd besieging a jail had reached its frantic peak. Such demonstrations are nearly always led by hot-headed braggarts whose leadership depends on an eager following. Action at the proper time can usually break the back of such uprisings.

A few more hard-fisted Sheriffs with the iron will to prevent lynchings would do much to wipe that blot off the scutcheon of American justice.

BLOODY TEXANS OUTWITTED TWICE

Machine Guns Are Mounted By Rangers; Ready with Hand Grenades

SHAMROCK, Tex. — (ANP) — The only reason Texas did not record another lynching this week was that Sheriff Claude McKinney outwitted and outran mobs bent on adding another lynching to Texas's already too large a list.

Jesse Lee Washington was arrested charged with the slaying of a white woman, near here Friday. He was rushed to Childress for safe-keeping but after a few minutes of his arrival there, the assembling of a mob showed officers that he would not be safe in that jail and plans were made to move him again.

The mob, too, was making plans for another celebration and the members were working fast. While they were engaged in inflamatory speeches, the sheriff placed his prisoner in a car and passed through the mob.

It was not sensed by the blood-thirsty and savage group that they had been outwitted, until the sheriff and his prisoner were several miles away. When they realized that their prey was being taken away they set out in pursuit, but the sheriff's car proved faster than any driven by the mobbists, and he beat them across the state line into Oklahoma, where his prisoner was placed in the state Reformatory, in charge of a woman warden, Mrs. George A. Waters.

The second mob was outwitted by McKinney when Washington was taken from Granite, Okla., to Pampa, Texas, on Wednesday and lodged in the Gray county jail.

Four Texas rangers at Shamrock had permitted a report that the prisoner was to be brought there to be circulated. They said they were going to an unknown destination to get Washington. While the men who wanted to do violence to the Negro followed the rangers, Sheriff McKinney was racing to Pampa with the prisoner.

The rangers arrived here almost at the same time that Sheriff McKinney lodged Washington in jail. M. T. Gonzaullus, ranger sergeant, said the prisoner would be protected at "all costs" and would be guarded day and night.

The rangers brought two machine guns, 10,000 rounds of ammunition, 100 hand gas grenades and many small arms.

Special Court Term

Judge W. R. Ewing convened a special term of district court at Wheeler and called the grand jury to meet Wednesday to consider Washington's case. He said when an indictment is returned he would transfer the trial on a change of venue to Miami and set the case for July 28.

Not According To Convention

We suppose there are some residents of Texas who feel that the Lone Star state has been humiliated by a disregard of local conventions in the disposition of a black man charged with criminal assault. In this case the accused, thanks to a courageous sheriff, was given the right of a regular trial, was convicted and sentenced to death under the laws of Texas.

This was an unusual procedure as it would have been in most southern states. It must be admitted that it was not quite recherche, quite in line with prevailing practice. There were omitted many time-honored details, such as the blazing pyre where the condemned or suspected is roasted the while his agonizing screams are mingled with the howls of the mob. There was no rope at the end of which the wretch was dragged to a telephone pole from whose arms his suspended body was riddled with bullets. There was missing all the paraphernalia which belong to a perfect public holiday.

In a few weeks this negro will be brought out some morning shaking with fear and dread, and in the presence of a small group of men will be seated in an electric chair into which he will be securely strapped. An unseen switch will be thrown; there will be a creaking of the straps as the body will be thrown against them and the law will have been avenged.

The crime of which this man was guilty was committed at Port Arthur where he was arrested. Before a mob could be collected he was hurried to Beaumont where shortly afterward a hundred Port Arthur automobiles arrived filled with men and women demanding the prisoner. The mob had the forethought to fetch a rope and such other impedimenta as mobs on such occasions believe to be indispensable. Some members of the mob were armed. They met an armed sheriff and saw something in his eye that told them that he was prepared to sacrifice human life. After the manner of mobs in such circumstances this one, in the faces of its women who were seated in the automobiles urging their men to go forward, turned tails and drove back to Port Arthur.

Much more important than the saving of that negro from the mob was the triumph in Beaumont of the law, upheld by a single, courageous man against a horde of cowards.

A LYNCHING THAT FAILED

Of the nine lynchings which have blackened the record[illegible] six months of 1930, three occurred on Texas soil. There would have been another there just as the period closed but for W. W. Covington, sheriff of Jefferson county, who showed peace officers of the state how to stop murders by mobs. In the period, another Southern state had two killings of this nature and four others had one each; the lesson impressed by Sheriff Covington has application for these and for all others in which mob violence is likely to exhibit itself. This sheriff had courage. That tells the story. Faced by the mob, he was not frightened by its clamor. Instead, he slapped the ringleader and the spirit and purpose of the crowd collapsed. The hoodlums—some of them, possibly, respectable citizens in their milder moments—disappeared and the imprisoned object of their anger was safe. Never has the mob the asse' of fortitude. Its strength lies in numbers alone. Like the wolf pack of the wilderness, it has power only so long as it is permitted to yelp unmolested. The false bravery of the rioters is dissipated when a man or men possessing a little real courage confronts them.—Pittsburgh [illegible]at-Gazette.

AVERTING A LYNCHING

Brewing of mob violence was in progress at Arlington, Texas, early Sunday, after a youthful night watchman had been slain by a negro whom he sought to arrest. Two hundred angered citizens had gathered, evidently with the intention of avenging the young man's death in case his slayer could be caught.

Possibility of violence, however, was dissipated when the aged father of the dead man, an aged retired minister, appeared and made an appeal for law and order, declaring that he was more concerned than any of the others and that it was his desire that justice should be rendered by the orderly processes of the law.

Quieted by the eloquence of the gray-haired father, who placed the good name of Texas above his own personal sorrow, the crowd divided into small parties to assist the authorities in the apprehension of the negro, who was caught and placed in the Tarrant County jail at Fort Worth.

This bereaved father rendered his state a distinct service by convincing the crowd of men that one crime does not justify the commission of another, and that justice through court action is better than anything that could come by unlawful mob action.—Texarkana Gazette.

ESCAPES ANGRY MOB BENT ON LYNCHING HIM

Surrenders Secretly To Sheriff As 400 Whites Hunt Him With Dogs

GLOUCHESTER, Va., Dec. 31. — John Fields, suspected of the shooting of Christian Hogg, white, owner of a highway filling station, surrendered secret to the sheriff of the county and was spirited away to saftey in an out of town jail while a blood-thirsty mob of over 400 white men and boys scoured the woods and swamps nearby using bloodhounds to follow the trail, armed to the teeth, hunting down Fields for the purpose of lynching him

1-4-31

Hogg was shot down in front of the counter of his store and was perhaps fatally wounded As Felds was the last person seen in the store, he was accused of the crime, and a self-appointed posse collected and undertook to hunt him out.

Eludes Mob and Dogs

Fields, who spent the night at his mother's home, was routed out of bed by a friend and warned of the approaching mob. He ascaped from the house, ran through the woods, and waded down a creek to throw the dogs off of the scent. He then went into hiding in a neighbor's barn, and sent private word to the sheriff that he was ready to surrender if he would be taken to safety. Three officials came to the barn placed Fields under arrest, and spirited him out of the county.

Fields denied all guilt in connection with the crime, and as Hogg is in a critical condition he is unable to give the officers any information bearing upon his shooting.

Negro Attacks White Woman

Lonzo Williams Arrested After Alleged Assault

Lonzo Williams, a negro, is being held at the County Jail under a blanket charge of suspicion following his arrest last night in connection with an assault upon a young white woman near the Forest Avenue Methodist Church in Oak Park about 6:30 p.m. yesterday.

Police said the woman left a street car near the church and started walking home when the negro man who is thought to have been Williams seized her by the throat and dragged her into an alley between the main auditorium and the Sunday School rooms of the church.

The negro beat the woman over the head several times after having pulled her into the darkness and strangled her severely. Advertiser

A small boy heard the woman's screams and summoned aid. The negro fled as three men approached the alley, but he was captured later about a mile from the scene of the alleged assault. Bloodhounds from Kilby Prison were brought to the church and aided in the hunt for the negro. 2/9/30

A woman who is said to have witnessed the attack from her home near the alley partially identified the negro at the jail last night. The victim of the attack has been unable to attempt to identify the negro because of her nervous condition police said last night. Montgomery

Residents of the neighborhood where the assault occurred said that Williams has been seen near the church frequently of late, according to police. He is an ex-soldier and is thought to receive $75 a month from the Government. Ala.

Police Captains Murrell and Young and Motorscouts Deese and Mainer investigated the assault last night. They said last night that it is believed the assaulted woman will be able to view the negro today.

GENEVA, ALA., March 6.—(AP)—Walter Wood, 18-year-old negro, was in the Geneva Cunty Jail here today awaiting preliminary trial on charges that he criminally assaulted a five-year-old daughter of a farm tenant near Slocomb. The alleged attack occurred Sunday afternoon and the negro was arrested late yesterday. Advertiser 3-7-30

The attack occurred, officers said, when the girl and her small brother paid a visit to neighbors. Only the negro, who was employed as chore boy, was at the house when they arrived. The attack occurred, the officers said, after the boy had been lured away from his sister. Montgomery Ala.

Geneva County officers said no threats of violence against the negro followed his arrest.

Mose Daniels Tells How He Accomplished Ends In Decatur Street Attack

Mose Daniels, 19-year-old negro, confessed assailant of two Montgomery white women, who is being held in Kilby Prison pending Grand Jury investigation, revealed to officers the details of the alleged attacks when questioned in his cell Wednesday afternoon. Sheriff John L. Scogin, with Deputies Sam Stearns and Addie Moseley, and Frank Boswell, deputy warden at Kilby, examined the negro, obtaining several new facts concerning the attacks, they said. Advertiser 3/14/30 Montgomery Ala.

Telling how he struck a young women on North Decatur Street several weeks ago and dragged her behind the Scottish Rite Temple, Daniels asked the officers to forget his previous story concerning this, as he was now telling "the truth."

Daniels faces two charges, one of attempt to commit a criminal assault, and one of committing a criminal assault. He has not employed counsel and no preliminary hearing has been set.

WOMAN FAILS TO IDENTIFY SUSPECT

Negro Under Suspicion Of Being Assailant Still Being Held

The young woman who was attacked by a negro Saturday evening near the Forest Avenue Methodist Church yesterday failed to identify Lonzo Williams, negro suspect held in the county jail, as her assailant. Advertiser

The woman faced about six negroes who were lined up in the county jail and was asked to pick the negro which most nearly resembled the negro who attacked her. She picked a negro standing next to Williams, of almost the same height but of different color and weight.

The woman, however, was not sure she could identify the negro when questioned by police. The negro seized her from behind, she said, and choked her as she fought him. Montgomery Ala.

Williams, however, was identified by two women and one man as having been in the neighborhood about the hour the attack was reported. At one house the negro asked for some bread and was denied the food by the woman who answered the door. At another house a woman and her brother answered the door and the negro asked if there was any work he could do. 2/10/30

When identified Williams first denied that he was in the neighborhood but later admitted that he called at both houses and asked for food and work. He denied all knowledge of the crime, however. Williams is still held.

Attack Inquiry Off Until May

Special Grand Jury On Assaults Unlikely

In view of the fact that the Montgomery County Grand Jury will convene regularly on the third Monday in May, a special panel is not likely to be summoned to investigate the case of Mose Daniels, negro, now in Kilby Prison, who is said to have confessed to two attacks upon white women here during the past three weeks. This was indicated in a statement by Circuit Judge Leon McCord late yesterday afternoon following a conference between the judge, Sheriff John L. Scogin and Solicitor W. T. Seibels. Advertiser 3/11/30 Montgomery Ala.

Daniels, who was arrested Sunday afternoon by City Detectives A. A. Enzor and W. A. Davis at his home after he was said to have attacked a middle-aged woman on Hood Street near Plum about 12:30 p.m., was sent to Kilby for safekeeping. When examined there Monday morning by Chief of Detectives Paul Rapport and Davis and Enzor, the negro is said to have confessed to the attack.

Later in the day the negro admitted to Chief Sheriff's Deputy Sam Stearns, Frank Boswell, deputy warden of Kilby Prison and H. H. Jones, his employer, that he had criminally assaulted a young white woman on North Decatur Street two weeks ago, Mr. Stearns said. Martin Maryland, 24, negro, was acquitted of this crime less than two weeks ago in Circuit Court.

A warrant charging attempt to commit a criminal assault was sworn out for Daniels by a police officer before Lieut. F. A. Beasley yesterday morning, following the attack Sunday. Another warrant charging criminal assault, growing out of the attack on North Decatur Street, was signed by Chief Deputy Sam Stearns in the Court of Common Pleas late yesterday.

A negro convict, employed at the Capitol, identified Daniels as the negro who ran past him the night of the alleged assault on North Decatur Street, officers said. Several young boys who are said to have pursued Daniels to his home after the alleged attack Sunday on Hood Street were taken to Kilby Prison and identified the negro, according to officers.

Daniels was employed at the Jones and Holt store on Forest Avenue near Highland Avenue and Mr. Jones took an active part in obtaining Daniels confession, it was said.

The negro's case probably will be brought before the Grand Jury which meets May 19 and if indicted will be tried the following week at the criminal call of court.

WOMAN'S ATTACKER IS GIVEN 15 YEARS

Negro Pleads Guilty To Robbery Attempt Before Judge McCord

Alonza Williams, negro, alleged to have assaulted a young white woman Saturday night near the Forest Avenue Methodist Church, was sentenced to from 15 to 20 years in the penitentiary for assault to rob by Judge Leon McCord yesterday, after the negro had entered a plea of guilty. Williams was indicted by a special Grand Jury which convened at noon yesterday, and was arraigned with 48 other defendants before Judge Leon McCord. Advertiser

The negro told Judge McCord that his motive in attacking the woman was robbery. He said that he was hungry and hoped to obtain some money from her. Questioning brought out that Williams was an ex-soldier who served in France and was drawing a monthly pension from the Government. It was said that he confessed to the assault before being brought before the Grand Jury yesterday morning. 2/11/30 Montgomery

Pleas of not guilty were entered by Edward C. Carlisle alias Jack Davis, James H. Jones alias William Davis and Thomas L. Andrews alias John C. Smith, all three of whom were also indicted by the special Grand Jury yesterday on charges of having attempted to rob the grocery store of W. M. Bell at Buford Street and Mt. Meigs Road. Their trials will be first on the docket Thursday morning before Judge McCord. Montgomery police identified these three men as deserted soldiers from Fort Ringold, Texas, who were wanted for desertion, theft of government property, and transporting a stolen automobile. The Packard automobile in which they were riding at the time of their arrest Friday night was said to have been stolen from a man in McAllen, Texas, and there was a reward of $100 for its recovery.

Marvin Boyd and R. M. Wells, whom police said they caught redhanded blowing the safe of the Empire Laundry early Friday morning, also pleaded not guilty to charges of burglary before Judge Leon McCord, who set the cases for Thursday against protest of defense counsel.

Three white men and four negroes pleaded guilty and were sentenced by Judge McCord. R. L. Pippin, former railroad conductor, charged with forging a check on the L. & N. Railroad, was committed to the penitentiary for a term of from two and a half to three years. Mike Mahoney received from three to four years for the theft of an automobile, while Edward Stokes got from four to five years for the same offense. Allen Evans, negro, was sentenced to from two to three years for larceny and Sam Goodman, also charged with larceny, received from 15 to 24 months in one case and from 15 to 18 months in another.

Theodore Brown, negro, who was indicted last week after City Officers Mainer and Dees had worked up two cases of bicycle stealing against him, pleaded not guilty and will come to trial during the present session of court.

Out of the 48 defendants arraigned, only three were for violation of the prohibition laws. Grand larceny led with 28 accused, while the others were burglary, assault to murder, violating narcotic act and assault to rob.

Appeal cases from City Court totaling 48 were disposed of by the court during the morning, there being $213 in fines assessed. It is expected that trials of cases will continue through the week of Feb. 24, court officials said.

Negro Bound Over On Girl's Charge

Adam Ballard, negro, charged with attempted criminal assault upon a young white girl on the Selma Road, 12 miles out, was bound over to the Montgomery County Grand Jury at a preliminary hearing before Judge Winter Thorington Friday in the Court of Common Pleas. His bond was fixed at $2,000 and the prisoner was remanded to the county jail. Montgomery Ala.

The negro is alleged to have attacked a 16-year-old white girl as she and her little sister were walking through a garden several days ago near Gunter Hill. Although the negro is said to have confessed to officers, he denied at the hearing that he attempted to attack the [illegible]l.

Negro Held At Kilby For Attack Attempt On White Woman Sunday

A third attack on a white woman by a negro within the last two months, occurred yesterday at 12:30 p.m. on Hood Street between Plum and Highland Avenue when a negro stepped from an alley seized the woman from behind and attempted to drag her into the alley.

Despite the negro's clutch about the woman's throat, she screamed the instant she realized what had occurred, and the negro, frightened by her scream and a group of young boys nearby who rushed to the rescue, fled down the alley to Palmetto Street, and thence to the Central of Georgia Railroad tracks. The group of boys, about eight or ten in all, chased the negro, whom they recognized, they told police, as being a porter employed by a neighborhood grocery and market.

A negro porter, Mose Daniel, 19, was arrested about 30 minutes after the attack occurred and will be charged with attempt to commit a criminal assault, Capt. Troy Murrell announced last night. The arrest was made by Detectives W. A. Davis and A. A. Enzo. The negro, when arrested was at his home in bed on Washington Street. He denied any knowledge of the crime.

The negro was taken to Kilby Prison, where he was identified by six of the boys who chased him and who declared they had known the negro for a long time. Those who identified the negro are: Milton Barrow, 13, 28 Plum Street; Lawrence Cumbrie, 12, 118 Plum Street; Cleo Holladay, 12, 907 Highland Avenue; Roy Chumley, 11, 3 Cherry Street; Binford Barron, 13, 210 Plum Street and Louie Barrow, 12, 28 Plum Street.

Among others who chased the negro are Glenn Price, 121 Buford Street and Frank Gordon, 203 Arthur Street.

Price told police that they chased the negro to the Central of Georgia Railroad and that the negro sat down on the track to rest. When he saw the boys approach he resumed his flight and they lost sight of him a few minutes later.

The victim is a woman of near middle age and lives within a short distance of where the assault occurred. She told an Advertiser representative that she saw the negro standing between two garages on the east side of Hood Street. She was en route home from church at the time. She paid no attention to the negro and in the fleeting glimpse she gave him she noted only that his coat was lighter than his trousers.

Within a moment after she had passed the spot the negro seized her by the throat from behind and she screamed. The negro held her for a brief time, not more than a minute, she said, but she could not see him. She did not lose her balance until the negro, who became frightened, released her. Her throat bore several fingernail scratches.

Police were told that a few minutes before the attack occurred the negro had attempted to assault a negro cook employed by John H. Cooper, who lives within the same block on Plum Street but the cook repulsed the attack.

The negro was also seen standing in the alley by another white woman who passed the spot about a minute before the attack. She was accompanied by a small boy, however, and was unharmed.

The other two instances in which white women were attacked occurred recently when one woman was criminally assaulted at night near the Scottish Rite Temple on North Decatur Street, and the attack on a woman at night near the Forest Avenue Methodist Church. A negro subsequently confessed to the crime at the Forest Avenue Church, was convicted and died a few days later in prison. A negro was also arrested for the crime on North Decatur Street, but was exonerated by a jury.

Negro Saved From Troy Mob Called Insane

Robert Giles, negro, whose attempt to assault a young white girl in her home at Troy, Tuesday evening, was frustrated when the screaming of his intended victim summoned immediate rescue, was brought to Montgomery early yesterday and committed to Kilby Prison shortly after 3 a.m. He will remain there until his arraignment.

Advertiser

Giles was brought here by automobile, through the country, by National Guard Troops and State Law Enforcement officers, the transfer being made some time after the angry and threatening crowd which gathered about the Pike County Jail following the attempted attack, had gradually dispersed.

4-3-30

Troops accompanying the prisoner here consisted of several squads from Battery F, 117th Field Artillery, of Troy, commanded by Capt. John F. Harmon. State officers cooperating in the transfer were W. J. Linch, N. W. Kimbrough, E. P. Smith, O. F. Baker and J. I. Shores.

The negro, Giles, is said to be demented, and was a former inmate of the State asylum for the insane at Mount Vernon. Whether he escaped from there, or was discharged as cured, could not be definitely learned.

It was reported here that Giles has been acting strangely for a week or more; that he had been employed by a farmer living near Troy to cut some bushes from a field, and that his employer found him some time later cutting brush and weeds in a deep ditch. He was unable to get a satisfactory statement from the negro as to why he had not carried out instructions, Giles insisting he was in the ditch by Divine guidance and command, it was stated.

Montgomery Ala

When the negro was led into Kilby Penitentiary, it is said, he removed his hat, looked about him scratching his head in a puzzled way, and then suddenly broke into peals of maniacal laughter.

Eight State Officers Go To Sheriff's Aid

Following receipt of information last night that a large crowd was assembled before the Pike County Jail, at Troy, and that threats had been made to storm the jail to obtain Robert Giles, negro, who is alleged to have attempted to assault a young white woman at Troy late yesterday afternoon, Gov. Graves last night called out Battery F., 115th Field Artillery, of the Alabama National Guard, which is stationed at Troy.

Sheriff Alva Galloway, of Pike County, said in a long distance conversation with The Advertiser that feeling was running high in Troy and that a large number of men were assembled outside the jail. Threats to lynch the negro were common, Sheriff Galloway said.

Montgomery Ala

Giles is said to have entered the home of a 17-year-old girl about [illegible]:30 p.m., yesterday. He entered the room in which the girl was sitting, the sheriff said, and attempted to attack her. The girl screamed when the negro grabbed her, according to Sheriff Galloway.

A neighbor who heard the young girl's screams is said to have run across the street and entered the house, and the negro fled. He was arrested a few minutes later and placed in the Pike County Jail.

News of the attempted assault spread rapidly and a large crowd quickly gathered at the jail. The threats continued to increase and permission to call out the militia was asked of Gov. Graves.

Late last night Battery F, in command of Lieut. C.l. Joseph K. Brantley, of Troy, patrolled the streets near the jail. The streets were roped off, Sheriff Galloway said. Lieut. Col. Brantley was called by Gov. Graves at 7:30 p.m., last night and instructed to give whatever assistance was needed by the sheriff's forces.

Chief W. K. McAdory, of the State Law Enforcement Department, last night sent Capt. Potter Smith and State Law Enforcement Officers W. W. Kimbrough, W. J. Lynch, Pugh Haynes, R. S. Baker, J. R. Shores, H. C. Thompson and M. C. Shoffitt to Troy to render assistance to the militia and sheriff's deputies in keeping the mob in check.

Sheriff Galloway admitted shortly befort midnight last night that Giles will be brought to Kilby Prison at Montgomery for safe-keeping as soon as it is possible to remove him from the Pike County Jail.

The sheriff said that the crowd of men outside the jail last night totaled more than 200, and that they remained outside the building for several hours.

The streets about the jail had been roped off, Sheriff Galloway said, and no one was allowed last night to come closer than within 200 yards of the building.

The eight law enforcement officers from Montgomery arrived in Troy about 9:30 p.m., and immediately stationed themselves at the jail.

It is believed that Giles will be brought to Kilby early this morning just before daylight.

TROY NEGRO STATED TO HAVE CONFESSED

Sheriff Of Pike County Says Robert Giles Made Statement Before Officials

TROY, ALA., April 5.—(Special.)—Sheriff R. A. Galloway, of Pike County, has stated that Robert Giles, negro, charged with an attempted assault upon a young white woman of Troy, made a detailed statement of his action Tuesday afternoon, when he was arrested. He was carried to Montgomery early Wednesday morning for safekeeping.

The confession or statement was made in the presence of Sheriff Galloway, Solicitor Loflin, Walter McAdory, chief law enforcement officer, and Deputy Warden Frank Boswell, of Kilby Prison, where the negro is now confined.

The Grand Jury meets next month and officials stated that it is hardly probable that an extra session of Circuit Court will be held. The negro will be kept at Kilby until court convenes. Officials heard the negro's statement but did not give details for print.

Montgomery Ala

Giles was arrested Tuesday afternoon near the scene of the attempted assault by Chief of Police John [illegible], and immediately turned over to county authorities, who asked Gov. Graves for assistance when an angry crowd met near the jail. Local military men and a special squad of law enforcement officers carried the negro to Kilby.

Captive Admits Charge; Says He Was Playing

Montgomery Ala

Adam Ballard, 18-year-old negro, is held in the County Jail without bond on a charge of attempting a criminal assault upon a 16-year-old white girl Friday morning near Gunter Hill, 13 miles out on the Selma Road.

According to Deputies Addie Mosley and J. F. Tucker who arrested the negro shortly after the alleged attack, he made a full confession of the affair both to the deputies and later to Solicitor Temple Seibels, claiming however, that he meant no harm to the girl and was "only playing."

The girl, was gathering vegetables in the garden near her home with her sister, eight, when the negro grabbed her, threw her violently to the ground, and flourishing a heavy stick, told her if she screamed he would "beat her brains out," deputies said. Screams of the younger child who fled attracted the attention of an elderly negro woman in the house and, when she started to the girl's assistance, the negro boy ran, they said.

A telephone call to the sheriff's office here brought Deputies Moseley and Tucker, followed shortly by Sheriff John L. Scogin and Deputies Butler and Chisolm. On the way to the scene of the alleged attack Tucker and Moseley passed three negro boys riding mules, and one of the boys looked suspicious, they said. The officers did not molest him, however, but when the girls described the youth who had attacked the older one, the officers believed him to be the guilty one, they declared.

Deputy Tucker rode back down the road a short distance, concealed himself and when the negroes rode by, he arrested the suspect. Both of the girls positively identified him, it was said.

En route to Montgomery the officers obtained a confession from the negro they said, and it was later repeated in the presence of the solicitor, it is claimed. The girl's father swore out a warrant for the negro in the Court of Common Pleas

White Woman Says She Was Afraid She Might Be Attacked

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 5—(A.N.P.)—Any strange Negro man was in danger of being lynched had he been caught in the neighborhood of Mrs. Annie Jenkins, a white woman, and all because in a fit of nervousness she called the police and informed them that she had been attacked by a "strange Negro."

The call was received at the police headquarters and circulated throughout the city. Scores of armed men rushed to the scene in the wake of the two officers sent to investigate the case. The officers found the woman in a very nervous condition, got her description of the brute who had "attacked her" and went to look for him.

The highway was closely patrolled by armed men and the surrounding wooded section was combed thoroughly but no "strange Negro" or for that matter any Negro, could be found. After more than three hours of diligent searching, the officers returned to the woman to question her about the attack and the identity of the assailant.

By this time she was calm and in a quiet manner told the officers that she had not been attacked but that while she was alone at work in a barn in the rear of her lot, a strange Negro came to the door and made signs to her with his hands, as if he was deaf and dumb. Fearing that "she might be attacked," she, upon the advice of her neighbors, sent in the call for the police, knowing that if she said she had already been attacked she would be amply protected, but she did not think of the dangerous position she put every Negro in the neighborhood by her story.

Morrilton Woman Attacked While Walking Near Home.

MORRILLTON, Ark., Oct. 23.—Officers Thursday afternoon were searching for Will Birts, 30, negro, believed to have attacked Mrs. Boss Milam, 35, near Menifee late Wednesday.

Sheriff J. I. Summers of Conway, and Deputy Sheriff A. D. Nister, of Morrillton, went to Little Rock Thursday to see if Birts was in hiding at the home of a sister who lives there. Sheriff J. M. Gordon and Constable Kirby Bentley spent all day Thursday searching in the vicinity of Menifee for the negro.

It was reported that Mrs. Milam, who lives at Green Briar, went to Menifee looking for her husband, having been informed that he went there to procure some liquor. She found her husband there in an intoxicated condiiton and carrying a gun. He was later arrested and taken to Conway for shooting at a negro. The officers from Conway who came after him did not see Mrs. Milam, she was reported to have started walking down the highway toward her home when she was accosted by the negro man near a steep hill on the highway.

Police Ordered to Smash Meeting in Front of Jail

9-13-30

Baltimore, Md.

WILMINGTON, Del.—Police clashed here last week with more than 200 white and Negro workers of the International Labor Defense when they met in front of the jail to protest what they called a "legal lynching" of Theodore Russ, convicted of assaulting a white woman near Woodside.

Members of the Defense and the American Negro Labor Congress declare that the chief evidence upon which Russ was convicted had been repudiated by the witness who gave it, but that white Wilmington officials were bent upon punishing some one. When the workers met in the protest meeting at a street corner near the jail, the police charged the crowd and arrested several of the leaders.

Look for Speakers

Following this, it was said, the police combed the Negro section for speakers who might call together other meetings. It was also feared that they would be run out of town. Russ, who was executed Friday, was charged with criminal assault upon a white woman, a Mrs. Reed, living near Woodside, below Dover.

He was convicted on the testimony of Linwod Gray who swore at the trial that he saw Russ break into the home of Mrs. Reed and that peeping through the key hole he saw Russ assault the woman. Gray later made an affidavit repudiating his testimony. On the basis of this affidavit, Russ's attorney made an appeal for a new trial.

"WHITE MAN MAY BE THE 'NIGGER IN THE WOODPILE'" THINKS SAVANNAH HAWKEYE

The following, clipped from The Savannah Hawkeye, gives an interesting aspect to two recent attacks which have been reported as being made on local white women by Negroes:

1-2-30

Savannah, Ga.

So far the police have been unable to locate the "Negro" who took a little thirteen year old white girl out and assaulted her and afterwards attempted to throw a rope over the white woman.

Repeated line ups of Negro suspects have been looked over by the victims, but so far no tangible identificaiton has been made.

Having exhausted the criminal Negro population without success, it might be a good idea to turn the searchlight of investigation in the direction of some of the soot and grease gentry.

If the police will throw a rope around the neck of a prominent young white man and smear some soot and grease on his face, the victims may be able to identify "the darkey" at a glance.

In view of the fact that public opinion and street corner gossip in Savannah believes that a white man is "the Nigger in the wood pile," in this case, and do not hesitate to mention his name arouses a serious doubt as to whether the brute is a Negro or a white man.

Men who have studied criminal history, the different traits of the two races, observe many footprints of a white man in this case.

Yet, some of the best authority on criminal practices insists that it was the work of a Negro.

They may be right:

The Hawkeye entertains some very serious doubt about it.

The Negroes will commit a plenty of devilment without we charging up to them the crimes of imbecile sons of rich and influential white men.

Just what will be the outcome is problematical.

A LIKELY SOLUTION

The attack upon a white woman and the assault upon a thirteen year old white girl which were reported to have been committed here about four weeks ago by a Negro man, are still unsolved, so far as the public is aware and if the perpetrator of these dastardly crimes is known or suspected, then the facts in the case should be made known so as to ease the suspense under which the city is living. There are several ear-marks of improbability connected with these two assaults which were made within a half hour of each other in widely different sections of the city and which are supposed to have been committed by the same man, a Negro. For a month these attacks have gone unsolved, as have a number of others which are said to have been committed by Negroes against white women. All the machinery of the police department has been geared up to its highest speed to apprehend the men who committed these crimes and who are a menace to both white and colored women alike, and, yet, they are still at large. And now comes a new phase of the situation which may unravel these mysterious attacks, if it is properly run down—it is the suggestion of the Savannah Hawkeye, a white weekly paper, which entertains the idea that these crimes may have been committed by a black faced white man. In the light of a recent depredation here in which one of these black faced criminals lost his life in a bold automobile hold-up when he was essaying the role of a Negro, it seems to us, that if the authorities are really anxious to get at the bottom of these unsolved crimes against the womanhood of Savannah they might pay some heed to the solution as suggested by The Hawkeye in its article on the subject, which we have published on the front page of this issue of The Tribune. The many crimes against women which have been committed here under the shades of darkness, make it imperative that every possible clue to the apprehension of the guilty parties be sifted down to its last analysis. The criminals, whether white or black, should be run down and given the full penalty of the law, because until this is done the serenity of the community is jeopardized and womanhood is in danger.

NEGRO RELEASED OF ASSAULT CHARGE

Constitution

MACON, Ga., Aug. 11.—(AP)—After he had been convicted and sentenced to serve 20 years in the penitentiary for assaulting a Montgomery county white woman, Shote Wright, Mount Vernon (Ga.) negro, was released Monday from the Bibb county jail and charges dismissed.

The release was ordered by Judge Eschol Graham, of McRae, who some time ago granted the negro a new trial because he thought the evidence was insufficient to convict him.

After the granting of a new trial, Solicitor-General M. H. Boyer, of Hawkinsville, asked that the case be placed on the "dead docket" and the prisoner released. The order of release was signed Saturday and reached here Monday. Mr. Boyer said he was unable to produce evidence which would strengthen the case.

Wright was brought here for safe keeping February 6 immediately following alleged commission of the offense. Except for the time he spent in Mount Vernon during the trial, he has been here since that time.

Judge Eschol Graham, of McRae, granted a new trial sometime ago because he thought the evidence did not support the verdict.

Solicitor-General M. H. Boyer, of Hawkinsville, then asked that the case be placed on the "dead docket" and the prisoner released.

Boyer said he was unable to produce evidence to strengthen the case.

Judge Graham signed the release which made Wright a free man on August 11. Wright lives near Mt. Vernon.

Police Without Clues to Identity of 8-Year-Old's Slayer.

8-30-30

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Aug. 29.—(AP) Neighbors of 8-year-old Marverine Appel today participated in an unorganized search for the person who attacked and killed the child and then left her body last night in an alley near her home. Some of the searchers carried weapons. Police, fearing that harm might come to an innocent person, discouraged the hunt.

Authorities themselves had but few clues to the identity of the child's slayer. They had a description of one of two men who fled down the alley where the child's body was found a few hours before her body was discovered. They also had a vague word picture of a man who was reported to have sought to entice Marverine and some of her companions into an automobile Wednesday, the day she disappeared.

Atlanta, Ga.

Authorities are convinced the slayer was a mentally unbalanced person.

The child was found dead in an alley two blocks from her home Thursday night. She was attacked and then killed after being held prisoner more than 24 hours.

Baling wire was found wound tightly about the girl's neck, and a deep gash had been made on the left side of the head. Deputy Coroner William K. Mikesh, of St. Joseph county, whose examination revealed that the child had been assaulted, said she had been dead about an hour and a half when found.

Police sought a man who Thursday was reported to have asked Marverine and several other children to take a ride in his small automobile. They refused, but detectives said they believed he later had succeeded in luring the girl into his machine.

The girl disappeared from the home of her mother, Mrs. Eula Appel, late Wednesday, and police of South Bend and several northern Indiana cities were asked to search for her.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Duschatz, who live two blocks from the Appel home, discovered the body when they went to their garage. It was lying beside one of the doors.

Peculiar Case In Shelbyville

White Girl In Becoming Mother Says Black Man Raped Her

Louisville News 2-1-30 Louisville, Ky.

Never Said A Word At The Time

The little town of Shelbyville has a mystery all its own. It would be funny if a man's liberty and life were not involved. As it is there's nothing funny in it to one Robert Logan.

Robert Logan, Colored, and a young woman, white, worked for a man by the name of Munny, just out from Shelbyville.

It is said he took the girl out of an asylum or a "Home" to raise and reat as one of the family.

Logan is married and has a house ull of little Colored children.

Well, sir, a few months ago the white girl began showing signs of approaching motherhood. Naturally, he Shelbyvillians wanted to know he hows, whens, whys and wherefores. "Mary"—she can be called, hat because it's a grand old name—hought and thought how she got hat way. Finally she remembered hat about nine months before Robert Logan, Colored field hand, had aught her down in the field and aped her! So Logan was arrested and brought to Louisville for "safe eeping" altho nobody seemed to be orked up over the affair except Mr. Mummy. At a trial last fall, before the baby was born, a white jury stood 9 for acquittal, 2 for 10 years and 1 for 20 years. Evidently somebody didn't believe Mary's tale. The second trial comes up February 3rd. White lawyers in Shelbyville took the case before because they felt Logan was innocent. They still think so, but want some financial remuneration. The Shelbyville N.A.A.C.P is raising money. The Louisville Brranch is helping, because bith are convinced Logan is the well known but unpopular goat. Besides his family is suffering since Logan has been in jail ever sicne the young woman suddenly remembered he raped her. Anybody interested can elp this cause by sending money to Mr. G. W. Saffel of Shelbyville.

It had to be Logan—it could have been you—if "Mary" had ever heard of you

LEGAL PAYMENT

Baltimore was the scene a few days ago of one of the most revolting crimes ever recorded in the State of Maryland. The perpetrator of it, a Negro, has been captured and awaits the result of trial. He was taken and is being held for the law without any demonstration on the part of the people. The Baltimore Sun comments on the case as follows:

"The shocking crimes committed by a Negro war veteran who murdered a young man and assaulted his woman companion in this city on Thursday night call for the promptest possible action in the courts. The statement that the Negro has been three times an inmate of the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, the claim that his mentality is impaired and the fact that he is suffering from a pistol wound, received in his capture, may cause some delay in procedure. But the case is one which demands an exemplary demonstration of the swiftness with which Baltimore justice can move. The question of the man's competency to decide between right and wrong should be speedily settled. The perpetrator of even the most atrocious crime is entitled to this consideration under the law. But the community will expect the State's Attorney to leave nothing undone to assure speedy disposition of the case."

When the law shall have taken its course, and, no doubt it will act with promptness this crime will be paid for in full insofar as human agencies can exact restitution. There should then come to the people of Maryland a great feeling of satisfaction that the laws they have made for all have been effective and just in a most aggravated and unusual case.

Two Negroes Sought in Attempted Attack

2-25-30

Memphis, Tenn.

PICKENS, Miss., Feb. 24.—A county wide search was on today for two men, believed negroes, one of whom seized Miss Bernice Ingram, 15, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Ingram, in the kitchen of her home late last night, thrust a sack over her head and carried her out into the yard, where she jerked loose and ran screaming into the house.

She was found by Dr. Ingram in a faint, suffering from numerous minor bruises on the body and from hysteria, but able to tell the story of the attempted attack, believed to have been at the hands of negroes discovered peeping into her window several days ago.

Bloodhounds brought from Clarksdale early this morning failed to take the scent, as hundreds of persons had gathered when the alarm was sounded and obliterated the tracks of the would-be assailants.

Officers are trailing the movements of a negro was was arrested for annoying Miss Ingram several days ago. She discovered him with another negro at her window when she opened it upon retiring.

At that time her screams brought neighbors and the negroes were captured.

Captors Question Girl.

Late last night, when Miss Ingram entered the darkened kitchen to obtain a drink or water, she was seized and carried into the yard where another man waited. She told her father that her assailant said: "I've got you this time,'" and questioned her about the "curly haired girl," evidently referring to Miss Ethel Wilson, a boarder at the Ingram home, and also about her younger brother.

Miss Ingram said she heard the two discuss plans as to what they should do next, when she jerked loose, began screaming and ran toward the house after removing the sack from her head. She cried out that her father was coming with a pistol and the assailants fled.

The girl collapsed upon reaching the kitchen, but relatives, aroused by her screams, soon found her.

Sheriff W. L. Ellis and Depputies J. M. Roach and W. L. Ellis, Jr., were summoned and they began an exhaustive search, but without avail. The Ingram home is on the outskirts of Pickens and on a main road leading from the town.

Assaulter Identified At Clarksdale by Victims.

8-21-30

Memphis, Tenn.

CLARKSDALE, Miss., Aug. 20—Tracked by booldhounds to his home and identified by his two victims, Tom Hill, 50, negro, is held in the Coahoma County jail charged with assult on two women. Hill, an employe on the C. W Leeton plantation for 37 years, is alleged to have entered the home of Mrs. Betty Dorris, 35, and Mrs Mattie Busby, 19, her daughter about 1 o'clock this morning. The two women live alone and are tenants on the Leeton place.

According to the story the women told sheriff's officials, they were asleep when the negro crawled through a window and entered their room.

Mrs. Dorris declared that she heard someone in the room and as the negro approached her bed that she called to him, thinking it was her daughter. She declared that the negro choked her and that she cried out, awakening her daughter. She declared the negro held his hand over her mouth to prevent her screams. The younger woman sprang out of bed and lighted a lamp.

The negro then released Mrs. Dorris, put out the light, and dragged the younger woman outside, but returned immediately and again renewed his attack on the older woman.

Routed by Cries.

The women's cries for help evidently frightened the negro and he departed. Mrs. Dorris and her daughter then made their way to the home of Huron Hyde, where they obtained protection for the remainder of the night.

Deputy A. L. White was called to the scene, with the county bloodhounds. The dogs trailed the negro, whose barefoot tracks led directly from the Dorris home to his own. He was arrested and brought to Clarksdale and placed in jail. Hill denied any knowledge of the crime, declaring that he spent the entire night at his home.

The women stated they knew Hill, and recognized him in the lamplight, when he entered their home. Officers believe there is no doubt as to the identification.

Sheriff Lee Mathews stated this afternoon that no trouble was anticipated in the protection of the negro.

CLARKSDALE, Miss., Sept. 25.—Tom Fisher, 52, negro, who was arrested several weeks ago on a charge of assault upon two women of the county, was indicted by the Coahoma County grand jury and will be tried at the present term of circuit court, according to an announcement by C. S. Longino, county attorney.

9.25.30.

Fisher entered a plea of not guilty and Tom Ross, young attorney, was appointed by the court to defend the negro, who is without funds.

Memphis, Tenn.

According to reports told the officers, Fisher entered the home of Mrs. Betty Dorris, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. Mattie Busby, on the Leeton plantation. The women heard the negro in the room and Fisher is said to have dragged one of them into the yard and returned to the house. The cries of the women frightened the negro and he escaped.

The women identified Fisher as the one who entered their home and bloodhounds trailed him from the Dorris home to his own. Tracks found by the dogs were compared with Fisher's and officers expressed the opinion that they were identical.

According to County Attorney C. S. Longino, the death penalty will be sought for the negro.

Two colored persons were among the seventeen persons that were indicted by the Queens Grand Jury on Tuesday, March 25. One was Moses Lawson, of 137 West 132nd street, Manhattan, who was indicted on a charge of assault. He is alleged to have assaulted Mrs. Edith Blondell, 31, at her home, 64 Eighty-third street, Jackson Heights, on January 13.

The other was John Cerason, a soldier attached to Mitchell Field, L. I., was indicted on a charge of assault in the second degree in connection with the death of Mrs. Bessie Manning, 35, of 140 Prospect street. Originally Cerason was charged with homicide but this was reduced when Dr. Howard A. Neail, the medical examiner, found that Mrs. Manning had died from heart failure and not from the stab wound alleged to have been inflicted by Cereason.

Armed Posse Seeks Negroes

Two Men Are Sought For Double Attack

Advertiser

Montgomery Ala.

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C., May 4.—(AP)—An armed posse followed a trail of murder and terror today in an effort to apprehend two unidentified negroes who assaulted a daughter of a prominent Nash County family and seriously wounded her companion. 5-5-30

The attack occurred last night on a highway near here. Frank Crimckmore, with whom the girl was riding, was shot in the neck with a shotgun and dragged from his automobile.

The negroes, the girl told officers, then climbed into the machine with her. One of them drove a short distance down the highway, where, she said, both of them attacked them.

Although the negroes told her, she said, they would kill her if she gave an alarm, she ran three miles to her home and told the story of the shooting and attack. A posse soon formed and began the search for the two negroes.

The first clue the posse found was the body of Joe Lee, aged negro, who had been beaten to death with an axe at his home a few miles from the scene of the attack. With Lee's body was Buck Hilliard, another negro who had been beaten and left unconscious.

When he recovered consciousness, Hilliard told officers Lee had been killed and he himself had been beaten by two negroes last night. A shotgun and shells belonging to Hilliard were taken from the house. The officers said they believed the same negroes who killed Lee and beat Hilliard, attacked the girl and her companion.

With this information, a posse of 500 armed men began searching for the negroes. Bloodhounds were being used to scour the territory near where the attack and shooting occurred. Officers said they feared they would not be able to prevent violence if the negroes were captured by the posse.

Late today, 14 negroes were being held for investigation. Officers said however, they did not think any of those held were the two guilty ones.

The girl and Crickmore, both of whom live at Battleboro, near here, were receiving treatment today in a local hospital. The girl was said to be recovering from her injuries.

Physicians said they expected Crickmore to recover but that he would never speak again. His vocal chords, they explained, were destroyed by the shotgun charge.

Hilliard said the two negroes who beat him were dressed in overalls. One of them, he said, was a little taller than the other.

Armed with this information, a posse of 500 armed men began searching for the negroes. Bloodhounds were being used to scour the territory near where the attack and shooting occurred. Officers said they feared they would not be able to prevent violence if the negroes were captured by the posse.

Late today 14 negroes were being held in jail for investigation. Officers said, however, they did not think any of those held were the two guilty ones. They were being questioned in an attempt to obtain information that might aid in the search for the others.

MOB OF 1,000 TERRORIZES NEGROES

Sheriff Finally Arrests Two White Men Suspected of Crime

Her Story Was That Negroes Shot Escort and Assaulted Her

4-7-30

Kansas City, Mo

Editor's note: This is the second time within a month that white girls in the South have been proved by officers of the law to have been lying when they accused Negroes of raping them. The first instance was in Houston, Texas, where an [illegible]-year-old girl accused a Negro bell boy and the next day admitted to the prosecutor that she had told the lie to get sympathy. This is the second case in North Carolina where the sheriff has finally arrested two white men after a mob of 1,000 persons had scoured the county for two Negroes. The charge of rape raised against Negroes in the South is nine times out of ten a vicious lie. In the three lynchings, two in Texas, and one in Chiskasha, Oklahoma, it is unofficially admitted that the lynchings were not for rape, but fist fights between blacks and whites.

TARBORO, N. C.—After a man hunt of two weeks in which more than thirty men were lodged in jail in an effort to locate the "two Negroes" who were alleged to have assaulted a white girl and shot her escort on a lonely road, new developments led to the arrest of the girl's father and a white youth in connection with the crime.

More than one thousand men took part in the man-hunt with shot guns and bloodhounds, and mob sentiment was at such a pitch that a lynching was expected at any moment during the tense days of the search.

Negroes were tracked through the swamps, dragged from their homes, and maltreated until Sheriff Edward Bardin, and Solicitor Don Gilliam, who conducted the investigation, blasted the girl's story of the alleged rape and found that she had manufactured the story to protect her father, Joe Powell and Walter E. Brantley, all white, who had induced her to lure Frank Crickmore to the place where they shot him.

Girl Tells Story

Acording to the story told by Elizabeth June Powell, 18 year old white girl, she and Crickmore were riding in the latter's automobile on the Rocky Mount highway about 10:30 p. m., when they were stopped by two Negroes who asked for a smoke.

Before Crickmore could answer, one of the men placed a gun at the side of his neck and fired. The discharge tore away his larynx and spattered blood and flesh across the windshield. He was dragged from the car, the girl declared, while she was carried to a lonely spot some distance away and assaulted.

She latter gave the alarm which sent the whole section on the warpath with bloodhounds and rifles.

Farmer Tells of Plot

The story of a farmer put the first crimp in the girl's story and so convinced the authorities that they are certain that the story of the rape was a hoax, and all of the Negroes held in connection with the crime were dismissed.

John Garris, white, said that he overhead a conversation between Joe Powell, Battleboro, policeman and father of the girl alleged to have been assaulted by the Negroes, and Brantley which he said took place on the day of the crime and was as follows:

"He's agreed to do it, but wants me to help him," Brantley told the policeman.

Powell asked, "Have you got a pistol?"

"That's all right," Brantley said, "I have a shotgun."

Crickmore was shot with a shotgun.

Crickmore's Statement

Crickmore's statement, "I think she knows who shot me," written to reporters from a hospital bed Thursday night when asked whether Miss Powell knew who fired the shot that injured him, dragged him from his car, and later rode away with Miss Powell, has served to further confirm suspicion of the police that neither the young woman nor her companion was attacked by Negroes at all. "She left with them and should know,' Crickmore declared. With these statements and other evidence the police have about abandoned the Negro search.

Crickmore received the discharge from a shotgun in his larynx. He has been unable to talk since the shooting and probably never will be able to physicians said. But he has never positively identified his attackers as white or colored. When told that Brantley had been arrested he wrote, "It might have been him." He wrote that he and the girl had been parked by the roadside for about ten minutes when two armed men approached and one of them said, "Captain, give me a cigarette.' As I was reaching for it, one of them shot me. I am sure there were two men but it was so dark I could not identify them."

Bloodhounds Trail Negro Who Attempted Assault on White Girl.

5/17/30

Memphis Tenn.

LIBERTY, N. C., May 1[illegible]—(AP)—An unidentified negro who attempted to assault a 14-year-old girl late yesterday [illegible] in wooded sections near Liberty today by a posse of citizens and officers.

Bloodhounds in charge of Asheboro officers were expected here during the day to aid in the hunt. Six suspects arrested by the posse, were taken before the girl, a daughter of a furniture factory employe, but she could identify none of them and they were released.

FALSE ALARMS AND MOB VIOLENCE.

Twice quite recently the blood of North Carolinians has been heated to near the boiling point by what were reported to be negro outrages against white womanhood and, in one instance, a male companion as well. Large posses, heavily armed and ready to go the limit in the apprehension of the guilty, scoured surrounding countrysides.

Fortunately, the man hunts failed to materialize in apprehension in either instance of anyone who could be accused even by a warm-blooded mob, and subsequent developments proved that it was a kindly fate that made barren the efforts of the posses. For, the cloak of doubt and skepticism has been thrown against the veracity of the stories recounted by the principals involved in the purported assaults, and in one case startling developments have been made known as by the rumble of thunder out of the clear sky.

Date

The lesson taught thereby is almost too obvious to justify more than passing reference. Its emphasis is in the realization of the stark tragedy that might have stalked in the wake of the two posses if they had found victims. The bullet-ridden carcasses of luckless negro suspects, who might have been caught by most subtle and incriminating circumstances, might have dangled like ugly scarecrows from tall trees. How easy it would have been for North Carolina to step into first place in the 1930 lynching record.

5-26-30

There is no reason in the mind of the angry crowd. It acts on the impulse, and usually it causes sweeping damage where it strikes. There is with it none of the deliberation that actuates the mind of the man or woman who wickedly concocts a false tale of crime that is a storehouse of potential dynamite.

The innocent members of a whole race should not be jeopardized by false accusations of the direst sort against individuals of its own blood and color. This business of framing a crime without consideration of the consequences must have more consideration from the responsible public.

POWELL IS RELEASED UNDER $2,500 BOND

Battleboro Chief of Police Is Charged With Shooting Frank Crickmore.

BRANTLEY STILL HELD

(Special to Daily News)

Tarboro, Ma 22.—Joe Powell, Battleboro chief of police, arrested late yesterday afternoon in connection with the shooting of Frank Crickmore, Rocky Mount youth, while the latter was with Elizabeth Jane Powell, 17-year-old daughter of the policeman, on a lonely road the night of May 3, was released today under $2,500 bond.

Daily News

Bond was fixed by Sheriff Ed Bardin, of Edgecombe county, and Superior Court Solicitor Donnell Gilliam, of this city, after Powell had been questioned at length concerning the case. Powell denied any connection with the shooting.

26-30

Bond of $2,500 was also fixed for Walter E. Brantley, Battleboro youth, who is charged with Powell in a joint warrant with shooting Crickmore at the policeman's instigation. He had been unable to make bond and was still confined to a cell in the Edgecombe county jail here.

Physicians at the Rocky Mount hospital where Crickmore has been undergoing treatment since the night he was secretly assaulted told investigators that the youth's condition was still gravely dangerous.

Investigating officers were still busily engaged running down clues believed important in the solving of the two weeks old mystery which took a sensational turn Tuesday night with Brantley's arrest in Rocky Mount.

Rape: Alleged Attacks by Negroes.

"MYSTERY DEEPENS" SURROUNDING SHOOTING OF YOUNG WHITE MAN WHICH NEARLY CAUSED A LYNCHING

Norfolk Journal and Guide

6-21-30

Norfolk Va

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C.—"Battleboro's 'Night of Crime 'bids fair to become Eastern Carolina's most inexplicable mystery," says the Rocky Mount Telegram, in the following illuminating story concerning the shooting of Frank Crickmore, young white man near Battleboro and the alleged attack upon his young woman companion, the result of which came near being a lynching.

Says the Telegram:

"On Saturday night, May 3, Frank Crickmore, 21, was shot through the throat, dragged from his car, and his girl companion, Elizabeth Powell, 18, driven away, supposedly in custody of two Negroes who later attacked and ravished her.

"Crickmore was left lying on the ground, gasping for breath through a jagged hole in his throat. He managed to crawl to his knees, stagger nearly a quarter of a mile where he was found and rushed to a hospital. A few moments later Miss Powell was hurried to a hospital from the home of Will Phillips, farmer, to whose home she hurried after she was released from the Cricmmore's car. She said that while she and Crickmore were turning around in the road they had been attacked.

"A week later Crickmore stated that he had been parked with Miss Powell in a lonely side road near Battleboro between ten minutes and an half hour. He said that he saw two figures appear near his car and one of them asked for a smoke. When he tried to comply he was shot before he could deliver the proffered cigarette. He claims that he does not know who shot him, but that Miss Powell knows 'Because she was with them.'

"As a result of Miss Powell's original story a posse of 1,000 men combed the swamps near this city for two Negroes for a full day and guarded all highways leading in and out of this city for another day in hopes of capturing two Negroes, described as a 'large Negro and a small Negro.' More than 30 Negroes were arrested under suspicion and cast in jail.

Within a week from the time of the crime was committed Miss Powell's story was doubted and within two weeks her father had been arrested charged with shooting Crickmore. His arrest came after a Nash county farmer, Jim Garris, had said that he overheard a conversation between Joe Powell, Battleboro chief of police and father of the girl, and Walter Brantley, 22, Battleboro farmer, alleged to have been concerning a gun and that he 'was ready.' Later both Powell and Brantley were dismissed from custody without bond.

"Immediately after Miss Powell's story of the alleged rape and attack had been reported to police here the news was spread to all sections of the community. As late as Tuesday after the alleged attack on Sunday, May 3, Chief of Police O. P. Hedgepeth, of this city, issued the order that men found carrying guns should be arrested. He issued the order after he discovered that men were invading Negro homes in the city and searching for two Negroes whom they could not describe. Police received calls from all sections of the state regarding Negroes. The first calls they answered. Later they merely thanked informers and dismissed the idea that the Negroes in question could be wanted in connection with the alleged criminal assault upon the young girl.

The local hospital where Miss Powell was rushed on Saturday night reported several days after the crime that Miss Powell was not suffering from any physical injury sustained as the result of the attack.

"On Sunday the body of Joe Lee, Battleboro Negro, was found with his head split with an axe and his house companion Buck Hillard, badly battered with a similar instrument. Hilliard said the killing took place about nine o'clock, Saturday night, May 3. He reported a pocketbook missing and gave officers a description of the missing change carrier.

On Friday, after the attack on Saturday night, a pocketbook after the description of the one lost by Hilliard was found near the place where Crickmore was shot. Officers had searched every possible inch of the ground about the scene of the shooting and had found nothing Sunday. Later they discovered that the pocketbook had been planted and that a bank in Battleboro had distributed 150 of the pocketbooks described by the wounded Negro.

"Solicitor Don Gilliam and Sheriff W. E. Bardin, Tarboro, and Police Detective Paul Zimmerman and Claude S. Henry, crack Rocky Mount police officer, took charge of the investigation when the man search revealed nothing. For three days they arrested every Negro believed to have any idea of the crime. A Negro house of prostitution near Battleboro where a "skin" game was in progress was believed to have supplied the inspiration for the murder and the shooting and attack, but every man who could have been connected with the game was arrested, incarcerated, questioned without result.

"Officers for two or three days were plainly puzzled. They believed the original story of Miss Powell that the boy and girl, joy-riding had stopped on a lonely section of the road, driven a few feet inside a still lonelier road to turn around, and while they were in the act of changing seats to permit the girl to drive, they were attacked. Officers could not, from pictures of the car, find how the boy had been sitting when he was shot. They could not understand everything they had heard about the shooting and assault.

"Crickmore, unable to speak, was interviewed in the hospital. He said that he was not turning around when he was shot. (All of his answers were in writing.) He said that he and Miss Powell had been parked on a lonely road for at least ten minutes, possibly for thirty minutes. He says that he does not know who did the shooting, that Miss Powell saw them first, and that she was taken away with them. He has deducted from what little he knows that Miss Powell can say who did the shooting. Officers have reached the same conclusion, incidentally.

"Iit is alleged that David Exum, filling station proprietor, went to the scene of the shooting between the time that Crickmore was shot and the pocketbook was found. He is alleged to have said that he was told that Crickmore had hidden a pint of whiskey there and that Miss Powell told him he would find it if he looked. Miss Powell is said to have denied that she told Exum anything of the sort.

"The arrest of the girl's father and Walter Brantley, charging them with the shooting, is regarded as a mistake on the part of Edgecombe county officials.

"In every way the mystery surrounding the shooting has become more perplexing. Sheriff Bardin said that the best thing he knew to do toward solving the mystery of the crime was to rest on his 'oars' for a while. Solicitor Don Gilliam had political fences to mend in five counties and three consecutive weeks of criminal court to occupy his time. And the public, somewhat tired of exchanging rumors, is content to await new developments if they are not too long coming. If they are, the public will demand an answer or a frank avowal that solution of the mystery is an impossibility.

"Not in recent years has the populace been aroused to such fever heat as this case stirred them up. Any Negro found in the woods on Sunday, May 3, by the mob would have been shot, regardless of his business there. Officers say that is a miracle that members of the posse, scouring the woods, were not killed. And the reaction has been just as decided as the action.

"Sheriff Bardin frankly stated that if he could arrest Miss Powell and hold her in jail without giving her bond, he believed that there would be developments in the case. But he said that there was no way in which she could be arrested and held.

"Police Officers Zimmerman and Henry did not believe Powell of Brantley should have been arrested as participants in the crime. They made their statements before the arrest of Powell. But the testimony of Garris appeared to be so effective that there was no hesitancy on the part of officers to arrest either of the two men.

"The fact that Don Gilliam followed the mob when it hunted for two Negroes Sunday after the shooting and that he has devoted almost every available minute since then to running down every lead has added to his prestige in this community. Sheriff Bardin has spared no time in hunting for men.

The consensus of opinion is that when the primary is safely over that officers will renew the search for the man who shot Crickmore and that no stone will be left unturned to find the man who sneaked up behind the car asked for a cigarette, and fired the shot. Sensational developments are expected.

Identifies Suspect

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C.—Rastus Coleman, 22, was identified Saturday by Buck Hilliard, aged Battleboro resident, as the man who split Joe Lee's head with an axe Saturday night, May 3, and later attacked Hilliard. Police doubt Hilliard's statement.

Coleman has been held in the Tarboro jail since Lee was killed. On the same night Frank Crickmore, young white man, was shot through the throat and Elizabeth Powell, his 18-year-old companion, was attacked by two Negroes, according to her story to police. Coleman, who will be given a hearing in Tarboro Monday morning, denies knowledge of any of the crimes. Police at first believed the one who killed Lee also shot Crickmore and attacked Miss Powell. Lately, however, they have dismissed the possibility that a Negro committed the Crickmore and Powell crimes.

NEGRO FOUND BY WOMAN IN BEDROOM IS IN JAIL

TARBORO, N. C., Sept. 8—AP—The Edgecombe county jail tonight held William Henry Hicks, 21 year old negro arrested after a white woman who found his in her bedroom reduced him to cowering submission with a shotgun and guarded him until officers came.

Hicks, officers said, was under the influence of whiskey.

WHETHER Stephen English, young white farmer of near Wallace, N. C., is convicted of the murder of his wife, a bride of less than a year, or not, the testimony of two State's witnesses, English's close personal friends, which brought about his being held for the grand jury at a magistrate's hearing some days ago impresses the point that two men barely escaped lynching by a mob and lynching by the law for a crime for which the husband now stands directly accused. Had not Dave Brockington and Dave Locke been rushed to the State Prison at Raleigh immediately following their arrest in connection with Mrs. English's death they doubtless would have been lynched, since mob violence threatened. Had these two men not proved perfect alibis upon the testimony of white men at their preliminary trial, they doubtless would have been lynched by the law of North Carolina.

Locke and Brockington had about the only kind of evidence that can possibly avail to save the life of a colored man in the South accused of a capital offense involving a white woman. It is a most uncomfortable thought but that is the situation which surrounds the masses of Southern colored men. The officers swore that they had Locke's confession. Both men had been seen near the scene of the murder. Both were arrested some distance away. The stage was all set for their hanging, but the perfect alibis punctured the proceedings. Now come two white men, friends of the murdered woman's husband, and declare under oath that the young husband deliberately planned to be rid of his wife some way or the other. They detail a sensational story which clearly incriminates Stephen English.

It is a fact that any second-rate detective not laboring under the "Negro did it" attitude which hampers Southern officers could explode nine-tenths of the murder mysteries occurring in this section in less than a week. The fact is that Southern law officers are generally baffled without a Negro on which to hang a crime.

YOUTH IS SAVED FROM POSSIBLE LEGAL LYNCHING

Interracial Committee Works To Prove Accused Is Innocent

PHILADELPHIA Pa.—The Interracia Peace Committee, with headquarter here, announces through the executive secretary, Alice Dunbar-Nelson, that it efforts to save young Theodore Russ, o Woodside, Del., from what it termed a legal lynching last week, were successful.

Russ, a youth of 22, one night last February, drove with some young men to the home of a white couple by the name of Reed, for the purpose of buying liquor, descended from his car leaving the other men, went to the house alone, and obtained the liquor A dispute about the price ensued, and in the scuffle to get the jug from him he and the woman engaged in a struggle. Her husband and brother came in and a free for all brawl ensued, in which knives were used, and Russ cu the woman's brother on the neck, fled went home, and to bed.

When he was found and arrested later, he thought it was for cutting the man. In fact, the question of assault upon the woman was not injected into the case for fully twenty-four hours Then the woman claimed criminal assault.

Sentenced To Hang

Russ was tried and convicted, condemned to be hanged, as rape is a capital offense in Deleware. Efforts to hav the case re-tried were unavailing. Th Board of Pardons refused a recommendation to the governor for commutation or lightening of the sentence.

Two weeks before the time set fo the execution, July 25th, an appeal wa made to the executive secretary of th American Interracial Peace Committe for help. Letters, telegrams, appeals petitions, were sent to the Governor C. Douglass Buck, asking for a repriev or stay of execution. In view of th fact that the Board of Pardons had no made a favorable recommendation though the vote was three to two, th Governor was disinclined to grant th request.

A mass meeting of the citizens o Wilmington was held on the night o July 23, and upon hearing that th Governor was planning to leave th state next morning to be gone over the week-end, the entire meeting arose, and a line of over fifty cars, containing over two hundred people, drove down the state to the Governor's mansion, arriving about eleven o'clock. A plea was made for a reprieve until further evidence could be found to prove the lad's innocence.

The earnestness of the plea, and the evident mass solidarity of the Negroes of Delaware was impressive. The Governor granted a reprieve of twenty-eight days, until August 22nd.

The American Interracial Peace Committee is cooperating with other organizations now in an effort to find evidence which will establish the innocence of the youth. Funds are being raised throughout the state, as the boy's family has gone bankrupt in attempting to save him.

The interest of the American Interracial Peace Committee in the case comes from its efforts to prevent racial friction, and to establish peace between races wherever possible.

ATTACKS WOMEN IN CHATTANOOGA

Negro Clubs Three at Chattanooga, One Is In Hospital.

By United Press

CHATTANOOGA—Every available member of the Chattanooga detective squad was engaged Saturday night in a hunt for an unidentified negro accused of clubbing three white women and of attempting to attack a fourth. One of his victims, Mrs. J. M. Owen, is in a hospital suffering from a fractured skull.

The negro sought was described by witnesses as being about 20 years old, five feet 8 inches tall, 140 pounds, wearing a light shirt and gray pants. One negro, answering the description, was taken in custody but none cound identify him as the assailant. Feeling over the assaults ran high in the neighborhood.

Mrs. Adelaide Crowe, asleep at her home at 7:30 a. m. Saturday was the first known victim of the negro, who attacked with a club and struck Mrs. Crowe on the head when she was aroused by his presence in the house. Her injuries were not regarded as serious.

Mrs. J. C. Fryer was struck on the head as she discovered the negro descending a flight of steps in her home. A short time later Mrs. Ed Lauder frightened away a negro of similar description who approached her home. At 11 a. m. Mrs. Owens was attacked. Her injuries were so grave she was taken to Erlanger Hospital.

Robbery was the generally accepted motive for the attacks, as still later a man likewise answering the same description was seen fleeing from a dwelling where it was believed he had attempted to commit robbery.

MEMPHIS, TENN., July 3.—(AP)—George Hall, 30, negro, was brought to the Shelby County jail here tonight for safekeeping and T. A. Gray, 40, a white farmer, was held in the Tipton County jail at Covington, as a result of alleged attempts to attack two young white women at Munsford, a farming community near Covington.

The two men are alleged to have forced entrance to three dwellings at Munsford, Monday night after engaging in a drinking bout and to have entered the sleeping apartments of two of the homes before they were discovered and driven off. Hall, arrested Tuesday, is said by officers to have confessed today and to have implicated Gray.

Because of feeling aroused in the Munsford community Sheriff T. J. Scott of Tipton County, considered it inadvisable to hold both men in the same jail and ordered the negro brought here.

Mob Gathered to Lynch Somebody, but Disperses Quietly.

MAN DESCRIBED

Doctor Finds Wounds were Self-Inflicted.

BRISTOL, Tenn. — The lynching of another innocent man was narrowly averted here last week when razor slashes on the throat of Mrs. Mam Hagy, white, were found to be self-inflicted after she had staggered into the house from a clump of bushes sobbing "a Negro attacked me."

The news "that a white woman had been attacked by a Negro" had brought a mob of white men estimated at around 250, when Dr. Jonathan B. McClellan and Dr. Will Riley, both white, announced to them that Mrs. Hagy had slashed herself on the wrists and throat in an effort to end her life.

Went to Woods

Around six o'clock last Tuesday morning, Mrs. Hagy, who is 24, kissed her child and told her husband she was going to feed the hogs. Instead of going to the barn she walked across the field to a clump of woods. It was from this place that a short while later she emerged and staggered into the house bleeding profusely. Following a collapse she rallied and told those about her that she had been attacked. She described the "Negro" minutely, even to the clothes he wore.

The mob quickly gathered with pistols, shotguns and other weapons and was about to surround the place and close in on their victim when the doctor made his announcement. Sulivan County officers and local police went to the scene to capture the supposed culprit and preserve order.

Mrs. Hagy, who after admitting that she cut htrself and falsely accused "a Negro," will recover, the doctor says.

ANOTHER CRIMINAL ASSAULT HOAX

This community was shocked and enraged one day last week, when a young white girl charged that a Negro bellhop, at one of he local hotels, had entered her room during the absence of her mother and criminally outraged her. Informer

In connection with her report of the attack, according to the aily newspapers, the girl claimed that she was awakened by the egro clutching her arm, and that when she ordered him from er room and he refused to go, she attempted to elude his grasp nd give the alarm; but that the colored bellhop tightened his rip upon her arm, dragged her back into her room from the hallay to which she had fled and then overpowered her.

Her mother was quoted as saying that the Negro bellhop asked r that morning, when she was leaving for her work, if her aughter was still in bed and that she became suspicious after aving the hotel and later telephoned her daughter to ascertain f anything had happened to her.

Although the girl, in her original story, stated that the attack ccurred at 5 a. m. Wednesday, she did not report it to her mother nd sweetheart (the latter residing in the same hotel) until 10 p. n. Wednesday.

5-10-30

The Negro was arrested by police officers and a charge of riminal assault placed against him, although he protested his inocence and disclaimed any knowledge of the attack.

The usual identification of the attacker took place at the police tation, the girl picking out this particular Negro from a group of olored suspects and prisoners.

Houston, Texas

On the following day, like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, the irl repudiated her attack story and admitted that it was a frameup, adding that the Negro had unintentionally entered her room uring the morning, but that he had not even approached her.

In her repudiation, she stated that she conceived the attack tory in the hope that her name would be published in connection ith the reported outrage, and that such publicity would bring bout a reconciliation between her mother and step-father.

The Negro bellhop, thus absolved from this heinous crime, was ater no-billed by the grand jury.

It was fortunate for this colored youth that he was residing in community such as Houston, where the mob spirit is not so rife nd rampant; for had he been in some other counties in this state e would have long since been treated to an overdose of the faous American pastime.

Here, again, is brought home the danger of mob law for alleged riminal attacks and for any other alleged crimes; for many inocent black men have been lynched in this country for crimes hey never committed.

It is an easy matter to charge that some Negro has outraged a emale member of the dominant race, and, since such charges are arely investigated and the accused black is prejudged guilty, it s next to impossible for the alleged attacker to get a fair trial.

This Houston incident ought to show the grave danger of peritting the mob-spirit, either of the illegal or legal species, to redominate as soon as some Negro is charged with committing uch an offense; and there ought to be some way to inflict punishent upon any person who would resort to such methods to attain rtain ends.

The Negro race has enough to live down and is encumbered with a big enough job from all angles without having such false charges manufactured and placed against the race; for every time such a crime is preferred against some Negro, the entire race is indicted and libeled.

FAIRY TALE IS INVENTED ON BELL BOY

She Tells Prosecutor She Told Story to "Get Sympathy"

Call

HOUSTON, Tex.,—An 18-year-old girl who had charged that a Negro bell boy in a Washington avenue hotel attacked her made a signed statement Thursday night to R. R. Myers, investigator for the district attorney's office, and Detective R. D. Langdon of the police homicide squad, to the effect that her story was not true.

5-9-30

The girl said that she had told the story in an attempt to bring about a reconciliation between her stepfather and her mother.

"I am very sorry that it has all happened," she said.

The girl also wrote a letter to the newspapers in which she said that the bell boy rushed into her room by mistake and that she conceived the idea of filing criminal assault charges in the hope that sympathy for her might bring a family reconciliation.

Kansas City

The bell boy, Isaac Pugh, 20 was scheduled to have an examining trial in Justice J. M. Ray's court Friday afternoon. It is expected that the state will move to dismiss the criminal assault charge.

Mo

The girl had made a statement to George H. Cavanagh, assistant district attorney, and R. R. Myers, investigator, in which she said that she lived with her mother at the hotel. Her mother left the room at 5:30 a. m., Wednesday to go work, the girl said.

About a half hour later, she said, she was awakened to find the bell boy sitting on the edge of the bed. She screamed and struggled, but was overpowered, according to the statement. He offered her money not to tell, she said. She gave her age as 18 years.

Police said that after Pugh was arrested, the young woman picked him out of a lineup at the police station.

The bell boy denied the charge.

REPEATED LOCAL CRIMINAL ATTACKS

For the past several months, the daily newspapers of this city have chronicled and, in some instances, played up in box-car type, alleged criminal attacks by Negroes upon young white women.

In nearly every instance of the reported attack, the victim has been a white woman separated from her husband, and the victims' description of the alleged attacker of ebony hue have somewhat tallied in several details.

Huston Defender

Most of these reported attacks have occurred in the early morning hours, when the women in question were en route to work, and the deed has been perpetrated, according to their version, on some abandoned lot well within the corporate limits of the city.

If such a beast or fiend is operating in this city, whether he is Negro or member of some other race, the peace officers should exert every honest effort to apprehend him or them; for no woman is safe as long as such a bestial character is running loose in the community.

11-29-30

Holdups and criminal attacks on the outskirts of the city, where the victims have been members of the white race, have had a Negro as the criminal in most of the cases reported to the police department, yet no arrest has been made in connection with these crimes and attacks.

Houston, Texas

Either some "master minds" are operating here as rapists and criminals, or the police department is unable to cope with these fiends, or somebody is exaggerating matters.

In either event, the entire Negro race is being given a black eye and held up to the reading public in the wrong light; for, while the black race has its faults, just like other races, it is unfair to label the whole race as criminals or rapists, or to create the impression that such is the case.

While The Defender will not attempt to sit in judgment in these reported attack cases, it does appear to this paper that some arrests ought to have been made ere now by our vigilant and energetic peace officers, who seem to be quite adept in apprehending Negroes for all other sort of crimes and infractions of society's laws, even down to a friendly game of "African golf."

HOUSTON, TEXAS, Sept. 28.—(AP)—County officers with bloodhounds and aided by Houston police throughout the day carried on an unsuccessful search for a negro who late last night shot to death H. H. Pevateaux, an ice dealer, and forced Pevateaux's woman companion to walk down a road near here where he attacked her.

The dogs lost the trail at a point where the officers supposed the attacker entered an automobile and escaped.

The woman told police that the negro jumped on Pevateaux's auto while they were driving slowly through a Houston suburb, and the driver swerved in an attempt to throw him off.

With that the negro fired one shot into the side of Pevateaux and he slumped over dead. The automobile was ditched and the attacker forced the woman to accompany him, she said.

Find Dixie Woman Cut Self

BRISTOL, Va., Oct. 17.—A white woman, tired of living and anxious to die, proved how deep-rooted is race prejudice near here Monday when she slashed her wrists and throat with a razor blade, then told her husband that a "Negro" had attacked her and attempted to kill her.

In less than a half hour after the woman, Mrs. Sam Hagy, who lives south of here on the Lee highway, told her husband her dramatic story of the attack, a mob was formed and went on the man hunt. It was freely stated that a lynching would take place as soon as a person could be located who met the general description given by the woman. Even when doctors had examined her and had informed leaders of the mob that all the woman's wounds were self-inflicted and that she had not been assaulted she refused to admit the falsity of her statement, but the mob dispersed.

Mrs. Hagy is just 24 years old and considered comely for a backwoods girl. She lived with her farmer husband just out of town and occupied a place with the "poor white" class hereabouts. Both she and her husband are known as "nigger haters" by people of this vicinity and neither had ranked very high in Bristol society. Yet, when the woman staggered into her home with blood streaming from gashes in her wrists and throat, and gave her husband a clear description of the man whom she accused of attacking her there was no one to doubt her story.

So accurate was her description that the mob had a clear conception of the man it meant to lynch. More than 300 men and women in automobiles and on foot, armed with rifles, pistols, garden implements and clubs, filled the woods near where the Hagys lived. Systematically the men began to beat the woods while women watched all lanes. It is certain that had an unfortunate man been in the woods at the time he would have been lynched before anyone could have interfered.

Meanwhile, doctors, called to examine the wounded woman, discovered that she had cut herself. They confronted her with that evidence, but she refused to talk. After the affair had settled and the mob had dispersed Sam Hagy told facts that proved that his wife had intended suicide and had deliberately planned to cause a lynching. She arose about 6:30 Monday morning, he said, and after kissing her 4-year-old child good-by told her husband that she was going to feed the hogs. Instead of that, he said, she walked across a field and into Cowan's Woods, about a quarter of a mile away.

A few minutes later she staggered into the house and told the story which brought about the mob formation and the mob hunt. Dr. Jonathan B. McClellan and Dr. Will Wiley, summoned from Bristol, treated the woman and then informed members of the mob who were waiting to learn the outcome of her wounds, that she had faked the assault story. She will recover, the doctors say.

Brantley denied the conversation with Powell which is alleged to have occurred on the day of the crime, but Powell admits he saw and talked with Brantley on that day. Both Brantley and Powell are vigorous in their denials of any knowledge of or participation in the shooting of the youth who is still in a grave condition in a Rocky Mount hospital with a gaping wound in his throat.

Negroes Freed.

A diligent investigation has been conducted into the case by Solicitor Gilliam and Sheriff Bardin, both of whom believe they will solve the two-week old mystery within the next few days. The negroes jailed in connection with the case have all been freed and excitement which was at white heat when the girl reported her story of the attack of two negroes has completely died down.

Additional developments of a sensational nature are expected to crop up within the next day or so and officers are confident they are on the track of the real assailants of the Crickmore youth, who has never definitely said whether he was shot by white men or negroes.

Elizabeth Jane Powell, daughter of the policeman arrested, maintains her original story of the case and just recently took officers to the scene and enacted every detail of the shooting and attack made on her by the alleged negroes.

Crickmore has [illegible] since the shooting and probably never will be able to talk, physicians said. He has never positively identified his attackers as white or negro. UNIDENTIFIED WHITE MAN ROBS PASADENA YOUTH OF MONEY AND AUTO, AND ASSAULTS ONE OF HIS GIRL COMPANIONS

Pacific Defender
Los Angeles Cal
20 30

What started out to be an afternoon drive ended in a tragedy when a young man of Pasadena invited two young girls to take a little ride in his roadster. The three were of good families and prominent in the younger social set of Pasadena, Calif.

Little did they think that there was danger in their going and were surprised when they were stopped at the Los Angeles River bridge on Los Feliz boulevard by a young white man, apparently of Jewish extraction, dark hair, and about 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing about 140 pounds.

Shoving a pistol into the ribs of the young man driving the car, he directed him into the Hollywood Hills, where after searching the young man's pockets and taking four dollars and some cents, he proved his brute nature under the threat of murder by forcing one of the young women to submit to his brute passion.

This act accomplished, they drove back to Western avenue, where the fiend forced them out of the car, kicking them as they disembarked and threatening them with his .38 Iver-Johnson revolver. At this juncture Officers Pearson and Barry of the Hollywood police station hove in sight and the bandit in the stolen automobile fled while the victims told their story to the police.

The girls were left on the roadside while the young man joined the policemen in the chase, which lasted ten blocks. As the policemen approached the bandit he opened fire on them, which was returned by the officers, and a bullet from Policeman Barry's revolver brought the chase to a close and the career of the fiend to an end.

The brute staggered out of the car as the officers ran alongside and fell into the policeman's arms and died.

The body was taken to the morgue, where it was finger-printed and photographed in an attempt to identify, while his revolver and a small vial of bad liquor was booked at Central station.

TELLS HOW HE SAFEGUARDS HIS DAUGHTER ON U STREET

World

Washington D.C.

To the Editor:

In your issue of September 26 a writer under the name of J. H. P. mentions the abominable evil of white men in autos cruising and picking up colored girls on U and Fourteenth streets. These streets have become a mecca for a class of whites who annoy, molest and assault colored women. After 10 p.m. a colored woman ceases to be safe from bold flirtations and offers for rides. A stop must be put to this damnable practice. When our mothers, daughters and sisters can no longer walk the streets without these so-called superior nordics molesting them its time to take the law into our own hands. By day they are too filthy to mingle with, but by moonlight these same curs grasp the first opportunity to co-habit with a colored woman. Don't be misled into believing these rats are of the poorer class of white men. Most of them are of the better class riding in expensive automobiles.

I am a widower with four children, my oldest is the apple of my eye for she is a mother and more; by day she struggles with my younger ones and at night she works at a part time job. She is compelled to walk U street and not a night passes that she isn't halted or followed home by some determined rat. So far, I have seven nicks in my gun and if this continues there are going to be more. I don't mean I have shot anyone, but have given them a licking to be remembered. For five days the papers carried a story of Mr. so and so, who was assaulted by a Negro bandit, the other two took their medicine gamely. I would like to hear from more readers about this vital question. K. O. R.

Engineer At Freedman's Is Fired After Being Found In Girl's Room

Washington D.C.

YOUNG DIETICIAN SAYS MAN ASSAULTED HER

Came To Room Under Guise Of Repairing Radiator, Says Girl

J. Henderson Cornett, white, 2540 Fourteenth Street N. W., chief engineer at Freedman's Hospital, was fired this week for an assault on Miss Evanel Renfrow, young dietician of the hospital taff.

According to Miss Renfrow's statement Cornett came to her room under the guise of repairing a radiator and while in the room he made several "fresh" remarks. Miss Renfrow said she left the room and went into another occupied by a girl friend. The door of this room was partly open and when Cornett came down the hall he came into the room and again made several "fresh" remarks.

When the girls refused to accept his proposals he approached the bed where the girls were and attempted to caress the girl. When he touched her Miss Renfrow screamed. Her calls brought several attendants and Cornett immediately left the room.

Man Has Record

The matter was reported to the head dietician who reported the assault to Dr. William A. Warfield, chief surgeon. Dr. Warfield suspended the man and later recommended his immediate dismissal to the Interior Department.

It is reported that Cornett had a record of a similar offense with a colored girl in a previous job and several women at Freedman's said he had been reported various times for making improper remarks to them. Dr. Warfield said one offense had been brought to his attention.

Girl Offered Bribe

Cornett offered Miss Renfrow $25 not to report the assault and later raised this amount to $300 when a man employee of the hospital attempted to bribe Miss Renfrow not to press charges against him. Miss Renfrow refused these bribes.

Several women at the hospital said most of the men employees were in sympathy with Cornett and some suggested that Miss Renfrow was "hard" on the man. Cornett has a reputation for such offenses, stated one woman head of a department at Freedman's. She said the man has been a regular nuisance, and was known as a "hugger."

Dr. Warfield said this week that a colored engineer will be sought to take the place vacated by Cornett.

THE INCIDENT AT FREEDMAN'S

World 11-26-30

Last week a white engineer at Freedman's Hospital assaulted one of the student dieticians. The assault occurred in the Nurses' Home. The outcry of the girl is the only thing that saved her. Subsequent investigation revealed the fact that this man had been in the habit of attempting to hug or in other ways insult or molest women at the hospital.

While no arrest was made, Dr. William A. Warfield, for over twenty-five years head of the hospital, Tuesday suspended the man and recommended his immediate dismissal to the Secretary of the Interior.

Washington D.C.

It is most unfortunate that the incident should occur. However, it simply tends to show how glaringly inconsistent is the daily press in matters of this kind when the victim is colored and the perpetrator white. This inconsistency even permeates our so-called "Halls of Justice." Even in this city, the Capital of the Nation, white men have been able to even commit rape and get off with even a small fine or light sentences. On the other hand, whenever a colored man is involved, if it happens to be in the South, he is lynched to the nearest tree limb, if in a State where the Constitution is a little more respected, he is sent up for either life or a long stretch of years.

Negro women can only look to Negro men for protection. It is a duty encumbered upon every man to see that womanhood is respected and protected. It is an obligation that cannot be evaded.

Dr. Warfield had no alternative but to suspend this man and see to it that his dismissal followed. There must not be two standards of justice in this country.

A Negro named Jackson, brother-in-law of the woman, is held for investigation.

Atlanta Ga.

The two white men went to the Negro woman's home late Sunday afternoon and were said to have beaten her. The woman called Jackson from his home nearby.

The white men, it was said, attacked Jackson, who opened fire on them. They fled in their automobile some distance before becoming too weak from loss of blood to continue. Dewey Kent died before reaching Statesboro.

White Boys Blacked Up to Rape, Murder

Afro-American

THOMASVILLE, Ga. — (ANP) — Citizens are watching the trial of Jack Bradley and O. E. Allen, two white men, charged with the murder of Lacy Mitchell. 11-8-30

Weird tales of how the white men blackened their faces and went to Mitchell's home for the purpose of flogging him to prevent him from testifying against two white men charged with raping a young colored girl. When they arrived at the house their plans changed from flogging to killing and as a result Mitchell was shot and killed.

Baltimore, Md.

Bradley told of the blackened faces and declared that he had fired the shot that killed Mitchell, but claimed that he killed the man to save his own life, as Mitchell came to the door in answer to their knock armed with a pistol.

Rapists Get One Year

Of equal interest was the trial of Henry Price and C. V. Moore, two other white men, charged with raping a young colored girl. The rapists were convicted and sentenced to one year in prison and as the sentence was imposed, Negroes especially in the courtroom vividly recalled that a Negro convict had been lynched a few weeks ago in this same town for attempting to assault a white girl.

Attacked and Dragged 400 Feet by White Assailants

Daily Press Silent On News of Case

Cops Jail Duo—Purse Stolen—Punishment Doubted by Some

A Gary grandmother was the victim of one of the most atrocious assaults in the annals of local crime Sunday night when two white fineds seized Mrs. Mattie Green, 50, 2461 Jefferson street, and escaped with $3.20 after dragging her nearly a block to a dark neighborhood and raping her .

Her attackers, James Smith, 29, 3884 Pennsylvania street, Indiana Harbor, and George Duckas, 38, 1304 West 13th avenue, were arrested within a few minutes after the crime had been committed. The case came up in city court Tuesday morning but was continued a week.

Walking Near Home

Mrs. Green was walking near home at 10 o'clock Sunday night when the assault occurred.

According to her statement, she was suddenly seized by the two men, one of whom throttled her to prevent her screaming. Although she fought with all her strength, she was no match for the brutes who dargged her into the middle of the 24th block on Adams street, where the criminal attack was made.

Her clothes almost torn from her body and her flesh bruised where she had been roughly handled by the two Caucasians, she ran shrieking and screaming down the street so loudly when released as to attract the attention of Officers J. G. Stone and Samuel Smith.

Hurrying to the spot, the policemen found the men still there, and the purse, rifled of its contents, on the ground just a few feet away. Duckas and Smith were arrested and taken to jail.

Conviction Doubted

Although Mrs. Green appeared at the city jail and satisfied officials there of the truth of her story, doubt is expressed by several south side attorneys that the assailants will be punished in one proportion to the crime committed unless the Negro citizens here demand that no favoritism be shown.

Incidentally, the Gary Post-Tribune, daily paper here which gives prominence to Negro crime and conducts a jim crow news column, gave the whole case not more than a half inch of space. There was an eight-inch story in the same issue telling of the holdup of a white woman, proprietor of a store, by two Negro bandits.

Woman Is Victim of Gary, Ind., Whites

GARY, Ind., Sept. 12.—Immediately after it was reported that two men under arrest in Marion, Ind., had raped a white girl several weeks ago, newspapers throughout the country stated that the jail was being stormed. In their next editions the report was carried that the two men had been lynched in the courthouse yard.

Now a week after two white men have been under arrest for robbing, assaulting and raping a Race woman, 50 years old, and a grandmother, it is reported that there will be little or no conscientious prosecution. They were arrested in a non-white neighborhood by policemen also not white.

This city is more upset now than at any time since the Emmerson street school strike, when the white students struck in protest against non-white students attending the school. Like at that time, the Race citizenry is appealing for justice, only more forcefully.

Concerted action was begun this week to see that adequate punishment is meted out to James Smith, 29 years old, 3884 Pennsylvania avenue, Indiana Harbor, and George Duckas, 38 years old, 1304 W. 13th street, who are charged with having robbed, assaulted, then raped Mrs. Mattie Green, 50-year-old grandmother residing at 2461 Jefferson street.

Mrs. Green was walking near her home at 10 o'clock last Sunday night when the atrocity occurred.

According to her statement, Mrs. Green was suddenly seized by the two men, one of them clutching her throat to prevent her screaming. The thugs succeeded in subduing the woman and dragged her to the middle of the 24th block on Adams street, where they committed the three heinous crimes.

Mrs. Green, with her clothing almost torn from her body and her flesh bruised where she had been roughly handled by the white, ran, screaming toward 24th St. Policemen J. G. Stone and Samuel Smith heard her cries and came to her rescue.

After they heard her story, the officers rushed to the spot. The men were still there and her rifled purse was found in the shrubbery a few feet away. Duckas and Smith were arrested and jailed.

Lawyers, preachers and public-spirited lay citizens have come together to force the prosecution of the two morons who attacked Mrs. Green. It has been reported, and is now common talk throughout the city, that the prosecution will be weak and that punishment will not be commensurate with the crimes committed.

It is being demanded that no favoritism be shown the criminals. Indiana has been swift in meting out justice to attackers of women. Most of the victims, however, have been men of the Race involving women of the other group. Citizens here now consider it their duty, provided the state fails to apply the law vigorously, to demand that the men who attacked Mrs. Green be given the full extent of the law.

Local daily newspapers have been unusually quiet about the matter.

ALLEGED RAPISTS ARRESTED AGAIN TO BALK RELEASE

GARY, Ind., Sept., 17—Following the re-arrest of James Smith, 29 years old, and George Duckas, 38 years old, two white men charged with criminal assault by Mrs. Mattie Green, a grandmother the ori[illegible] against the two men which came up Tuesday morning in city court after a week's continuance, was dismissed since the prisoners had been transferred to Crown Point.

The men, who are also charged with the theft of Mrs. Green's purse containing a small amount of cash were re-arrested and sent to Crown Point through the action of Mrs. Green and her attorney, Claudius Carrell, who felt that there was a movement on foot to bring about their release.

Chicago

Mrs. Green was dragged a block by the two men as she was walking alone near her home a week ago Sunday night. Taken to a dark neghborhood, she was criminally assaulted by both men who then released her with her clothes almost completely torn from her body. Her screams attracted Officers J. G. Stone and Samuel Smith, who arrested the men on the same spot where the crime was committed. Her purse was found lying on the ground a few feet away.

Date for the trial has not been set. It is believed that Duckas, a one legged man, will attempt to use his infirmity in an appeal for sympathy.

A Challenge to Black Garyites

NO Negro killed to appease the wrath of a mob committed a crime more heinous than the rape last Sunday night of a black grandmother by two white fiends. Yet the daily paper here almost forgot to mention the atrocity and the men who did the act stand an excellent chance of paying an extremely light penalty or none at all.

Had the races of the three who staged the sordid drama been reversed, there is hardly a daily paper in this country that would not have carried some mention of the crime. With the feeling between the races as critical as it now is because of the Washington park situation, there may have been trouble here of the nastiest sort.

The story of the attack here in Gary and its subsequent hushing-up has its parallel in practically every city of any size where Negroes are in any considerable number. It is proof of the most convincing sort that a large percentage of the white press is consciously trying to support the bewhiskered myth that only Negroes are rapists and possessed of bestialities.

Here is also weighty evidence of the usefulness of a Negro newspaper. Only a few darker Garyites would have learned of the flagitious crime were it not for the presence in this community of a Negro newspaper. Even were it true that a journal had no other cause for existence, this would be enough to make it indispensable.

Several attorneys have expressed the opinion that they doubted that the perpetrators of the attack would be punished unless the Negro citizens here demanded it. How many will accept this challenge and implore city and county officials to do their rightful duty?

White Policeman, Girl Killer, Declared Insane

Chicago Defender
6-28-30
Chicago, Ill.

NEW ORLEANS, June 27.—Charles Guerand, local white policeman, who was convicted of the brutal murder on Feb. 1 of Hattie McCray, a 14-year-old girl, was pronounced insane by Judge Henrigues Friday upon the report of three alienists, Drs. George Roeling, coroner; L. L. Cazanavette and Charles Holbrook. The finding automatically saves Guerand from hanging unless at a later date he is found sane.

Miss McCray, who had but recently quit school to assist in earning a living for her family, was employed in a restaurant at 2237 Tulane Ave. when she attracted the attention of the policeman. Declining to accede to his advances, the white man on the morning of the tragedy entered the restaurant and again approached the girl and became enraged when the young lady once more refused his insulting offers. The policeman drew his revolver and when the young lady attempted to hide behind the wife of the proprietor she was fatally shot. She died a few hours later at Charity hospital.

At the trial Guerand offered as his excuse for the brutal slaying that he was drunk. The trial jury found him guilty with capital punishment. His attorneys then sought to have a sanity commission appointed to determine whether he was insane at the time of the murder. The courts overruled this plea and while awaiting sentence to be hung, as provided by the Louisiana law, a commission was appointed to determine his present sanity. The report Friday saves the murderer from being the only white man to die on the gallows since before the war of Rebellion.

If at any time in the future the murderer is determined sane he can be hanged, unless his sentence is commuted. The case attracted nation-wide attention and was vigorously prosecuted by special counsel employed by the local branch of the N. A. A. C. P., officers of whom state that the murder will not be forgotten and later an effort will be made to see that the verdict of the jury will be enforced.

Jury Finds White Attacker Of Negro Girl Guilty

Recorder

YAZOO, Miss., May 1[illegible]—(CNS)—"We the jury find the defendant guilty as charged, but cannot agree on his punishment," was the verdict of a jury in the case of Emmett Norwood, white, tried for criminal assault on a 7-year-old Negro girl.

Norwood, 23 years old of near Shaw, Miss., came to visit friends near Bentonia, leaving there about 11:30 to go to his friend's home several miles distant. Passing a Negro school house he encountered four small children, one a girl 7 years old, who were just leaving school. Flourishing a knife, he drove the boys off, took the girl into the woods and assaulted her before her 5-year-old sister.

Norwood was identified by the girl and the other children. He denied the charge.

The penalty will automatically be life imprisonment and sentence will be passed at the end of this criminal term of court.

SAYS WHITE MAN AIDED TO RAPE HER

OXFORD, N. C., Oct. 30—(ANP)—This city, which was thrown into an uproar last week when Jeff Morrow was arrested, charged with assaulting a white woman, was again thrown into confusion when the victim, Mrs. Jessie Daniels, swore out a warrant for John C. Brooks, a white man, charging him with aiding and abetting Morrow in his alleged attack upon her. 11-1-30

Brooks denied that he went to Mrs. Daniels' home with Morrow at any time and stated that the first that he heard of the attack was when Morrow was arrested and rushed away before a mob could be formed. The testimony of the widowed white woman was corroborated by her two children, one a boy about 15 years old, and a girl, aged 13, who were at home when Brooks and Morrow went there.

Probable cause was found by the court and Brooks was held under a $500 bond. While the new angle in the case caused much confusion and discussion, there was no talk of lynching the white man.

3 WHITES HELD IN OKLA. FOR RAPE ON SCHOOL GIRL

OKLOHOMA CITY, Okla., July 2—An organized protest against the delay and seeming indifference of the prosecuting attorney in the case of three white men who criminally assaulted Akousa Carter, 17 years old colored school girl last week, has resulted in the arrest of three men who are being held for trial on a charge of rape.

The girl, who was kidnapped by the three men as she was returning home from vesper services at a neighboring church, reported the brutal attack to the police immediately following her release. The girl led the officers to the place where the crime occurred, and one of the men was captured and named his companions. It is alleged that the men confessed having raped the girl upon their arrest, but political pressure in their favor was brought to bear upon the prosecutor, who booked the case as disorderly conduct, until public protest forced action.

Atlanta, Ga.

Rogers had not been arrested and officers were seeking him in nort Texas after he had been seen aboard a Texas and New Orleans railroad train yesterday.

Miss Boseman claimed she was lured to a hotel room, where she was tortured with fire. She said coals on the ends of cigarettes and cigars had been pressed to her body. Scores of seared places were on her face, breast, arms and legs, officers said.

She said she was rescued from the room early yesterday morning. Members of her family said a young man, who was a stranger to them, had made a date with her for a picture show.

After the hotel physician treated her hurts she was sent to her home in a taxi. There was a bandage across one eye and the other had been blackened by a blow.

Attack On Character Of Colored Woman Doesn't Help

A jury in Corporation Court No. 2, Judge Shackelford presiding, returned a verdict of guilty in the case against Rock Schultz, a young white man, last Thursday, and fixed his punishment at 11 years in penitentiary, discrediting his story that he went to the home of Miss Flora Barber, residing at 115 High St. for the purpose of immoral conduct, instead of robbery as alleged in the indictment.

The defendant was charged with having robbed the young woman by force and stealing her purse and money when he tried to rush into her home where she was awakened by the intruder.

Schultz after striking Miss Barber a violent blow, according to the testimony, ran from the scene, followed by the victim in her night clothes. He had gone only a short distance from the scene when he ran into the arms of an officer.

While the character of Miss Barber was violently assailed, several prominent citizens for whom she had worked testified that she bore a fine reputation for veracity, industry, and morality. The case was ably prosecuted by Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney J. M. Arnold and Lester S. Parsons of the firm of Venable, Pilcher, and Parsons.

The defendant was represented by Judge W. L. Devany. A motion for a new trial was to be argued later, Judge Shackelford requiring a bond for $10,000 which the defendant could not raise.

TEN LYNCHINGS FOR FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1930

Washington Tribune
7-4-30
Washington, D.C.

The Mob Spirit Is On the Increase; More Than Doubled 1929

The mob spirit in the United States is on the increase as compared with the first six months of the past two years. Ten lynchings were perpetrated in this Christian country of ours in the first six months of this year. It is more than double the four recorded in the first six months of 1929; 4 more than the number 5 for the first six months of 1928, and is the same as the number 9 for the first six months of each of the years 1925 1926, and 1927; it is 4 more than the number 5 for the first six months of 1924; 6 less than the number 15 for the six months of 1923; 21 less than the number 30 for the first six months of 1922, and 27 less than the number 36 for the first six months of 1921.

Of the persons lynched 1 was white and 8 were Negroes. The offenses charged were rape, 5; murder, 1; bombing house, 1; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, 1; attempted rape, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi 1; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3. The total number lynched in South Carolina is 167.

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., July 1.—(AP)—The office of Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, announced today that nine lynchings were reported during the first six months of 1930, compared with five for the same period of 1929.

Texas led all other states with three, South Carolina had two, and Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma had one each.

Eight of the persons lynched were negroes and one was white. Five of the victims were charged with assault, two with slayings, one with bombing a house and one with attempted assault.

The figure is higher than any since the first six months in 1927, when nine persons were lynched.

However, it is six less than the number lynched during the same period in 1923; 21 less than the same period in 1922, and 27 less than in the first six months in 1921.

LYNCHING FIGURES

According to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, there were nine lynchings for the first six months of 1930, confined to the States of Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Texas. This number was five more than the number for the first six months of 1929, four more than the number for the same period of 1928, and the same for the first six months of 1925, 1926 and 1927.

While it is deplorable that nine lynchings should have taken place thus far this year within the boundaries of the United States, the fact remains that the remarkable decrease in the number of victims is the certain sign that this form of rough justice has been brought under a great degree of control and lends encouragement to the hope that it will soon be wiped out.

From 1892, which was the peak of lynchings in the United States, with 155 Negroes and 100 whites dying at the hands of the mobs, the number has been steadily reduced until in 1928 and 1929 there were eleven, the lowest figures in years.

Every now and then the sinister passions of man as a mob assume control of reason and fairness, and the entire country is shamed by a Sherman, Texas, outrage. But more frequently the country is witnessing—and approving—such a scene as occurred recently in Beaumont, Texas, when a stout-hearted sheriff, bent upon upholding the law, swung on the jaw of the leader of a mob which was out for a lynching party and broke up the evil attempt.

Lynchings are being rapidly isolated to remote communities of the South. For with the growth of population, the strengthening of law agencies, the increased facilities for preventing crime and apprehending criminals and, above all, the development of a determined public sentiment among the people of the South that this vile thing must not be, the rough justice of the mob is being thwarted and suppressed and eventually will be destroyed entirely.

Declare State Governments Have Broken Down

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 30 (A. P.)—Charging that twelve lynchings, or the same number as for ~~the entire~~ twelve months of 1929, had occurred in the six months ending to-day, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in its convention here to-day, issued a statement saying:

"There is little, if any, prospect that the known members of the murderous mobs who dethroned the courts and orderly government in this country and who disgraced us before the civilized world will be prosecuted or punished. State Government has again broken down in the face of this form of murderous anarchy and the conclusion will become inevitable for many law-abiding, decent citizens of both races that it will be necessary for the Federal Government to step in and preserve trial by jury, a basic constitutional right, for its citizens.

"The sending of a brass band to England by the Governor of Texas will not obscure the fact, known to all the civilized world, that Texas this year leads the roster of infamy with four of these murderous outrages, one of them committed in the presence of members of the Texas Rangers and involving the roasting alive of a human being who was confined in jail awaiting trial."

Tuskegee Study Shows Texas Leading in Mob Violence

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., July 1 (AP).—Statisticians in the office of Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, announced today that nine lynchings were reported in the United States during the first six months of 1930, as compared with five for the same period of 1929.

Texas led with three lynchings, South Carolina had two, and Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma had one each. Eight of the persons lynched were Negroes. One was white. Five of the victims were charged with assault, two with slayings, one with bombing a house and one with attempted assault.

The figure is higher than any since the first six months in 1927, when nine persons were lynched, the report recalled. However, it is six less than the number lynched during the same period in 1923, twenty-one less than the same period in 1922 and twenty-seven less than in the first six months in 1921.

LYNCHING INCREASE NOTED.

Tuskegee Reports 9 to Date in 1930 —4 in Like Period in 1929.

Lynching in the United States increased in the first six months of 1930 over like periods in the past two years and is less prevalent than it was eight and nine years ago, according to figures received yesterday from R. R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, Alabama. The figures, compiled by the institute's department of records and research, show that nine persons were lynched in the first six months of 1930. Four were lynched in the same period in 1929, five in 1928 and nine in 1925, 1926 and 1927.

In the first six months of 1924 five persons were lynched, in the same period in 1923 fifteen were lynched, in the same period of 1922 the number was thirty and in 1921, thirty-six. Eight of the persons lynched this year were Negroes and one was white. Three lynchings in 1930 occurred in Texas, two in South Carolina and one each in Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma.

A Lynching That Failed.

Of the nine lynchings which have blackened the record of the first six months of 1930, three occurred on Texas soil. There would have been another there just as the period closed but for W. W. Covington, sheriff of Jefferson county, who showed peace officers of the state how to stop murders by mobs. In the period, another Southern state had two killings of this nature and four others had one each; the lesson impressed by Sheriff Covington has application for these and for all others in which mob volence is likely to exhibit itself.

This sheriff had courage. That tells the story. Faced by the mob, he was not frightened by its clamor. Instead, he slapped the ringleader and the spirit and purpose of the crowd collapsed. The hoodlums—some of them possibly, respectable citizens in their milder moments—disappeared and the imprisoned object of their anger was safe. Never has the mob the asset of fortitude. Its strength lies in numbers alone. Like the wolf pack of the wilderness, it has power only so long as it is permitted to yelp unmolested. The false bravery of the rioters is dissipated when a man or men possessing a little real courage confronts them.

Western fiction has plenty of such instances. It is refreshing when one comes to light in real life. Texas should pay tribute to the sheriff of Jefferson and ask that other counties consider men of like calibre at election time.

12 LYNCHINGS ARE REPORTED FOR THIS YEAR

Number So Far Equals Entire Total Recorded in 1929

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 1 (A. P.)—Charging that twelve lynchings, or the same number as for the entire twelve months of 1929, had occurred in the six months ending to-day, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in its convention here, issued a statement saying:

"There is little, if any, prospect that the known members of the murderous mobs who dethroned the courts and orderly government in this country and who disgraced us before the civilized world will be prosecuted or punished. State Government has again broken down in the face of this form of murderous anarchy and the conclusion will become inevitable for many law-abiding, decent citizens of both races that it will be necessary for the Federal Government to step in and preserve trial by jury, a basic constitutional right, for its citizens.

"The sending of a brass band to England by the Governor of Texas will not obscure the fact, known to all the civilized world, that Texas this year leads the roster of infamy with four of these murderous outrages, one of them committed in the presence of members of the Texas Rangers and involving the roasting alive of a human being who was confined in jail awaiting trial."

TUSKEGEE HAS RECORDS OF ONLY NINE LYNCHINGS

Nine lynchings in the first six months of 1930 is the number given in the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., Dr. R. R. Morton, the Principal said to-day. Dr. Morton's letter says:

"I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find, according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department of Records and Research, that in the first six months of 1930 there were nine lynchings. This number is five more than for the first six months of 1929; four more than for the first six months of 1928 and is the same as for the first six months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; it is four more than the number for the first six months of 1924; six less than the number for the first six months of 1923; twenty-one less than the number for the first six months of 1922 and twenty-seven less than the number (thirty-six) for the first six months of 1921.

"Of the persons lynched one was white and eight were Negroes. The offenses charged were rape, five; murder, one; bombing house, one; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, one; attempted rape, one.

"The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Florida, one; Georgia, one; Mississippi, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three."

9 Reported in 1930 So Far; Five in First Half of 1929.

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., July 1 (A. P.).—Statisticians in the office of Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, announced today that nine lynchings had been reported in the United States during the first six months of 1930, as compared with five for the same period of 1929.

Texas led all other States with three. South Carolina had two, and Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma had one each.

Eight of the persons lynched were Negroes and one was white. Five of the victims were charged with assault, two with murder, one with bombing a house, and one with attempted assault.

The figure is higher than any since the first six months of 192[illegible] when nine persons were lynched, the report recalled. However, it is also less than the number lynched during the same period of 1923, twenty-one less than during the same period of 1922 and twenty-seven less than the first six months of 1921.

NINE SOUTHERN LYNCHINGS.

The record of lynchings for the first six months of the current year indicates that the trend is in a regrettable direction. There were more instances of mob action than in any corresponding period since 1927. The situation had shown signs of improving notably, but the number of summary illegal executions in the half-year gives evidence that the pendulum is swinging toward an increase of instances of mob law.

Nine persons have been lynched thus far this year and as is usually the case the Southern states furnished the theatre. Florida was the scene of one, Georgia of one, Mississippi of one, Oklahoma of one, South Carolina of two and Texas of three. One of the victims was white and the others were negroes.

While the record is notably better than was frequently illustrated a few years ago, the fact that it is worse than at any time since 1927 is of a character to diminish the confidence which had been felt that the South was steadily progressing to recognition of the evils sustained by that section through the setting aside of law. The lynchings are the more inexcusable because there is not the slightest danger that the culprits would escape merited punishment were they placed on trial under due process of law.

Lynchings On The Increase

Lynchings have increased in southern states over 1928 and 1929 and are back to where they were in 1927. This will be anything but heartening news to those who believed that the people were becoming more sober minded, and would let the law take its course.

For the first six months of 1930 nine lynchings occurred in Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Texas, and all were colored with the exception of one. This does not mean, however, that we are getting back to the period immediately following the war when the maximum number of lynchings was thirty for the first six months of 1922 and thirty-six for the first six months of 1921. Education has done much, and the papers of the south are to be commended for the continued agitation to let the law take its course.

We of the north, perhaps, do not realize the intense feeling over an atrocious murder or attacks made upon white girls by colored persons. A leader can create a mob under such conditions and if we are to prevent these lynchings each community will have to educate those who urge taking the law in their own hands. It is pretty hard at a distance to see things in the same light as a father does when a member of his family has been attacked. The laws, however, carry penalties to deal with this situation, and if allowed to take their course there is very little opportunity for a guilty individual to escape legal punishment.

Any attempt on the part of people to argue to the southerners that capital punishment is wrong would only end in promoting more lynchings. They feel that the taking of human life is justified under circumstances such as confront them when these atrocious crimes are committed. We want to commend the southern people who have, to a large extent, refrained from taking life in their own hands, and are setting a record for upholding laws unequalled a few years back.

LYNCHINGS IN THE SOUTH.

There were nine lynchings in the United States during the first six months of this year, five more than for the corresponding period of last year, according to Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Institute. The number is five more than in the first half of 1929, also four more than during the first six months of 1928, and is exactly the same as during the first half of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927.

The record, however, shows a falling off as compared with earlier years, for there were 36 lynchings during the first six months of 1921, 30 in the same part of 1922 and 15 in 1923. This reveals a gradual decline, and it is regrettable that the current year has shown any different trend.

All of the lynchings this year were in Southern States. There were three in Texas, two in South Carolina and one each in Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma.

Even with this unfavorable showing there is marked evidence of a change for the better on the part of the people in the South, as well as in the North. There is a general disposition nowadays to allow the law to take its course with offenders who at one time were dealt with by mobs. Reasonable persons can see that any other plan invites anarchy.

According to statistics compiled by the Tuskegee Institute, in the Department of Records and Research, there have been nine lynchings reported during the first six months of 1930, five more than the number during the same period in 1929.

Of those lynched, one was a white person, and eight were Negroes. The offenses charged were rape, 5; murder, 1; bombing house, 1; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, 1; and attempted rape, 1.

LYNCHING INCREASE NOTED.

Tuskegee Reports 9 to Date in 1930—4 in Like Period in 1929.

Lynching in the United States increased in the first six months of 1930 over like periods in the past two years and is less prevalent than it was eight and nine years ago, according to figures received yesterday from R. R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, Alabama. The figures, compiled by the institute's department of records and research, show that nine persons were lynched in the first six months of 1930. Four were lynched in the same period in 1929, five in 1928 and nine in 1925, 1926 and 1927.

In the first six months of 1924 five persons were lynched, in the same period in 1923 fifteen were lynched, in the same period of 1922 the number was thirty and in 1921, thirty-six. Eight of the persons lynched this year were Negroes and one was white. Three lynchings in 1930 occurred in Texas, two in South Carolina and one each in Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma.

LYNCHING INCREASE.

According to the report which comes from Muskogee Institute, where accurate record is kept of the lynchings in the country, this lawless method of disposing of alleged criminals is on the increase again. The records of the Institute show that in the first six months of 1930 there were nine lynchings. This number is 5 more than the number 4 for the first six months of 1929; 4 more than the number 5 for the first six months of 1928 and is the same as the number 9 for the first six months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; it is 4 more than the number 5 for the first six months of 1924; 6 less than the number 15 for the first six months of 1923; 21 less than the number 30 for the first six months of 1922 and 27 less than the number 36 for the first six months of 1921. These lynchings all were in the South, but they were none the less regrettable on that account. Lynching is illegal taking of human life, and that is murder. For some years the number of lynchings in the country had been decreasing and it was fondly hoped that we were becoming too civilized for such work. But this latest report is discouraging.

Lynchings

We are indebted to the Tuskegee Institute's department of records and research for information concerning lynchings in the United States during the first half of the past year.

At the time the report is received, authorities of two or three southern states are being driven to drastic measures to save negroes accused of crimes from mob violence.

According to the Tuskegee report, there were nine lynchings between January 1 and July 1. This number is five more than the total for the corresponding period of 1929. It is four more than the total for the first six months of 1928. It equals the number for the same period of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927. The first half of 1924 was marked by five lynchings. There were fifteen in the same period of 1923. Thirty lynchings occurred in the first six months of 1922 and in the corresponding period of 1921 there were thirty-six victims of mob violence.

Of the persons lynched so far this year, one was white and eight were negroes. The offenses charged were criminal assault in five cases, murder in one, slaying landlord in one, bombing in one and attempted criminal assault in one.

The states in which these lynching occurred and the number for each follow: Florida, one; Georgia, one; Mississippi, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two, and Texas, three.

Just when we were congratulating ourselves that this black blot on American civilization was gradually fading, the drift turns the other way and lynchings so far this year represent a 100 per cent increase over the totals for each of the preceding two years. It is a national disgrace which the organized forces of the law and the finer instincts of the race must stamp out. The fact that the victims of mobs this year are practically all negroes, as is the case every year, shows that racial hatred and intolerance are the two things, above all other factors, that must be combatted by those who would end these atrocities against known or suspected persons in heinous crimes.

Lynching Record

From Professor R. R. Moton, principal of the Tuskeegee Normal and Industrial institute, Tuskeegee, Alabama, we have received the lynching record for the first six months of 1930.

The southern states have slipped back, and for the first six months of 1930 there were five more lynchings than for the first six months of 1928. This is regrettable because it has appeared for the last two years that the south was getting away from this kind of thing. It is rather singular that we should have nine lynchings in the south during the first six months of this year, the same number as occurred in 1925, 1926 and 1927.

But, compared with the record from 1921 to 1923, we can point with pride to the fact that we are improving. For the first six months of 1921, there were thirty-six lynchings; for the first six months of 1922 there were twenty-seven lynchings; for the first six months of 1923 there were thirty lynchings.

Of the persons lynched for the first six months of this year, one was white and six were negroes; offenses charged: rape, five; murder, one; bombing house, one; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, one; attempted rape, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred, and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, one; Georgia, one; Mississippi, one; Oklahoma, one; North Carolina, two; Texas, three.

Some day we shall eliminate this barbarous custom and let the law handle the cases as it will if given an opportunity. In no instance that we recall in recent years has a lyncher failed to receive a speedy trial and justice in the courts. It is so much better for these cases to take a lawful course.

LYNCHINGS

Figures compiled by the department of records and research at Tuskegee institute reveal that in the first six months of 1930 there were nine lynchings in the United States; five more than the number for the first six months of 1929; four more than the number for the first six months of 1928; the same for the first six months of 1925, 1926 and 1927; four more than the number for the first six months of 1924.

However, in the first six months of 1923 there were 15 lynchings; in the first six months of 1922 there were 30; in the first six months of 1921 there were 36.

The figures are enlightening in that they indicate a consistent decrease in the number of lynchings between 1921 and 1929 and an increase since that time.

Perhaps the reason may be found in the relaxed vigilance on the part of those who were doing such good work in wiping out the underlying causes of the outrages.

NOT SO GOOD.

IN a communication to the Star-Journal, Principal R. R. Moton of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama school for negroes, gives the record of lynchings for the first six months of the present year. During this period, he shows, there were nine lynchings, eight of the victims being colored, and one white. Texas had three lynchings, South Carolina two, and Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma one each.

This is not a very good record, we submit. In recent years it had appeared that the number of lynchings was being reduced steadily, so that there was hope that in every part of the country public sentiment would not longer tolerate interference with the regular course of justice.

Texas has made a particularly bad record this year, in one instance a mob's violence having gone so far as to burn the court house. It is a situation that calls for serious consideration. In contrast with the dark portions of the state's record, however, there is the case of the sheriff at Beaumont who did not hesitate to use his fists, a gun and tear bombs to repel mobs bent upon taking the life of a prisoner. Perhaps if southern states had more such sheriffs, determined to protect prisoners and see that the law takes its course, there would be an end of lynchings.

Sooner or later, southern states will discover that mob law and mob rule are dangerous, and that they harm all.

DECREASE

THE NUMBER OF LYNCHINGS IS DISCLOSED

43 STATES FREE FROM EVIL—TEN OUTBREAKS IN 1929

New York—In its eighth annual honor roll of states free from lynching, the commission on race relations of the Federal Council of Churches shows that forty-three states had a clean record in 1929. While this number shows no increase over 1928, when forty-three states were similarly recorded as free of the lynching evil, it shows a decided increase in comparison with the second year of the keeping of the honor roll, 1923, when only thirty-nine states were free.

The honor roll shows a total of ten lynchings during 1929. New Mexico, which dropped from the roll in 1928, has been restored, and Florida, Kentucky and Tennessee have been removed because of lynchings in 1929. The number of lynchings for 1929 shows a reduction of one since 1928, when there were eleven victims. Of the ten persons lynched in 1929, four were in Florida, one each in Kentucky and Tennessee, one in Mississippi and three in Texas. Three of the victims were white and seven Negro.

According to the 1929 records of Dr. Monroe N. Work of Tuskegee Institute, there were twenty-seven instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, three in northern states and twnty-four in southern states. In twenty-four of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In three other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers.

"So long as the evil in lynching is still within our borders," said Dr. George E. Hayes, the federal council's secretary for race relations, "there is need for ever-increasing vigilance on the part of the religious forces of this land in order that respect for law and order may be preserved and protection of life guaranteed to every citizen."

Lynching Record Past Six Months

President Robert Moton, of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, colored, has been keeping the lynching record in the United States for the past several years, and announces it every six months for the preceding half year.

According to the records kept by him and announced today, July 1, there were 9 lynchings for the first six months of this year. This number is five more than the first six months of 1929, and four more than the first half of 1928, and the same number as the first half of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; it is four more than the number for the first six months of 1924; six less than the number for the first six months of 1923; 21 less than that of the first six months of 1922 and 27 less than that of the first half of 1921.

This record shows that there has been a great improvement in regard to the crime of lynching, as well as the crimes that lead up to it.

Of the persons lynched during the first six months of this year one occurred in Florida; one in Georgia; one in Mississippi; one in Oklahoma, two in South Carolina; and three in Texas. One of the victims was a white man and the others were negroes.

Texas Leads States in Lynchings for '30, Tuskegee Head Avers

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., July 1 (AP).—Statisticians in the office of Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, announced today that nine lynchings were reported in the United States during the first six months of 1930, as compared with five for the same period of 1929.

Texas led all other states with three. South Carolina had two, and Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma had one each.

Eight of the persons lynched were negroes and one was white. Five of the victims were charged with assault, two with slayings, one with bombing a house and one with attempted assault.

The figure is higher than any since the first six months in 1927 when nine persons were lynched, the report recalled.

However, it is six less than the number lynched during the same period in 1923; 21 less than the same period in 1922, and 27 less than in the first six months in 1921.

"The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, one; Georgia, one; Mississippi, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three."

The story herewith printed tells its own tale. It is an awful confession of incompetency or cowardice or weakness if we must admit that we cannot curb this long-standing evil. The crime of lynch-law is being curbed to some extent. Comparatively speaking, conditions are much better than they once were. Actually, they are much worse than they should be.

The evil of lynching, aside from the murderous aspect, which is terrible, is the fact that civilization crumbles and falls down just that much. Barbarians may do a number of things that civilized persons are not supposed to do. The savage can live without law, because he is a law unto himself. But he gets no higher than a condition of savagery, while the civilized individual should strive to be worthy of the name, and he is but semi-civilized when he joins a mob, defies the courts and proceeds to be judge, jury, and executioner.

What happens the next day if that one wants protection of the same law which yesterday he took into his own hands? That is the rub.

It is gratifying to note that conditions are getting better, and that there are fewer lynchings than there once were, that the American people for one reason and another are putting a stop to administration of law by mobs.

THE DECLINE OF LYNCHING.

There were more lynchings in the United States (all in five of the 48 states), during the first six months of 1929 than during the corresponding period of each of the preceding two years but the fact, while discouraging, does not testify that realization that lynching never is justifiable and that lynching itself, is an indefensible crime, has not gained ground notably during recent years. Statistics gathered by Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute "for the training of colored young men and women" and published in a bulletin issued by the institute follow:

"In the first six months of 1930 there were nine lynchings. This number is five more than the number four for the first six months of 1929; four more than the number five for the first six months of 1928 and is the same as the number nine for the first six months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; it is four more than the number five for the first six months of 1924; six less than the number 15 for the first six months of 1923; 21 less than the number 30 for the first six months of 1922 and 27 less than the number 36 for the first six months of 1921."

These facts establish that during the last decade there has been far progress, indeed, in the reduction of executions by mobs and imply that the increase in lynchings during the first half of the present year, as compared with the records of each of the preceding two years, need not be regarded as indicative of a permanent loss of ground by the efforts to discourage illegal executions in this country. Pressure of public opinion against lynching, measured in terms of the last decade, has brought highly gratifying results, and may be expected to be yet more effective during the coming corresponding period.

Record First Six Months Of 1930, Not So Good

According to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the department of records and research in the first six months of 1930 there were nine lynchings. This number is five more than the number four for the first six months of 1929; four more than the number five for the first six months of 1928 and is the same as the number nine for the first six months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927. It is four more than the number five for the first six months of 1924; six less than the number 15 for the first six months of 1923; 21 less than the number 30 for the first six months of 1922 and 27 less than the number 36 for the first six months of 1921.

Of the persons lynched one was white and eight were Negroes. The offenses charged were rape, five; murder, 1; bombing house, one; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, one; attempted rape, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, one! Georgia, one; Mississippi, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

While there has been improvement since 1921, still there were too many lynchings the first six months of 1930 even if there were but nine.

THE QUESTION of whether lynching is justifiable is figuring in the United States senatorial campaign in South Carolina, unbelievable as it may seem.

Senator Coleman L. Blease, up for re-election, discussed the subject in a campaign address.

"Whenever the Constitution comes between me and the virtue of white women in South Carolina, I say to hell with the Constitution," Blease is quoted as saying. When he was governor, he added, he did not call out the militia to protect negroes against mobs, and asked that when a suspect was caught that he be not notified until the next morning.

It would be difficult to equal such a statement for sheer barbarity and demagogism. It is a deliberate invitation to the people of South Carolina by an acknowledged leader, who boasts that he has held more political offices than any other man in the history of the state, to supersede normal legal processes with lynch law and mob violence. And there has been plenty of that in the South in recent weeks.

We cannot believe that such savagery reflects the views of the people of South Carolina. As a matter of fact, Blease's opponent in the senatorial race is now engaged in prosecuting 17 men accused of lynching a negro, and has asked heavy penalties for them.

Obviously men like Blease have no place in the Senate or in any other public office. It will be interesting to observe whether the decent people of South Carolina are willing to bear the stigma of having him again represent them.

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Statisticians in the office of Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, announced Tuesday that nine lynchings were reported in the United States during the first six months of 1930, as compared with five for the same period of 1929.

Texas led all other states with three. South Carolina had two, and Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma had one each.

Eight of the persons lynched were negroes and one was white. Five of the victims were charged with assault, two with slayings, one with bombing a house and one with attempted assault.

The figure is higher than any since the first six months in 1927 when nine persons were lynched, the report recalled.

However, it is six less than the number lynched during the same period in 1923; 21 less than the same period in 1922 and 27 less than in the first six months in 1921.

THE LYNCHING RECORD.

For the first six months of 1930 there have been nine lynchings, as against five for the corresponding period of 1929. It is possible that either more restriant will be shown during the next six months, or that occasion will be lacking, or that law enforcement officers in authority where the threat arises may be courageous or alert or both and that the number of lynchings will show a sufficient decrease to give the south as good a record this year as it made in 1929, but it isn't certain. All we know now is that we have started off worse and that if the same rate is maintained the year 1930 will be a dark one for the southern states in this respect.

Virginia, as is generally the case, shows a clean slate so far. Of the nine lynchings up to July 1, three are credited to Texas, two to South Carolina and one each to Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma, the last named not being properly classified as a southern state. North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Arkansas and Louisiana are other southern states which have no black mark beside their names.

"In going behind North Carolina's record, which, after all, is no occasion for special glory, as it represents what it should be in a civilized community," The Greensboro Daily News, says it "must frankly admit that the mob spirit has prevailed in the state several times during the period concerned in the report, and that the unstained record may be attributed more to a kind fate and alert, determined officers than to any great upward trend in the advanced civilization of the populace." It then cites examples of times when lynchings were narrowly averted, pointing out too, that in each instance the victim would have been an innocent one.

Virginia is especially fortunate in that it not only has had a clean slate, but has experienced no disposition toward a lynching. While fortuitous circumstances may have prevented threatened lynchings in some other states—as, for instance in Texas recently when a sheriff with courage quelled a mob—there has been no real threat in Virginia. Is it possible to hope that Virginia's freedom from this stain is caused not by lack of occasion, but by a more civilized attitude, by a real repugnance to mob law? It would be easier to believe that had arrest, conviction and punishment followed lynchings in all cases in the past.

LYNCHINGS

The record of lynchings in America for the first six months of 1930, is a blot on this nation's fair name. According to reports sent out by the Tuskegee Institute, in the first half of this year there were nine lynchings. This number is five more than for the first six months of 1929 and four more than for the same period of 1928.

Of the persons lynched one was white and eight were negroes. The charges included murder, rape, bombing houses and slaying a landlord in altercation over debt. Six states bring this shame to the nation: Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Texas. In all but the last two only one case was reported while in both South Carolina and Texas there were two lynchings in the first six months of the year.

No matter what the provocation, lynching is contrary to the American ideals of government. This is a democracy in which the majority rules. Men are duly elected by the people to maintain law and order and the nation will not tolerate mob rule.

For a few years there was every indication that lynching was outlawed but the present tendency toward general lawlessness is reflected in this year's record. It is the duty of every state, in which lynchings occur, to punish the leaders and bring such pressure to bear that no mob will attempt to take justice into its own hands.

THE REMEDY.

Lynchings in the south for the fir[illegible] months of 1930 increased by more than 100 per cent over those for the same period of 1929, according to the semi-annual report of the Tuskegee institute.

While the fact that there have already been nine lynchings this year, as compared with four last year, is discouraging to every citizen who has the proper regard for the good name and reputation of the south, this year's record is far better than those of the years prior to 1924, when the recent steady diminution in lynchings started.

In the first six months of 1923 there were 15 lynchings; for the same period of 1922 there were 30, and the total reached 36 in the first half of 1921. As deplorable and inexcusable, therefore, as has been the taking of nine lives by mob law so far this year there is certainly no indication of a lessening in the condemnatory public attitude, or vigilance of our peace officers, which have been responsible for the steady decline from the high figures of 1921.

Coincident with the announcement of the Tuskegee report, comes a news dispatch, telling of the single-handed dispersing of a mob by the sheriff of Beaumont, Texas. According to this report, this officer of the law did not wait behind barred doors until the temper of the mob had gotten beyond bounds, but instead left the protection of his jail and delivered a fistic attack upon the leader of the crew of hoodlums who were assaulting the jail.

The result was that this "leader" promptly decamped—and with him the mob.

Were more of our peace officers thus faithful and fearless in the performance of their duties, lynchings would soon disappear.

LYNCHINGS

The rioting and Negro-chasing in Alabama, which has caused six deaths, has made a bad record worse.

From Dr. R. R. Moton, principal of the Tuskegee Institute, we have received the account of lynchings in the first half of this year. In that period, Dr. Moton says, "there were 9 lynchings. This number is 5 more than the number 4 for the first six months of 1929; 4 more than the number 5 for the first six months of 1928 and is the same as the number 9 for the first six months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; it is 4 more than the number 5 for the first six months of 1924; 6 less than the number 15 for the first six months of 1923; 21 less than the number 30 for the first six months of 1922 and 27 less than the number 36 for the first six months of 1921.

Of those lynched 1 was a white and 8 were Negroes. The charges were rape, 5; murder, 1; bombing house, 1; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, 1; attempted rape, 1. The States involved were: Florida, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

Lamentable as it is that this year's record is, up to now, worse than last year's, we do not believe it represents any permanent recession. Only the other day a Southern sheriff killed off an incipient lynching bee by the use of his fists. Other officers of the law through the South are showing a willingness to defend the constitutional rights of Negro prisoners which they would not have dared to show a decade ago. The present Alabama trouble is, however, evidence that only by constant courage and vigilance can the authorities curb the evil where public opinion is not with them.

Until lynching disappears altogether from the crime records, there will be a blot on this country's 'scutcheon. Of all the cowardly, mean, brutal and uncivilized forms of crime, it is the most cowardly, the meanest, the most brutal and the most uncivilized.

Lynching Thus Far This Year

MAJ. Robert R. Moton of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute reports that there were nine lynchings in the first six months of this year. This is a bad start, for it is five more than there were in the first half of 1929, and four more than the number for the corresponding period in 1928. The total number of lynchings for last year was only 10: the first half of this year has brought the number to within one of that figure. If they should continue at the same rate the total for 1930 will be eight more than the total for last year.

The lynching record is better on the whole than it was 10 years ago: nevertheless such fluctuations as the annual record still shows continue to give support to the demand for a federal anti-lynching law—a demand that was renewed in this session of Congress. Despite the steady improvement seen when decade is compared with decade, the persistence of the evil is such that its complete elimination is probably far in the future. Those who believe that federal legislation would give it a death blow will not cease to move for such legislation.

Meanwhile a refreshing story of official resistance to would-be lynchers comes from Beaumont, Texas, the state guilty of three of the nine lynchings so far this year. Sheriff W. W. Covington of Beaumont protected a Negro in his custody Sunday with rifles, machine guns and tear bombs which, although not put to use, finally caused all but a determined remnant of a mob of 200 to disperse. Then the sheriff sallied out and administered a hard wallop to the jaw of the leader of the remnant and that ended the mob. If the South would elect more sheriffs not afraid to wallop mob leaders on their jaws, the lynching evil would speedily die a natural death.

The South Speaks

Increase in the number of lynchings is one of the most serious developments in our national life. Twelve such victims were tortured and killed by mobs during the last six months, a number equal to that of the entire year 1929.

We Americans have grown calloused to this curse. Some years ago public revulsion caused a recession of this wave of savagery. Now the wave is rising again.

And the only response of many otherwise decent citizens is the cheap plaint, "it's too horrible—don't talk about it."

Two recent events, however, have caused more thought on this tabooed subject than the lynchings themselves. One was the reported campaign statement of Senator Cole Blease of South Carolina: "Whenever the Constitution comes between me and the virtue of the white women of South Carolina, I say to hell with the Constitution."

The spectacle of a United States senator publicly defending this barbarism, and thus inciting potential mobs to crime, probably has done more to shame the public generally than has all the recent professional agitation against lynching.

Blease's declaration has had also one direct and immediate effect, as significant as it is hopeful. It has provoked statements by Governors of seven southern states, all condemning lynching, without qualification.

What these Governors say is not so important as how they say it. They seem to speak with the sincerity and grimness of men who are facing a great horror and are not afraid to fight.

Here are parts of their statements:

Governor Pollard of Virginia: "Lynching is barbarious. While I am Governor of Virginia, every power vested in me by law will be used to prevent any such blot on our civilization."

Governor Sampson of Kentucky: "I am opposed unalterably to mob law in any and all cases. If a mob may settle one case, it may settle all cases. The Constitution must be respected and all the power of the state will be commandered to protect the most humble citizen."

Governor Long of Louisiana: "I have been Governor of this state for two years and no one, white or black, has been lynched during that time. The policy of my administration has been to compel observance of the law."

Governor Gardiner of North Carolina: "I regard lynching and every other form of mob violence not only as morally wrong in every instance, but as fundamentally destructive of the rights of every citizen."

Governor Hardman of Georgia: "I am opposed to lynching or mob violence in any form. The Constitution of our country provides for a right of trial by a jury, which is fundamental."

Governor Moody of Texas: "A lawless execution at the hands of a mob is murder under the definition of that offense in our statutes, and every participant in such act is guilty of violating both the law of God and man. . . . However atrocious or revolting the crime of the mob's victims may be, there can be no justification for setting aside the orderly rule of law by an unruly mob, and there is no such thing as mob justice."

If these and other Governors will stand by their guns, the cowardly practice of lynching will cease.

LYNCHING RECORD

Records compiled at Tuskegee institute show that there were 9 lynchings during the first six months of 1930. This is 5 more than for the first 6 months of 1929; 4 more than for the first 6 months of 1928; it is the same as the number lynched during the first 6 months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; 4 more than for the first 6 months of 1924. Here the record changes and the first half of 1930 shows up decidedly better than earlier records. During the first 6 months of 1923 there were 23 lynchings; for the first 6 months of 1922 there were 30, and for the first 6 months of 1921 there were 36.

It appears from this record that during the first 6 months of 1930 the number of lynchings exceeded the number for the similar period in 1929, 1928 and 1924; was the same as for the 6 months-period in 1925, 1926 and 1927; and was considerably less than for the like period in 1923-22-21.

Of the persons lynched, 1 was white, 8 were negroes. The offenses charge were: rape, 5; murder, 1, bombing house, 1; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, 1; attempted rape, 1.

States in which these 9 lynchings occurred were: Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Oklahoma, 1 each, South Carolina 2, Texas 3.

North Carolina's record is clean again. What the figures indicate we do not know. Some years there is a falling off in the number of lynchings, and other years show an increase.

LYNCHING RECORD

Records compiled at Tuskegee institute show that there were 9 lynchings during the first six months of 1930. This is 5 more than for the first 6 months of 1929; 4 more than for the first 6 months of 1928; it is the same as the number lynched during the first 6 months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; 4 more than for the first 6 months of 1924. Here the record changes and the first half of 1930 shows up decidedly better than earlier records.

During the first 6 months of 1923 there were 28 lynchings; for the first 6 months of 1922 there were 30, and for the first 6 months of 1921 there were 36.

It appears from this record that during the first 6 months of 1930 the number of lynchings exceeded the number for the similar period in 1929, 1928 and 1924; was the same as for the 6 months-period in 1925, 1926 and 1927; and was considerably less than for the like period in 1923-22-21.

Of the persons lynched, 1 was white, 8 were negroes. The offenses charge were: rape, 5; murder, 1, bombing house, 1; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, 1; attempted rape, 1.

States in which these 9 lynchings occurred were: Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Oklahoma, 1 each, South Carolina 2, Texas 3.

North Carolina's record is clean again. What the figures indicate we do not know. Some years there is a falling off in the number of lynchings, and other years show an increase.

SOME IMPROVEMENT.

THE lynching record for the first six months of the current year contains very little for which the country may be proud.

Nine persons were lynched in six states during the first half of the present year as against four for the corresponding period of the previous year; five for the first six months of the year 1928.

Of the persons lynched, this year, one was in Florida; one in Georgia; one in Mississippi; one in Oklahoma; two in South Carolina, and three in Texas.

There were one white man and eight negroes lynched. The offenses charged against the victims were, rape, five; murder, one; bombing house, one; slaying landlord in an altercation over a debt, one, and attempted rape, one.

Notwithstanding the bad record made, there are evidences that lynching will soon cease to be an effort on the part of mobs to anticipate the law. For there is a growing sentiment that members of lynching mobs shall not be permitted to expect immunity for their crimes against the law and against humanity.

More and more frequently are arrests made and indictments found against lynchers, and officers of the law are much more alert now to perform their duty in the premises than in the past.

At the present writing no less than forty-nine men are awaiting trial in connection with the Texas lynchings.

Convictions in these and other like cases will have a wholesome effect in restraining those impetuous and cowardly persons who resort to lynching. They will also show other communities that there is a way, after all, to discover and punish those who wilfully take the law into their own hands, to the disgrace of those communities in which lynchings occur.

Nine Lynchings In Southern States in Past Six Months

Statisticians in the office of Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, announced last week that nine lynchings were reported during the first six months of 1930 as compared with five for the same period in 1929.

Texas led all other states with three, South Carolina had two, and Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma had one each.

Eight of the persons lynched were negroes and one was white. Five of the victims were charged with assaul, two with slayings, one with bombing a house and one with attempted assault.

The figure is higher than any since the first six months in 1927 when nine persons were lynched, the report recalled.

However, it is six less than the number lynched during the same period in 1922 and 27 less than in the first six months in 1921.

LYNCHING IN SOUTH A POLITICAL ISSUE

Blease Statement in Senate Race Widely Condemned in the Newspapers.

MOB MURDERS INCREASE

With Killings for First Six Months Already High, This Year Is Seen as Setting a New Record.

By LENOIR CHAMBERS.

Editorial Correspondence, THE NEW YORK TIMES

NORFOLK, Va., July 15.—Senator Coleman L. Blease's advocacy of lynch law for Negroes guilty of criminally assaulting white women, made in his Union (S. C.) speech in his campaign for nomination for the United States Senate, came only a few days after reports issued by both Tuskegee Institute and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had indicated the probability that the 1930 lynching record will be worse than the average for the past seven years.

The Blease statement, as reported by The Associated Press, concerned only instances in which criminal assault by a Negro on a white woman was shown. "Whenever the Constitution comes between me and the virtue of the white women of South Carolina," Senator Blease was reported as saying, "I say, 'To hell with the Constitution.'" These words were uttered only a few weeks after a mob in South Carolina had murdered a Negro accused of such an attack and while a group of men charged with participation in an earlier lynching, for the same sort of attack, including a police officer and the Mayor of a small town, were awaiting trial.

The Record for the Year.

Both of these South Carolina lynchings were included in the Tuskegee and N. A. A. C. P. reports for the first six months of 1930, showing nine and twelve lynchings, respectively, the difference in the figures being due largely to differences in the definition of a lynching. Since these reports came out, however, the racial outbreak near Emelle, Ala., in which six persons were killed and others wounded after a dispute over a second-hand battery for an automobile, has added at least one lynching and perhaps others to the 1930 total.

The Tuskegee records show eleven lynchings in both 1929 and 1928, sixteen in 1927, thirty in 1926, seventeen in 1925 and sixteen in 1924. The total already recorded this year suggests that before 1930 has run its course it will be a year of retrogression rather than improvement in the effort to curb mob murders. Moreover, the violence which has accompanied several lynchings, notably those at Sherman, Texas, and Emelle, Ala., introduced an added ferocity against persons not even indirectly connected with the original offense which sets 1930 apart as one of the blackest years in the recent history of lynch law.

Various efforts have been made by students of contemporary life in the South to account for the 1930 record, none of them perhaps being altogether satisfactory. There has been no change in the attitude of that large and growing part of the public which has always condemned lynch law and which has been influential in the improvement in recent years. Senator Blease's Union speech was widely and severely condemned in the Southern press. In South Carolina The Charleston News and Courier in a front-page editorial asserted that the issue in his campaign has now become approval or disapproval of lynching. The number of instances in which prompt action by local officers or by Governors has removed the danger of lynching is impressive. North Carolina has a notable record in that respect. Virginia has attacked the problem in another way, by legislative statute, and that State has also an excellent record in recent years.

North Carolina's Progress.

In North Carolina a group of trials and convictions and heavy sentences for members of mobs set a precedent which has discouraged mob violence. Sheriffs and local officers who capture men charged with crimes which have inflamed local opinion have developed also high skill in carrying their prisoners to larger towns and cities, perhaps several counties distant, or even to the State capital, for safe keeping. They do not hesitate to do so even if the threat seems slight. The attitude of recent Governors, including Governor O. Max Gardner and his predecessors, Governor Angus W. McLean and Cameron Morrison, has been helpful. They have ordered out units of the National Guard frequently when mob spirit was reported. In several instances troops have stood guard during trials. Special efforts have been made to convene grand juries and courts quickly and to speed up the judicial processes in order to obtain prompt verdicts. The results have been encouraging.

The Virginia effort to curb lynching has included a legislative weapon which is unusual in Southern States. The 1928 Legislature passed a bill, largely through the influence of Governor Harry F. Byrd, which was specifically designed to curb lynching. It defines a mob as "a collection of people assembled for the purpose and with the intent of committing an assault and (or) battery upon any person and without authority of law" and a lynching as "any act of violence by a 'mob' upon the body of any person which shall result in the death of such person." The act provides that any and every person composing a "mob" which shall commit an assault without authority of law shall be guilty of a felony, and that "the 'lynching' of any person within this State by a 'mob' shall be deemed murder, and any and every person composing a 'mob' and any and every accessory thereto, by which any person is lynched, shall be guility of murder, and upon conviction shall be punished" as provided in the Code of Virginia.

In addition, the act points out the duty of local officers to ascertain the identity of members of a mob and prosecute them, and then adds: "And to the end that such offenders may not escape proper punishment, such attorney for the Commonwealth may be assisted in all such endeavors and prosecutions, by the Attorney General, or other prosecutors designated by the Governor for the purpose; and the Governor shall have full authority to spend such sums as he may deem necessary for the purpose of seeking out the identity and apprehending the members of such guilty 'mob.'"

The lynching record of the first part of this year is more unfavorable than that of either 1928 or 1929. Principal Moton of Tuskegee Institute, who makes a practice of furnishing such statistics to the press twice a year, announced the number for the six months ending June 30 as nine—and there has been at least one other lynching since that date. Whether this Alabama crime will be included in the final figures for the year is not certain. It was committed in hot blood, in connection with the pursuit and capture of undoubted Negro murderers. It is described as a "lynching," but did not have the accompaniment of defiance to the orderly processes of the law that characterized the recent attempt to get a Negro prisoner in Texas—which was frustrated by the bravery and determination of the sheriff. Unless the rest of the year can show nearly a clean slate, 1930 will have the worst record that has been made for several years in this regard.

GOVERNORS HIT AT LYNCHINGS

Executives of Seven Southern States Condemn Practice as Barbarous.

BY FOSTER EATON.

(Copyright, 1930, By United Press.)

ATLANTA, Ga., July 23.—Governors of seven Southern states stretching from Virginia to Texas joined today in statements to The United Press condemning the practice of lynching and urging strict observance of the letter and spirit of the law upon all elements of society.

The statements were requested primarily in view of a statement recently given wide publication, in which United States Senator Cole Blease of South Carolina, campaigning for re-election, was quoted as saying:

"Whenever the Constitution comes between me and the virtue of the white women of South Carolina, I say to hell with the Constitution."

Lynching Record For The First Six Months Of 1930

Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the first six months of this year. I find according to the records compiled at Tuskegee Institute in the Department [redacted] Research that in the first six months of 1930 there were 9 lynchings. This number is 5 more than the number 4 for the first six months of 1929; 4 more than the number 5 for the first six months of 1928 and is the same as the number 9 for the first six months of each of the years 1925, 1926 and 1927; it is 4 more than the number 5 for the first six months of 1924; 6 less than the number 15 for the first six months of 1923; 21 less than the number 30 for the first six months of 1922 and 27 less than the number 36 for the first six months of 1921.

Of the persons lynched 1 was white and 8 were negroes. The offenses charged were rape, 5; murder, 1; bombing house, 1; slaying landlord in altercation over debt, 1; attempted rape, 1.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Florida, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

Yours cery truly,

ATLANTA, Ga., July 23.—Governors of seven southern states stretching from Virginia to Texas joined today in statements to the United Press, condemning the practice of lynching and urging strict observance of the letter and spirit of the law upon all elements of society

The statements were requested primarily in view of a statement recently given wide publication, in which United States Senator Cole Blease of South Carolina, campaigning for re-election, was quoted as saying:

"Whenever the constitution comes between me and the virtue of the white women of South Carolina, I say to hell with the constitution."

Seventeen men await trial in South Carolina on charges of participating in a lynching there.

Six men are on trial in Atlanta, charged with shooting to death a Negro divinity student.

A grand jury soon will begin an investigation ordered by Gov. Bibs Graves, of Alabama, into six deaths in a disturbance at Emelle, Ala.

When the statement of one of the governors who responded to a general request was read to Governor L. G. Hardman of Georgia, he told the United Press:

"'He speaks for us all.'"

The statements follow:

Governor John Garland Pollard of Virginia:

"I think lynching is barbarous. While I am governor of Virginia every power vested in me by law will be used to prevent any such blot on our civilization. My predecessors in office and a vast majority of the good people of this state take the same view, and fortunately lynchings in Virginia have been very rare."

Governor O. Max Gardner of North Carolina:

"I regard lynching and every other form of mob violence not only as morally wrong in every instance, but as fundamentally destructive of the rights of every citizen."

Governor John G. Richards of South Carolina:

"There can be no justification for lynching. This has always been my position, and since becoming governor of South Carolina I have used every power at my command to prevent a resort to such illegal practices."

Governor L. G. Hardman of Georgia:

"In regard to lynching, I wish to say that I am opposed to lynching or mob violence in any form. The constitution of our country provides for a right of a trial by a jury. The principle of mob violence is fundamentally wrong."

Governor Flem D. Sampson of Kentucky:

"I am unalterably opposed to mob law in any and all cases. All the power of the state will be commendeered to protect the most humble citizen in his constitutional rights."

Governor Huey P. Long of Louisiana:

"The policy of my administration has been to compel an observance of the law on both sides. That is, that there be no pardon abuse, and second, none to punish except the authority of the state; that is, that the state administers all 'revenge' of the law after due process."

Governor Dan Moody of Texas:

"A lawless execution is murder under the definition of that offense in our statutes, and every participant in such an act is guilty of violating both the law of God and man. Every act of mob violence is a reproach to the community in which it is committed and is an undeserved reflection upon the willingness of the good citizenship of the community to enforce the law through the regularly established courts of justice."

9 LYNCHINGS REPORTED

Tuskegee Institute Announces Eight Negroes, White Man Were Victims.

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., July 1.—(AP)—Statisticians in the office of Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, announced today that nine lynchings were reported during the first six months of 1930 as compared with five for the same period in 1929.

Texas led all other states with three. South Carolina had two, and Florida, Georgia Mississippi and Oklahoma had one each.

Eight of the persons lynched were negroes and one white man. Five of the victims were charged with assault, two with slayings, one with bombing a house and one with attempted assault.

The figure is higher than any since the first six months in 1927 when nine persons were lynched, the report recalled.

However, it is six less than the number lynched during the same period in 1923, twenty-one less than the same period in 1922 and 27 less than in the first six months in 1921.

~~Tuskegee Institute~~, Ala., July 9.—(INS)—Nine lynchings were reported to the ~~Tuskegee Institute~~ here during ~~the first~~ six months of 1930, compared with only five for the same period in the preceding year, according to an announcement made here.

Three lynchings took place in Texas; two in South Carolina and Georgia, Mississippi, Florida and Oklahoma recorded one each, according to statistics at the Institute.

Lowell, Mass. Courier
JUL 10 [illegible]

The lynching record of the first part of this year is more unfavorable than that of either 1928 or 1929. Principal Moton of Tuskegee Institute, who makes a practice of furnishing such statistics to the press twice a year, announced the number for the six months ending June 30 as nine—and there has been at least one other lynching since that date. Whether this Alabama crime will be included in the final figures for the year is not certain. It was committed in hot blood, in connection with the pursuit and capture of undoubted Negro murderers. It is described as a "lynching," but did not have the accompaniment of defiance to the orderly processes of the law that characterized the recent attempt to get a Negro prisoner in Texas—which was frustrated by the bravery and determination of the sheriff. Unless the rest of the year can show nearly a clean slate, 1930 will have the worst record that has been made for several years in this regard.

FROM THE MOST INFAMOUS OF PUBLIC RECORDS

Submitting the lynching record for the first six months of 1930, Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute—that has compiled authoritative statistics for many years—reports a relapse from the improvement lately shown:

The nine mob crimes in the six months are compared with four in the first half of 1929 and five in the first half of 1928. But beside such years as 1921, when 36 persons were lynched during the first six months; and 1922, when 30 mob victims were counted in the like period, the 1930 record appears almost mild.

As too frequently in the past, Texas bears the infamy of leading the lynching roll. The report charges this State with three such outbreaks. South Carolina reported two; Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma, one each. This was the first Georgia lynching since 1927, when a court sentenced a mob ringleader for life, and his accomplices for two to five years, in the penitentiary. Before that rare judicial action, the State had figured prominently in the record year after year.

Both South Carolina and Texas have moved toward the trial of persons charged with taking part in each State's most conspicuous mob crime of the year—at Walhalla and Sherman, respectively. These States must follow Georgia's example and read would-be lynchers a warning that they will be amenable to the law. Conceivably, that lesson might be effective for more than three years. Should trial be postponed repeatedly—following the usual practice in criminal cases—however, much of the moral effect would be lost.

Judge and prosecutor should consider that lynching is not an ordinary crime. It is worse than murder under other circumstances, because of the outrage upon justice and the State's good name. Greater expedition, more official resoluteness, in handling mob offenses might help discourage such crimes.

THE LYNCHING RECORD

The lynching record for the first six months of this year as given by Tuskegee Institute is as follows: Florida, 1; Georgia, 1; Mississippi, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

It is noticed that no lynchings occurred in Alabama, and that is most gratifying.

It is also noticed that Texas, as usual, leads the South with three lynchings, and had it not been for the courage of a Texas sheriff last week the number would have been increased to four. This sheriff, Bill Covington, of Beaumont, broke up a would-be lynching party by advancing to the ring-leader and cracking him on the jaw with his fist.

If every county in every State had officers of that caliber there would seldom be a lynching.

LYNCHINGS.

According to records compiled in Tuskegee Normal & Industrial institute nine lynchings occurred in the first six months of this year. In the same period of 1929 mob victims numbered only four. The 1930 record is also unfavorable when compared with that of the first half of 1928, in which only five lynchings occurred. It is the same as the records for the first six months of 1925, 1926 and 1927.

While an increase this year is regrettable great improvement is noted when comparisons are made with records before 1924. In the first six months of 1923, for example, 15 persons were lynched. In 1922 mobs had murdered 30 persons by July 1 and in 1921 the half-year record was 36. The usual ratios are effective this year. The victims thus far were one white man and eight Negroes and the 1930 lynchings have occurred in Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Texas.

INCREASE SHOWN IN TOTAL OF LYNCHINGS

Tuskegee Institute, Va., July 1.—(AP)—Statisticians in the office of Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, announced today that nine lynchings were reported in the United States during the first six months of 1930, as compared with five for the same period of 1929.

Texas led all other states with three. South Carolina had two, and Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Oklahoma had one each.

Eight of the persons lynched were Negroes and one was white. Five of the victims were charged with assault, two with slayings, one with bombing a house and one with attempted assault.

The figure is higher than any since the first six months in 1927, when nine persons were lynched, the report recalled.

However, it is six less than the number lynched during the same period in 1923, 21 less than the same period in 1922 and 27 less than in the first six months in 1921.

1930 LYNCHINGS DOUBLE TOTALS IN FORMER YEAR

Tuskegee President's Report Shows One for Alabama; 20 of 21 Were Negroes

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Dec. 31.—(AP)—Dr. R. R. Moton, president of Tuskegee Institute, today issued his annual report on lynchings in the United States showing that 21 persons were lynched during 1930. He pointed out that this was 11 more than in 1929, 10 more than in 1928, and five more than in 1927, and nine less than in 1926.

Fourteen of the persons lynched were taken from official custody. Of these three were killed in jails, two being shot to death. Of the seven who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

Twenty of those lynched were negroes. The offenses were rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, two; being a witness, one; bombing a house, one; charge not reported, one.

The lynchings were distributed by states as follows:

Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

"There were," the report states, "forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guard augmented or other precautions taken. In the other seven cases armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers."

STATISTICS ON LYNCHING

Robert Moton, principal of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, Alabama, sends The Journal information regarding lynchings which have occurred in 1930. In all, 21 persons were lynched, of which number one was white and 20 were Negroes.

There is much statistical data regarding instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, the method of putting the victims to death and so on, none of which is of particular interest in the north where actual lynchings are of rare occurrence. One paragraph which is of interest has to do with the states in which lynchings occurred. They were: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas 3.

It will be noted that all these lynchings occurred in the south.

Lynchings for 1930 Show Upward Trend

Lynchings in the United States mounted to a higher point during 1930 than during any year since 1926, when 30 persons were victims of mob rule. According to figures released by the records and research department of Tuskegee Institute, 21 persons were lynched in 1930.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which maintains a similar bureau, states that 25 were lynched. Both disclose that only one of the victims was white.

Defender
1-3-31

Not only did the number of lynchings increase during the past year, but the barbarity of the lynchers was more like that of savages.

In Texas, a case that was discussed all over the world because of a statement attributed to the governor of the state, George Hughes was burned alive in the jail at Sherman and the body of George Johnson was publicly burned at Honey Grove in the same state. Governor Moody is said to have ordered the state militia not to shoot anybody to save the prisoner.

During the Texas lynchings, particularly the Sherman disgrace, it is said that women and children milled about the crowd hilariously as mobbists pulled the charred remains of Hughes from the jail vault and dragged them through the streets. Others howled like cannibals as the blood-thirsty sons of the Lone Star state set fire to the principal buildings and homes in the nonwhite residential section of the town.

Marion, Ind., vied with Sherman for "honors" for the most atrocious lynching. In August under a blazing sun several hundred of the town's leading citizens, according to reports, watched serenely while a mob took two youths from the city jail and hanged them to trees in the courthouse yard.

In the crowd yelling with glee at the wretched sight, pictures of the actual lynching showed women soon to become mothers. Young boys and girls, and babies in their mothers' arms also were in the throngs.

In view of the fact that mob rule was fought harder by press, pulpit and bar during the past 12 months than during any other similar period in the history of the practice, it is believed that the unemployment situation contributed to the increased number of lynchings in 1930.

Walter White, acting secretary of the N. A. A. C. P., shared the belief. It is seen in his statement that "in periods of depression, when tempers are short, mob hysteria flames up more quickly than in normal times."

'During the year representative white women of 12 Southern states, including church, educational, voters, Y. W. C. A. and club groups have issued statements declaring they desired no such 'protection' and characterized lynchings as 'the complete breakdown of government and the triumph of anarchy' and stating that 'it brutalizes the community where it occurs, including the women and children who frequently witness its orgies, and particularly the youth who are usually conspicuous participants.'"

The 21 persons lynched in 1930 are 11 more than the number 10 for 1929; 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were killed in jails; two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when the mob burned the jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. In 3 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 men and two women of the Race were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

The offenses for which those lynched were charged with were: Rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bommbing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Missisipi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

GEORGIA LEADS ALL STATES FOR LYNCHINGS DURING 1930

Tuskegee Credits State With Six Illegal Killings; 21 in Entire Nation

Twenty-one persons were lynched in the United States in 1930—11 more than the number in 1929—according to a report released yesterday by the Tuskegee Normal and Memorial institute, at Tuskegee, Ala. Twenty of those illegally executed were Negroes, the report said.

This is the largest number of persons lynched since 1926, the report stated. Six of the killings took place in Georgia, the highest ranking state in that regard. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of officers. Three were killed in jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death in another manner and his body burned, it was said.

Macon Telegraph

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, according to the Tuskegee report. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. Armed force was used in seven cases to repel the would-be lynchers.

Only One White

Of the 21 persons lynched, only one was white. The offenses were: Criminal assault, eight; murder, three; attempted criminal assault, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing a house, one; charge not reported, one.

1-31

The states in which the lynchings occurred, according to the Tuskegee report, and the number in each state, follow: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

These figures vary in several instances from those contained in a report recently issued by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which listed a total of 25 lynchings. Twenty-four of these were Negroes, and seven of the lynchings were in Georgia, according to the association. Criminal assault was listed as the cause of only three of the lynchings.

Tennessee Has No Lynchings in 1930; 21 In Whole Nation

55

On not one single occasion during the past year did a body of citizens in Tennessee take the law in their own hands and administer the death penalty to one accused or guilty of crime.

Other states in the South did not fare so well, however. At least one lynching was recorded in every state south of the northern boundary of Tennessee and east of the Mississippi.

In the United States as a whole, 21 persons, one white man and 20 negroes, were lynched during 1930, more than have been lynched in any one year since 1926, when the number reached 30. In 1927, 16 persons were lynched, in 1928, 11 persons, and in 1929, 10 persons.

Of the persons lynched, 14 were taken from the hands of the law, and seven before they were arrested. Two were burned to death, while another was shot and his body burned.

On the other hand, there were 40 instances when lynchings were prevented by the officers of the law, five in the north and west and 35 in the south. A total of 60 persons—six white men, 52 negro men, and two negro women—were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

The offences in the 21 cases where persons were lynched were as follows: rape, 8;; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

States where lynchings occurred and the number in each are as follows: Georgia, 6; Mississippi, 4; Texas, 3; South Carolina, 2; Indiana, 2; Alabama 1; Florida, 1; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma 1.

Dr. Moton Reports Increase of Eleven Over Previous Year. One White Man Victim.

Tuskegee, Ala., Jan, 1.—(A. P.)—Dr. R. R. Moton, president of Tuskegee institute, has issued his annual report on lynchings in the United States, showing that 21 persons were lynched during 1930. He pointed out that this was 11 more than in 1929, 10 more than in 1928, 5 more than in 1927 and 9 less than in 1920.

Fourteen of the persons lynched were taken from official custody. Of these three were killed in jails, two being shot to death. Of the seven who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

Twenty of those lynched were negroes. The offenses were: Rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 2; being a witness, 1; bombing a house, 1; charge not reported, 1.

The lynchings were distributed by states as follows:

Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

"There were," the report states, "forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and thirty-five in southern states. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guard augmented or other precautions taken. In the other seven cases armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers."

STATISTICS ON LYNCHING

Robert Moton, principal of the kegee Normal and Industrial stitute, Alabama, sends The Journal information regarding lynch which have occurred in 1930. In all, 21 persons were lynched, of which number one was white and 20 e Negroes.

There is much statistical data regarding instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, the method of putting the victims to death and so on, none of which is of particular interest in the north where actual lynchings are of rare occurrence. One paragraph which is of interest has to do with the states in which lynchings occurred. They were: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, ; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; outh Carolina, 2; Texas 3.

It will be noted that all these lynchings occurred in the south.

The country's record of lynching o negroes during the year just come t a close is nothing to be proud of, th number of persons lynched being th highest since the poor year of 192 There were 21 lynchings in 1930, a compared with 10 for 1929, 11 for 192 16 for 1927 and 30 for 1926. In connection with the lynchings of 193 it is notable that 14 of the 21 lynche were already in the hands of the la and, presumably, were on the way t fair trial and, if convicted, would hav been punished according to the law But the mob could not wait for the or derly procedure of the law; the mo stormed the jails and seized the cow ering accused. In only seven instance did the mob catch its man before put ting him through the paces of awfu lynching. The mob depended upon th law to go through the initial phases in making the capture and locking th suspect up in jail. The law having gone that far, it might have been expected to carry through. Why not? It was virtually certain there would have been 14 convictions.

GEORGIA LEADS ALL STATES FOR LYNCHINGS DURING 1930

Twenty-one persons were lynched in the United States in 1930—11 more than the number in 1929—according to a report released yesterday by the Tuskegee Normal and Memorial institute, at Tuskegee, Ala. Twenty of those illegally executed were Negroes, the report said.

This is the largest number of persons lynched since 1926, the report stated. Six of the killings took place in Georgia, the highest ranking state in that regard. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of officers. Three were killed in jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death in another manner and his body burned, it was said.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, according to the Tuskegee report. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. Armed force was used in seven cases to repel the would-be lynchers.

Only One White

Of the 21 persons lynched, only one was white. The offenses were: Criminal assault, eight; murder, three; attempted criminal assault, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing a house, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which the lynchings occurred, according to the Tuskegee report, and the number in each state, follow: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

These figures vary in several instances from those contained in a report recently issued by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which listed a total of 25 lynchings. Twenty-four of these were Negroes, and seven of the lynchings were in Georgia, according to the association. Criminal assault was listed as the cause of only three of the lynchings.

LYNCHINGS IN 1930

There was an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930 in comparison with 1929, according to the report of the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, which every year keeps tab on violences of this kind. There were twenty-one lynchings in 1930, according to this report. This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number eleven for 1928, five more than the number sixteen for 1927, and nine less than the number thirty for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and thirty-five in Southern states. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two negro men and two negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, one was white and twenty were negroes. The offenses were: rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

The encouraging feature of the record for the year, according to the report sent out by Robert R. Moton, principal of the Tuskegee Institute, is in the number of lynchings prevented during the year, as indicated by the summary of lynchings and attempted lynchings. It will be noted that in forty-five instances officers of the law prevented lynchings, and there is a good lesson in that for men who are charged with the safe-keeping of prisoners, and whose duty it is to see to it that they get the full benefit of their legal rights in all cases.

It is unfortunate that we had an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930 but the record for the year, as revealed by the Tuskegee report, shows that we can still further reduce these unfortunate happenings, and officers of the law should profit by that fact.

Dr. Moton's Annual Report Shows One Victim Of Mob In Alabama

Twenty-one persons were lynched in the United States in 1930, according to records compiled by the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute and announced yesterday by Dr. R. R. Moton, principal.

Of the 21 who met death at the hands of mobs, six were lynched in Georgia, four in Mississippi, three in Texas, two in Indiana, two in South Carolina and one in Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

This is the greatest number lynched since 1926 when 30 met death at the hands of mobs. In 1929 only 10 were lynched, in 1928 only 11 and in 1927 there were 16.

Fourteen of the persons lynched in 1930 were in the hands of the law; three were slain in jails, five were taken from jails and killed and six from officers of the law outside of the jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western States and 35 in Southern states. In 33 cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In seven other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs, it was reported.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: Statutory, eight; murder, three; attempted assault, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one and charge not reported, one.

Lynching on the Increase

Statistics on lynching compiled by the Tuskegee Institute show there were 21 persons lynched in 1930, exceeding the record of any year since 1926. This is 17 more than in 1929, 10 more than in 1928, 5 more than in 1927 but 9 less than in 1926. Fourteen of the victims were in the hands of the law, 3 were killed in jails, 5 taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven who were not under arrest, one was burned to death and one burned after death.

Of the 21 lynched, 1 was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: rape 8, murder 3, attempted rape 2, killing law officers 2, robbery 3, being a witness 1, bombing houses 1, charge not reported 1. Georgia, as usual, led the lynchings with 6, Mississippi was second with 4, Texas staged 3, South Carolina and Indiana 2 each, with one each in Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

On the other side of the balance sheet, officers of the law in 40 cases prevented lynchings, 5 in the northern states and 35 in the southern states. A total of 60 persons were saved from mobs, 6 whites, 52 negro men and 2 negro women. In 23 of the cases, the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented and in 7 cases troops or other armed forces repelled the mobs.

The increase in lynchings, like the increase in crime, is largely due to unfavorable economic conditions which make for unrest and discontent. The showing however, is not a favorable one for a country that calls itself civilized but the increased efforts of southern law officers to prevent lynchings is an encouraging sign. The South Carolina law, which makes a sheriff and his bondsmen liable for damages to heirs of those lynched, should be enacted in other states as a deterrent of lynching.

LYNCHINGS IN 1930

Number Was 21—11 More Than in 1929; One White, 20 Negroes.

To the Editor of The Union.

Sir: I send you the following information concerning lynching for the year 1930. I find, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number (10) for 1929, 10 more than the number (11) for 1928, five more than the number (16) for 1927 and nine less than the number (30) for 1925. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when the mob burned the jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western States and 35 in Southern States. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. THE 1930 LYNCHING RECORD

TWENTY-ONE PERSONS were lynched in the United States during 1930, according to the report compiled by the Tuskegee Normal Institute, compared with [illegible] for 1929 and eleven for 1928. One white and [illegible]ty negroes met death at the hands of mobs, and with the exception of two lynchings in Indiana, all the mob outlawry was in Southern states. Texas provided three of the lynchings.

This is a bad report, discouraging the hope that was provided in 1928 and 1929 that mob outlawry was waning in the South, but there is one fact in connection with it that is distinctly gratifying. There were forty instances, says the report, in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, by removing prisoners, augmenting guards or offering armed resistance to mob outlawry; and a total of sixty persons were kept out of the clutches of would-be lynchers. There is no record of the number of lynchings that might have occurred if officers had not removed prisoners from dangerous localities before the mob spirit could crystalize into action, but it is probable that there were a great many.

These facts indicate that the officers of the country are more keenly alert in the performance of their duty and more courageous in the face of danger than they have been in some other years in which the number of lynchings was much greater than during 1930. And promise is given that such diligence and such courage on the part of the officers will cause reduction in the number of lynchings this year and through the years to come. Exactly two-thirds of the lynchings occurring last year involved prisoners who had been taken from the custody of officers or who were slain while in their custody, indicating that the mob rarely catches its victim by its own efforts. Whatever the lynching record for this year may be therefore, it will reflect in large measure the integrity and the fidelity of the officers of the South, whose duty it is to protect their prisoners and preserve them for arraignment before a bar of justice as much as to catch them and place them in prison.

LYNCHINGS ROSE TO 21 LAST YEAR

Dr. Moton's Annual Report Shows One Victim Of Mob In Alabama

Twenty-one persons were lynched in the United States in 1930, according to records compiled by the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute and announced yesterday by Dr. R. R. Moton, principal.

Of the 21 who met death at the hands of mobs, six were lynched in Georgia, four in Mississippi, three in Texas, two in Indiana, two in South Carolina and one in Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

This is the greatest number lynched since 1926 when 30 met death at the hands of mobs. In 1929 only 10 were lynched, in 1928 only 11 and in 1927 there were 16.

Fourteen of the persons lynched in 1930 were in the hands of the law; three were slain in jails, five were taken from jails and killed and six from officers of the law outside of the jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western States and 35 in Southern states. LYNCHINGS INCREASE

Fact Is Shown by Statistics Kept by Southern Negro Educator.

Dr. R. R. Moten, who is principal of the Tuskegee, Ala., Normal and Industrial Institute, for the education of negroes, who for many years has kept statistics of lynchings, sends the following report covering the year of 1930. It shows the number of lynchings increased over the number in either of the three preceding years. The report follows:

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number of 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, 2 of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

"There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 53 Negro men and 2 Negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were Negroes. The offences were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

Lynchings In 1930 Show An Increase

During the year just closed 21 persons were lynched, it has been announced by the Tuskegee institute of Alabama. Georgia lead the states in the number of lynchings with six. North Carolina had one.

This number is greater than any year since 1926 and is 11 more than for 1929. In 1928 11 persons died at the hands of lynchers, in 1927 16 met death in this manner and in 1926 30 were lynched, it is stated.

Fourteen of the persons lynched in 1930 were in the hands of the law. There were killed in jails, two of these being shot and one burned when the jail was ignited. Five of the 11 others were taken from jails and six from officers beyond the confines of jails.

The report further states that there were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented mobs from taking prisoners, 35 such cases being in southern states.

Of the 21 persons lynched one was white and the others were negroes. The offenses were criminal attack eight; murder three; attempted criminal attack two; killing officers of the law two; robbery three; being a witness one; bombing houses one; charge not reported one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma one; South Carolina two; Texas, three.

MESSENGER-CHRONICLE

JAN 2 - 1931

LYNCHINGS IN 1930.

The principal of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute of Alabama, a training school for colored young men and women, has sent The Messenger information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. The Tuskegee institute annually keeps a record of lynchings and by so doing keeps the public informed as to the increase or decrease in this form of crime.

Mob rule and lynch law have no place in a civilized government. The law provides for the punishment of criminals. Not only is lynching a barbarous and inhuman procedure but not infrequently its victims are wholly innocent of the crime for which they are charged. There can be no such thing as a fair trial by an infuriated mob.

It is, therefore, a matter of deep concern to note by the Tuskegee record that the year just closed saw an increase in the number of lynchings over that of recent years. There were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Lynching Record For 1930 Shows 21 Mob Victims

More lynchings were recorded in 1930 th[redacted]ar since 1926, according to the record made at Tuskegee Institute. The research department announces that 21 lynchings were recorded last year. This figure compares with 10 in 1929; 11 in 1928; 16 in 1927, and 30 in 1926.

Of the 21 persons summarily executed 14 were in the hands of the law. Three of these were killed in jail. Of the others, 5 were taken from jails and the remaining 6 were taken from officers outside of jails.

Attention is called, in the record, to the fact that officers prevented lynchings in 40 instances. Of these 5 were in Northern and Eastern states and 35 in Southern states. A total of 60 persons were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs. Of the 21 persons lynched one was white and 20 were negroes.

The report for 1930 said also "14 of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were killed in jails; two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mobs burned a jail; five of the other 11 persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come within the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

"There were 40 instances," the report continued, "in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western States and 35 in Southern States . . . a total of 61 persons, six white men, 52 Negro men and two Negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were Negroes. The offenses were: Rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, one.

"The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three."

Twenty-one persons were lynched in the United States in 1930, according to records compiled by the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute and announced yesterday by Dr. R. R. Moton, principal.

Of the 21 who met death at the hands of mobs, six were lynched in Georgia, four in Mississippi, three in Texas, two in Indiana, two in South Carolina and one in Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

This is the greatest number lynched since 1926 when 30 met death at the hands of mobs. In 1929 only 10 were lynched, in 1928 only 11 and in 1927 there were 16.

Fourteen of the persons lynched in 1930 were in the hands of the law; three were slain in jails, five were taken from jails and killed and six from officers of the law outside of the jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western States and 35 in Southern states. In 33 cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In seven other instances armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs, it was reported.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: Statutory, eight; murder, three; attempted assault, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one and charge not reported, one.

WAYNESBORO PA REC HERALD
THURSDAY, JANUARY 1, 1931.

According to records compiled at Tuskegee Institute twenty-one persons were lynched in 1930. This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than in 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926. The bright spot in the terrible record is that in forty instances officers of the law were able to prevent lynchings. Lynchings occurred in eight states, with the exception of Indiana, all being in the south.

The Lynching Record

THE lynching record for 1930, as compiled by Tuskegee Institute, is somewhat discouraging with a total of twenty-one, compared with ten the year previous. It has been argued that such mob outrages normally increase in times of industrial depression and there is a temptation to so account for the rise.

But the disappointing record of a single year cannot serve as adequate indication that the general tendency of the preceding seven years, when there was a sharp drop from previous levels has been reversed. The worst record since 1922, thirty in 1926, was less than half the figure of 1921.

The 1930 record was prevented from being much worse, according to Tuskegee, by the successful resistance to lynchers in forty cases, by which it is estimated the lives of sixty persons were saved. It may be rash to assume that fatalities would have resulted in all these cases but for official resistance, but it is encouraging that there are indications that responsible authorities are showing more courage and more conscience in dealing with murderous mobs.

Another good sign is the increasing concern felt in the South as to the necessity of clearing its name in this matter. The activities of the Southern Commission investigating the causes and the cure of lynching, and the agitation for a drastic uniform anti-lynching law are evidence of this concern.

A SAD RECORD

Principal Robert R. Moton, of Tuskegee Institute, reports that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned the jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned. Georgia, with six lynchings, led the hideous list.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men 52 Negro men and two Negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs. That is some consolation. But for the number of mob murders to double within the year is a sad commentary on our civilization.

Special Correspondence

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala., Dec. 31.—There were 21 lynchings in the United States in 1930, which is 11 over the 1929 record, 10 more than in 1928, five more than for 1927, and nine less than in 1926.

Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned the jail. Five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

LYNCHINGS

The record of lynchings in 1930 as compiled by the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute does not form a very inspiring commentary on American civilization, south.

Into the records in 1930 went 21 lynchings, which were 11 more than in 1929. Unrest and violence in the year just past were responsible for lynching 14 men in the hands of the law, killing 3 in jail, shooting to death 2 prisoners, and burning down a jail to cremate 1 prisoner.

There is, of course, another side to the record, for the institute which Booker T. Washington founded points out that there were 40 occasions in the past year when officers prevented lynchings.

One white man and 20 Negroes constituted America's sacrifice to the Lynch law in 1930, for crimes ranging from murder to testifying as a witness. Eight lynchings were due to rape.

Lynching is almost entirely a problem of southern states. Last year the lynchings occurred in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, and Texas. Save for the Indiana incident when a mob burned the jail to get at two prisoners, the south was alone responsible for these incidents of mob law.

American civilization will not be of age until lynchings cease entirely. The only one excuse for a lynching is a dead sheriff. Whenever the law is willing to stake its own lives on the safety of its prisoners, lynchings will cease. If forty lynchings could have been prevented last year, they all could have been staved off.

Twenty-one persons were lynched last year in the United States. In view of the slowness of the law and the lack of confidence in its operations this is not a large total, yet it is larger by 21 than it should be. The system of trials, appeals and punishments should be so speeded up that there would be no excuse whatever for lynchings.

Lynching Record Is Not So Good

Twenty-One Persons Lynched In 1930—Georgia Leads With Six.

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. I find, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were twenty-one persons lynched in 1930. This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number eleven for 1928, five more than the number sixteen for 1927 and nine less than the number thirty for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and thirty-five in southern states. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, one was white and twenty were negroes. The offences were: Rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

STATISTICS ON LYNCHING

Robert Moton, principal of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, Alabama, sends The Journal information regarding lynchings which have occurred in 1930. In all, 21 persons were lynched, of which number one was white and 20 were Negroes.

There is much statistical data regarding instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, the method of putting the victims to death and so on, none of which is of particular interest in the north where actual lynchings are of rare occurrence. One paragraph which is of interest has to do with the states in which lynchings occurred. They were: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas 3.

It will be noted that all these lynchings occurred in the south.

LEWISTON, ME.
JOURNAL

JAN 1 - 1931

According to the records of Tuskegee Institute, there were 21 lynchings in 1930. This is in excess of any year for several. It is 11 more than in 1939. Officers of law prevented 49 lynchings. In other cases armed forces were called on to prevent lynchings. Of these 52 were negro men, 2 were negro women, and six white, making sixty saved from mobs, in addition to the 21 executed, one of whom was burned. Seven of these 21 never so much as came into the hands of the law. Of the 21 lynched 20 were negros. The offences alleged were as follows rape, 8; murder 2; attempted rape, 3; killing of officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing house, 1; charge not reported, 1.

We are apt to bridle a bit, when we hear the Britisher refer to us as a land of lynchings. But when we consider that since 1926, inclusive, mobs have lynched 88 people; and that about 200 more have been saved from mobs by efforts of officers of the law and armed force, we have to admit that the lynching of the Negro (which is the chief pastime of these mobs) is a blot on the civilization of our land.

The States in which lynchings of 1930 occurred were as follows;—Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 1; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1, South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

Going Backward.

The lynching record kept by Principal Robert R. Moton of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, shows an increase of eleven for the year 1930. In [illegible] one has to go back farther than 1926 in order to parallel it. To offset this retrogression it is related that in forty instances officers of the law exerted themselves successfully to prevent the mob from accomplishing their purpose. This is a far different procedure from that of a few years ago when the officers when they did not actually connive at the lynchings, particularly when the victims were colored people, seldom made a determined effort to save their charges from violence. Of the twenty-one lynched in 1930, twenty were negroes and one was white.

The states in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each were Alabama one, Florida one, Georgia six, Indiana two, Mississippi four, North Carolina one, South Carolna two, Texas three. We have still a long way to go before we can boast of our civilization.

LYNCHINGS IN 1930.

The annual report on lynchings, issued by the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, makes a bad showing for 1930. There were twenty-one cases of the sort, eleven more than in 1929 and ten more than in 1928. In fact, one must go back to 1926, when thirty persons were lynched, to find a more disheartening record. In 1930, also, there were killings by mobs in a northern state—Indiana.

Two or three agencies collect such statistics and do not always agree precisely in the figures they offer. But the Tuskegee report stands high on the score of care and thoroughness in its preparation, and there can be no doubt that its statements are substantially accurate. No explanation is offered of the causes leading to the increase in acts of mob violence. The victims were charged with the usual offenses. Barring the two cases in Indiana and perhaps one in Oklahoma, the killings took place in the lynching belt. Only one of the victims was white; fourteen were taken from the hands of law officers.

On the other hand, officers of the law in forty instances prevented lynchings. And lest sectional pride grow too great, it must be admitted that in five of these instances the successful maneuvers took place in northern or western states. In thirty-three cases prisoners were removed or guards so augmented as to discourage attack. In the other seven cases armed force was used to drive off the mobs. In all sixty persons, including six white men and two colored women, were saved from death.

As has had to be said on some other occasions, presentation of such figures as these emphasizes the extent to which lynching still persists and the magnitude of the job for the campaign of education upon which, more than upon anything else, reliance has to be placed to bring about a suppression of this disgrace to the nation.

No Record To Be Proud Of

The year 1930 doesn't leave behind it such a savory record in its lynching activities.

A total of 21 men were lynched during the year, one more than twice the number who were lynched during the previous year and during 1928.

Of this number, Texas has three marked against her record, being exceeded only by Georgia, with six, and Mississippi with four.

Certainly this record is nothing to be proud of. Still, we boas tof our record in law enforcement, and prattle of the progress of our civilization.

This is something worth turning our attention to. It means that we must have education and courageous enforcement of legally constituted authority.

Lynchings In 1930

The annual report, for 1930, by the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskeegee Institute, shows that there were 21 persons lynched last year. This is 11 more than occurred in 1929, 10 more than in 1928, 5 more than in 1927, 9 less than in 1926, when the total was 30. Fourteen of the persons lynched last year were in the hands of the law. Regrettable as is this increase, it is offset somewhat by the fact that during the year there were forty instances in which the officers of the law prevented lynchings. Lynching continues to be a southern manifestation, all of the acts of mob violence occurring in that region, and all of the victims but one were Negroes.

The Lynching Record

RECORDS kept during the year just closed by Tuskegee Institute, noted training school for Negroes down in Alabama, show that twenty-one persons were lynched in that time.

This compares with ten for 1929, eleven for 1928, sixteen for 1927 and thirty for 1926.

Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned a jail five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned. There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings.

The report gives cause for regret that the steady diminuition of this terrible manifestation of mob law achieved during the several years preceding has been stopped and has gone on an upward course. Perhaps the economic depression has not been without its untoward psychological effect in this respect.

ELEVEN MORE REPORTED THAN FOR PREVIOUS YEAR, BUT NOT A SINGLE INSTANCE IN TENNESSEE

TOTAL OF 60 PERSONS WERE SAVED BY ACTION OF OFFICERS

Several Such Cases Occurred Here, Notably Case Of Giles County Negro, For Whom Mob Stormed Local Jail

(Special to The Daily Herald.)

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Jan. 1.—According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, there were 21 persons lynched in 1930, it was announced today by R. R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Institute. This is 11 more than the number in 1929, 10 more than 1928, five more than 1927, and nine less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails; two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned the jail. Five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

As noted in the report above, there were 40 instances last year in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Several of these instances occurred here in Maury county, under the direction of Sheriff W. R. Haywood, his deputies and city police. One such incident was that when the officers repelled a mob of Giles countians who came here seeking the negro later tried for criminal assault on a white woman on a highway near Pulaski.

In several other cases the local jail served as a refuge for suspects in the hands of officers of other counties who brought their prisoners here for safe keeping.

As will be noted in the report, there were no lynchings in 1930 in Tennessee. The last lynching in Maury county was on Armistice night, 1928, when a negro was hung from the second floor of the courthouse.

LYNCHINGS INCREASE

Principal Moton Gives List For the Year Now Ended

To the Editor of The Courant:—

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. I find, according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than for 1929, 19 more than for 1928, 5 more than for 1927 and 9 less than for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail. Five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western States and 35 in Southern States. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 Negroes and two Negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were Negroes. The offences were: Rape, two; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one, charge not reported, one.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows; Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

LYNCHING IN 1930.

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal.

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were twenty-one persons lynched in 1930. This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number eleven for 1928, five more than the number sixteen for 1927 and nine less than the number thirty for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western States and thirty-five in Southern States. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed forces were used to repel would-be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two Negroe men and two Negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, one was white and twenty were Negroes. The offenses were: Rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The States in which lynchings occurred and the number in each State are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

No Lynchings In Tennessee In Past Year

Of twenty-one lynchings in the South during 1930, not one occurred in Tennessee, according to figures compiled by the department of records and research of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute. However, the number showed an alarming increase over those of the past three years.

According to the figures compiled, the number was eleven more than the number of lynchings in 1929, ten more than in 1928 and five more than in 1927. In 1926, however, the total was thirty, or nine more than in this year.

Fourteen of the persons lynched were taken from the hands of the law. Three were killed while in jail, two being shot and the third burned to death when the mob set the jail afire. Of the seven who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and another was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances, according to the Tuskegee figures, in which officers prevented lynchings. Of these, five were in Northern states and the remainder in the South. In thirty-three of these cases, the prisoners were removed, the guard augmented or other precautionary measures taken. Armed force was used to protect the prisoners in the other instances. It was estimated that a total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 Negro men and two Negro women, were saved by officers from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, only one was white. The offences were: Rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1, and charge not reported, 1.

States in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each State are: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2, and Texas, 3.

LYNCHINGS SHOW BIG INCREASE

Toll for 1930 Is 21 Lives, or 11 More Than 1929.

Special To The News-Sentinel

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—The steadily decreasing lynching record of the United States received a serious setback in 1930, when 21 persons were put to death in this manner, according to figures given today by Tuskegee Institute This was 11 more than in 1929.

Georgia led all states in lynchings, with Mississippi had 4, Texas 3, Indiana and South Carolina 2 each; and Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma, 1 each.

Since 1926, there had been a decline in lynching deaths, 30 having occured in that year, 19 in the following year of 1927, 11 in 1928 and 10 in 1929.

On the positive side of the question, Principal Robert R. Moton found 40 instances in which officers of the law preventing lynchings. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death by mobs.

Fourteen of the 21 lynched were taken from the hands of the law, Moton finds. One of the victims was white and 20 negroes.

The Lynching Record

THE lynching record for 1930, as compiled by Tuskegee Institute, is somewhat discouraging with a total of twenty-one, compared with ten the year previous. It has been argued that such mob outrages normally increase in times of industrial depression and there is a temptation to so account for the rise.

But the disappointing record of a single year cannot serve as adequate indication that the general tendency of the preceding seven years, when there was a sharp drop from previous levels, has been reversed. The worst record since 1922, thirty in 1926, was less than half the figure of 1921.

The 1930 record was prevented from being much worse, according to Tuskegee, by the successful resistance to lynchers in forty cases, by which it is estimated the lives of sixty persons were saved. It may be rash to assume that fatalities would have resulted in all these cases but for official resistance, but it is encouraging that there are indications that responsible authorities are showing more courage and more consciance in dealing with murderous mobs.

Another good sign is the increasing concern felt in the South as to the necessity of clearing its name in this matter. The activities of the Southern Commission investigating the causes and the cure of lynching, and the agitation for a drastic uniform anti-lynching law are evidence of this concern.

LYNCHINGS IN 1930.

The principal of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute of Alabama, a training school for colored young men and women, has sent The Messenger information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. The Tuskegee institute annually keeps a record of lynchings and by so doing keeps the public informed as to the increase or decrease in this form of crime.

Mob rule and lynch law have no place in a civilized government. The law provides for the punishment of criminals. Not only is lynching a barbarous and inhuman procedure but not infrequently its victims are wholly innocent of the crime for which they are charged. There can be no such thing as a fair trial by an infuriated mob.

It is, therefore, a matter of deep concern to note by the Tuskegee record that the year just closed saw an increase in the number of lynchings over that of recent years. There were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, 2 of these were shot to death and 1 was burned to death when mob burned jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the 7 victims who did not come into the hands of the law, 1 was burned to death and 1 was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. To the Editor of The Gate City:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930: I find, according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, 2 of these were shot to death and 1 was burned to death when mob burned jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the 7 victims who did not come into the hands of the law, 1 was burned to death and 1 was put to death and his body burned.

There wer 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 7 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 52 negro men and 2 negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, 1 was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

Tuskegee, Ala., Jan. [illegible] Robert H. [illegible] principal of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, issued an annual report on lynchings, in which he said there were 11 more lives taken in this manner in 1930 than in 1929.

The 1930 Lynching Record.

Records kept by Tuskegee institute for 1930 show a sharp rise in the number of lynchings in the country. Where only 11 persons were lynched in 1928, and but 10 in 1929, there were 21 victims of mob violence in the year just ended. The increase over 1929 was thus more than 100 per cent, and the lynchings recorded in 1930 exactly equalled the total for the 24 preceding months.

While this showing is a regrettable one, it is not particularly difficult to explain. A study of lynchings over a long period of years reveals the factors that increases have almost invariably occurred during times of depression. In 1892, for example, 255 persons were lynched in the United States, an all-time record for the country, and in 1908, another depression year, there were 100 lynchings as compared with 63 in 1907. Even in 1921 lynchings were numerous enough to break a 13-year-old record.

Quite obviously, then, some definite relationship exists between depression and mob violence, so it is hardly surprising that 1930 proved the worst year for lynchings since 1926. The fact of this relationship does not make the 1930 showing any less shameful in itself, but when it is compared with the mob savagery of other depression years, it is impossible not to conclude that we are making progress. The Tuskegee institute reports 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings in 1930, and 35 of these were in southern states. Here alone is impressive evidence of the fact that public opinion in the south is standing rather solidly behind the authorities in the performance of their duties. As for the bare record of lynchings in 1930, while it is bad enough, it is still infinitely better than those of 10 or 20 years ago. There is still good reason to believe, considering the progress thus far made, that the United States may record, within the next decade or two a year without a lynching. And there is at least some basis for the hope that the 1930 showing such as it is, may never again be equalled.

THE LYNCHING RECORD

There were 21 persons lynched in 1930, one white and 20 negroes, according to figures from Tuskegee Institute. Georgia led with six, Mississippi was next with four, Texas third with three, and Indiana and South Carolina next with two each. One lynching occurred in each of the following states: Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926.

Of those lynched 14 were taken from the hands of the law, and three were killed in jails.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, five in Northern and Western states, and 35 in Southern states. A total of 60 persons, six white, and 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

The mob spirit will never be eradicated, but it can be controlled by determined officers.

OLD YEAR SAW 21 LYNCHINGS

20 Blacks, One White Victims of Mob Fury During 1930

The United States during 1930 lost its good record of decreased lynchings that had been characteristic of the past few years and enrolled a total of 21 persons who met their death violently at the hands of mobs. The statistics, compiled by Major Robert R. Moton principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute at Tuskegee, Ala., the school founded by the late Booker T. Washington, were released today.

Major Moton compared the statistics with those of the past five years, showing that they were 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926.

Fourteen of the persons lynched during 1930 were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned the jail where he was confined. Five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside the jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, the report revealed. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

NOT SO BAD

The annual lynching statistics are again available, being sent out with the accustomed promptness by the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, the ~~South's~~ best known negro college.

While the nation as a whole does not show up so well and Georgia showed a humiliating lapse, there is considerable satisfaction in the thought that Florida was less blood-thirsty than during some previous years. But one unlawful execution was marked against the escutcheon of this commonwealth, a much better mark than was registered the previous year. It was about as good as the last year of the Martin administration, when the fear of the law had been thrown into the hearts of mass executioners by the use of state militia in repulsing an assault upon the Tampa jail.

According to the records kept at Tuskegee 21 persons were lynched in the United States during 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails. Two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when the mob burned the jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside the jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

A most commendable fact is that officers of the law prevented 40 lynchings during the year. Thirty-five of these instances are from Southern states, and only five from Northern and Western states. This diligence upon the part of the authorities down South will probably prove disheartening to critics of the section and goes to show that sentiment against lynching is rapidly increasing in Dixie.

In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Lynching Record For 1930 Gives 21 Victims

Age 1-10-31

In its ~~annual~~ compendium of the number of lynchings each year the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute, Dr. Robert R. Moton, principal, in a release as of January 1, 1931, states that there were 21 lynchings during 1930, as compared with 10 for 1929.

Of the victims, one was white twenty were Negroes. This number has been exceeded since 1926, when thirty persons were mob victims. There were 16 for 1927 and 11 for 1928.

Of the 21 lynched in 1930, 14 of them were in the hands of law officials. Two were shot to death in jail, and one died when the jail in which he was confined was burned Five others were taken from jails and six from officers outside of jails.

Of the other seven, 1 was burned by a mob, and one was killed and his body burned.

Sixty persons, including six white men, 52 Negro men and two Negro women, were saved from mobs by officers, five in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states.

In 33 cases, prisoners were removed or number of guards augmented. In seven instances, making a total of forty attempts at lynching, armed force was used.

The alleged offences charged were rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing law officers, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1. The states represented were Georgia, 6; Mississippi, 4; Texas, 3; Indiana and South Carolina, 2 each; Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma, 1 each.

Lynching records for 1930 as reported from other sources vary considerable in their totals.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Jan. 5.—Twenty-one persons were lynched in the United States in 1930, the Tuskegee Institute reported last week.

This figure is four short of the number reported a few days ago by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

1930 Lynchings Increase to 25, Georgia in Lead

Double Total Set in 1929, Negro Association Reports in Plea for Federal Law

There have been twenty-five recorded and authenticated lynchings in 1930, as against twelve during 1929, according to a summary for the year issued today from the offices of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue. Of the victims, twenty-four were Negroes and one a white man.

Georgia heads the list of lynching states for the year with seven mob victims, Alabama and Texas had four each, Mississippi three, Indiana and South Carolina two each and Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma had one each.

The offenses which brought about the lynchings include not stopping an automobile when ordered, being active in politics, testifying against a white man in court, quarreling with a white man, murder, assault and attempted assault, robbery and, in one case, offense unknown.

Two Burned in Texas

One of the mob victims, George Hughes, was burned alive in the jail at Sherman, Tex., and the body of George Johnson was publicly burned at Honey Grove, also in Texas.

In a statement on the increase in lynchings, made by Walter White, acting secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, increasing repudiation by white women of the South of lynching as a "protection of womanhood" is hailed as an encouraging development. The statement reads in part:

"During the year representative white women of twelve Southern states, including church, educational, voters', Y. W. C. A. and club groups have issued two statements declaring they desired no such 'protection,' characterizing lynching as 'the complete breakdown of government and the triumph of anarchy' and stating that 'it brutalizes the community where it occurs, including the women and children, who frequently witness its orgies, and particularly the youth who are usually conspicuous participants.'

Congress Urged to Act

"Prompt action by Congress on lynching is vitally necessary. In periods of depression, when tempers are short, mob hysteria flames up far more quickly than in normal times. As the present unemployment crisis seems likely to be with us for some time to come, prompt Congressional action can save the lives of men and women as yet unlynched.

"Eleven leading white editors of the South now recognize that only the Federal government can cope with this evil. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reiterates the position it has held for twenty years, that the states have shown themselves powerless to cope with a form of brutal atrocity which would call forth the indignation of all America if it took place in some foreign land.

"The states still fail to punish or, in the vast majority of cases, even to prosecute known and identified lynchers. A case in point is the lynching at Marion, Ind., where the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People furnished the names of twenty-seven known participants, with no effective action by the authorities.

"Congress will have to act to stamp out lynching if the United States is not to continue being disgraced and humiliated before the civilized world."

Society for Advancement of Colored People Asks Congress End Mob Rule

There have been 25 authenticated lynchings in 1930, against 12 during 1929, according to a summary issued today from the offices of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Ave., Manhattan.

Twenty-four of the victims were negroes, and one was a white man.

Georgia heads the list with 7 cases, Alabama and Texas had four each, Mississippi 3, Indiana and South Carolina 2, each, and Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma, one each.

The offenses included not stopping an automobile when ordered, being active in politics, testifying against a white man in court, quarreling with a white man, murder, assault and attempted assault and robbery, according to the compilation.

REPORTS 25 LYNCHED IN 1930, A RISE OF 13

Negro Association Shows Georgia Led With Seven—Asks for Federal Action.

Twenty-five persons have been lynched in the United States in 1930 as against twelve in 1929, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue, announced yesterday. Of this year's victims twenty-four were Negroes and one was a white man. In 1929 all but four of the victims were Negroes.

Georgia heads the lynching States with seven victims. Alabama and Texas had four each, Mississippi three, Indiana and South Carolina two each, and North Carolina, Florida and Oklahoma had one each. According to a statement by Walter White, acting secretary of the association, attacks on women were charged in only three cases this year, the offenses including failing to stop an automobile when ordered, being active in politics, quarreling with a white man, murder, assault and attempted assault, robbery and testifying against a white man.

Mr. White's statement said that "during the year representative white women of twelve Southern States, including Church, educational, voters', Y. W. C. A. and club groups have issued two statements characterizing lynching as 'the complete breakdown of government and the triumph of anarchy,' and stating that 'it brutalizes the community where it occurs.'"

Declaring "prompt action by Congress on lynching" to be "vitally necessary," Mr. White commented that in periods of depression "tempers are short" and "mob hysteria flames up more quickly than in normal times."

LYNCHINGS GAIN; 25 IN 1930 RECORD

Total Compares With 12 Last Year—Georgia Leads

Women's Organizations Fight "Protection" as Barbarity

Despite the scoring of mob rule by the church, bar and press, there have been twenty-five lynchings in this country during 1930 as compared with twelve last year.

These figures were issued yesterday by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 69 Fifth Avenue. The association again reiterated its demand that Congress take prompt action to stamp out lynching "if the United States is not to continue being disgraced and humiliated before the civilized world."

Of the victims, twenty-four were Negroes and one a white man, the summary disclosed. Georgia heads the list of lynching states with seven mob victims. Alabama and Texas had four each, Mississippi three, Indiana and South Carolina two eaon, and Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma, one each.

The offenses which brought about the lynchings include not stopping an auatomobile when ordered, being active in politics, testifying against a white man in court, quarreling with a white man, murder, assault, attempted assault and robbery. In one case, the offense was unknown.

One of the victims, George Hughes, was burned alive in the jail at Sherman, Tex., and the body of George Johnson was publicly burned at Honey Grove, Tex.

Walter White, acting secretary of the association, hailed as an encouraging development the repudiation by white women of the South of lynching as a "protection of womanhood."

"In twenty-five lynchings during 1930," said White, "assaults upon women were assigned as an excuse in only three cases. That lynching is not and never has been primarily a 'protection of white womanhood' in the South or elsewhere, is attested by the increasing number of resolutions passed by leading white women in Southern states repudiating this form of barbarity.

"During the year representative white women of twelve Southern states, including church, educational, voters, Y. W. C. A. and club groups have issued statements declaring they desired no such 'protection' and characterizing lynching as 'the complete breakdown of government and the triumph of anarchy' and stating that 'it brutalizes the community where it occurs, including the women and children who frequently witness its orgies, and particularly the youth who are usually conspicuous participants.'"

White asserted that in periods of depression when tempers are short, mob hysteria flames up more quickly than in normal times. Therefore, he added, "as the present unemployment crisis seems likely to be with us for some time to come, prompt Congressional action can save the lives of men and women as yet unlynched."

The states have shown themselves powerless to cope with "a form of brutal atrocity which would call forth the indignation of all America if it took place in some foreign land," White's statement continued. He charged that the states still fail to punish or even to prosecute in most cases known and identified lynchers. He cited a case of a lynching at Marion, Ind., where the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People furnished the names of twenty-seven known participants, with no effective action by the authorities.

1930 LYNCHINGS DOUBLED RECORD SET LAST YEAR

Lynchings in the United States more than doubled during 1930, according to a summary for the year issued yesterday from the offices of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, at 69 5th ave.

While only twelve authenticated lynchings were recorded in 1929, the total for 1930 was twenty-five. Of this total twenty-four of those lynched were colored and one a white man.

Georgia led the list of lynching states with seven men hanged during the year. Texans were pictured as the most cruel and ferocious lynchers by the officials of the colored association. One victim of a lynching mob, George Hughes, was burned in his jail cell at Sherman, Tex.

At Honey Grove, Tex., the body of George Johnson was burned in public, the report shows.

"Prompt action by congress on lynchings is vitally necessary," the report says. "Even leading white editors of the south now realize that only the federal government can cope with this evil."

Lynching. Increase During Past Year

Tuskekee Institute, Ala
Dec. 31, 1930.

Dear Sir:

"I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. 14 of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, 3 were killed in jails, 2 of these were shot to death and 1 was burned to death when mob burned jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the 17 victims who did not come into the hands of the law, 1 was burned to death and 1 was put to death and his body burned.

"There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 7 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 52 Negro men and 2 negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of hte 21 persons lynched, 1 was white and 20 were Negroes. The offences were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

"The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

MORE LYNCHINGS

The fact that lynchings in 1930 were twice as numerous as in 1929 is very discouraging. For some years mob murders had been steadily decreasing, and many optimistic observers thought a year might come soon in which there would be none at all.

The outlook is not completely disheartening. Twenty-five or 30 years ago lynchings ran as high as 255 in one year. The set-back in 1930 need not be regarded as a start toward the return of any such ghastly figure as that. The sudden increase this year will doubtless spur private citizens, public officials and social organizations to further and stronger action against lynching.

A study of recent lynchings in the South shows that they occur usually in communities where the economic and educational standards are low. This suggests constructive work in education and social welfare.

Lynchings In 1930

Indiana was the only northern state to stoop to lynching during the year that has just closed. Two persons were lynched in the Hoosier state—both at Marion, Indiana. Michigan had no lynchings nor near-lynchings, so far as is known by the records made by the Tuskegee Institute which compiles and sends to all newspapers an annual report of mob activities.

In 1930 there were 21 lynchings, which is the highest number of any year since 1926. In 1929 there were 10 lynchings.

Fourteen of the luckless persons who died at the hands of infuriated mobs, were in the hands of the law. Three of them were killed in jails; in fact the jail was burned down in one case, with the victim inside. Others were taken from officers and shot and burned.

All of those who were lynched, with one exception, were Negroes. Their crimes were; for rape 8; murder 3; attempted rape 2; killing officers of the law 2; robbery 3; being a witness 1; bombing houses 1. The charge against the other man is not reported.

Georgia takes the leather medal for the number of lynchings it perpetrated—having six on its roll. Mississippi mobs slew four, Texas three, South Carolina two, and Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma one each.

A civilized people is one which puts the law in control and inflicts just punishment calmly and in due course of legal trial and procedure. The south has a problem which is seldom faced in the north and the belief persists that the only way to keep down the blackman is to deal swift, violent, public retribution to wrongdoers. If lynching has any justification in the south, however, it has none in sucn states as Indiana. Certainly a blush of shame must arise in that state for the damage to its reputation as a center of culture done during the past year by the white-robed mob at Marion.

LYNCHING RECORD WORSE

Just at a time when it seemed the country's lynching record was to continue sufficiently low to give hope that it might be erased altogether, the graph of the chart takes an upward curve. According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, 21 persons were lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 cheering instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. LYNCHING RECORD.

More persons were lynched in the United States during 1930 than in any year since 1926. As to what the figures indicate, one person's guess is as good as another's. There does not seem to be any settled trend. During one period of years the figures seem to decline hopefully, only to shoot up again. The following figures are sent out by Tuskegee (Ala.) institute:

"I find according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. 14 of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. 3 were killed in jails, 2 of these were shot to death and 1 was burned to death when mob burned jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the 7 victims who did not come into the hands of the law, 1 was burned to death and 1 was put to death and his body burned.

"There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 7 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. "Of the 21 persons lynched, 1 was white and 20 were negroes. The offences were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

An outstanding fact about the report is the fact that of the 40 instances in which officers of the law presented mob violence, 35 occurred in the South, as against 5 in the North and West. Commenting on this fact the Charlotte Observer says: "One lynching in the South creates more front-page stuff than half a dozen lynchings in the north. It is a circumstance worth remembering that in 1930 as many as 35 lynchings were prevented in the South against 5 in the North and West." For the first time in nine years North Carolina's record was marred during 1930 with a lynching—and it might easily have been changed to another instance in which mob violence was prevented by officers.

To the Editor of The Tennessean:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. I find according to records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officer the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were recovered or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: Rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

LYNCHINGS IN 1930

The Tuskegee Institute of Alabama reports that there were 21 persons lynched in the United States in 1930. This is 11 more than in 1929, 10 more than in 1928; five more than in 1927 and nine less than in 1926. It is further shown that 14 of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were killed in jail and one was burned to death when the mob burned down the jail in which he was incarcerated. Five of the other 11 persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers outside of the jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned. The states in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each state are: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

This is a very gruesome record and one which renews the demand that something be done to prevent such tragedies and to secure for every offender, regardless of his crime, a fair trial by jury. Twenty of the 21 persons lynched were negroes; and it is evident that they became the victims of infuriated mobs as a result of sudden impulse which the police or government authorities should have restrained. It has often been apparent that the officials of jails and other prisons have yielded too readily to the demand of lynching mobs for the delivery of prisoners while awaiting trial. In many cases, some of the sheriffs have yielded too easily to the demands of such mobs. This lynching business is a disgrace to the United States that is not paralleled in any other civilized country.

More Lynchings Last Year

In the letter on this page from Mr. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Institute, there is little encouragement for those concerned with the lynching of Negroes. Mr. Moton, as head of the institute founded by Booker T. Washington, has such a high reputation that there is no reason to doubt the accuracy of his figures.

According to these figures, the number of lynchings in 1930 was more than twice as great as that in 1929. Worse still, two-thirds of the 1930 victims were already in the hands of the law. That is, their punishment was virtually assured without the action of any mob. Yet the mobs acted.

It is often said that we in the North do not really understand the racial problem faced by many of the states in the South. But we in the North do understand what a lynching means. It means the breakdown of the law. Under no circumstances, in any place or at any time, can it ever mean anything less.

In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

As noted in the report above, there were 40 instances last year in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Several of these instances occurred here in Maury county, under the direction of Sheriff W. R. Haywood, his deputies and city police. One such incident was that when the officers repelled a mob of Giles countians who came here seeking the negro later tried for criminal assault on a white woman on a highway near Pulaski.

In several other cases the local jail served as a refuge for suspects in the hands of officers of other counties who brought their prisoners here for safe keeping.

As will be noted in the report, there were no lynchings in 1930 in Tennessee. The last lynching in Maury county was on Armistice night, 1928, when a negro was hung from the second floor of the courthouse.

Lynching Record Is Not So Good

Twenty-One Persons Lynched In 1930—Georgia Leads With Six.

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. I find, according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were twenty-one persons lynched in 1930. This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number eleven for 1928, five more than the number sixteen for 1927 and nine less than the number thirty for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and thirty-five in southern states. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, one was white and twenty were negroes. The offences were: Rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

NOT A RECORD FOR BOASTING

According to figures just submitted by Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, 21 persons were lynched in the United States in 1930. This is 11 more than the total number for 1929, 10 more than the number for 1928 and five more than the number for 1927. It is 9 less, however, than the total for 1926 when 30 were lynched.

The mob is never a representative of decent civilization. Sometimes people may be goaded to extreme action by crime, but the mob quickly loses sight of what is right or wrong. It does, sometimes, kill the wrong man. That, apparently, is immaterial. For the mob is never after justice. That should be remembered. Its sole objective is revenge. It wants to take a life and as its numbers grow, it becomes more cruel and more violent. This has been shown in such recent instances as burning down a fine courthouse building, firing on officers who were doing their duty and even burning up the trucks and equipment of United States soldiers sent to the scene to quell riots.

That lax enforcement of law may lead to mobs is beside the point. That may be true, and in such cases part of the blame will rest on the shoulders of public servants. But two wrongs cannot make a right. The mob is a distinct violation of the law and often it becomes a dangerous mass of bloodthirsty humanity, destroying, pillaging, looting, wrecking, gathering into its ranks hoodlums who delight in an orgy of that kind and sometimes do not know where to stop.

A better side of the picture, as pertaining to honest effort to enforce the law, is revealed in the statement. It shows that during the year there were 40 instances where officers, answering the call of duty, prevented lynching and baffled or dispersed mobs.

There doesn't seem to be any notation of mob leaders being punished.

Tells of Slavery

Fayetteville, N. C., Jan. 8. (AP)—E. E. Smith, negro, United States minister to Liberia in 1888, today said slavery although illegal was common in the African negro republic when he was there.

"You could buy a boy or girl for about $15 then," he said. "Although slavery was illegal it was winked at by the government and was a big source of income for the 15 or more kings whose palisaded villages surrounded Monrovia."

LYNCHINGS RISE IN 1930

TUSKEGEE, Jan. 1—(AP)—Twice as many lynchings were reported in the United States during 1930 as were recorded during the preceding year, records compiled by the research department of Tuskegee Institute show. ~~One lynching was reported in~~ Alabama. There were 21 lynchings over the country during the year, the report shows, with 20 of the victims negroes and one white person. The number was shown in the report to be the highest since 1926.

Increased Number Of Lynchings Reported

Tuskegee, Ala., Jan. 1.—Dr. R. R. Moton, president of Tuskegee institute, yesterday issued ~~his annual report on lynchings~~ in the United States showing that 21 persons were lynched during 1930. He pointed out that this was 11 more than in 1929, 10 more than in 1928, five more than in 1927, and nine less than in 1926

Fourteen of the persons lynched were taken from officials custody. Of these three were killed in jails, two being shot to death. Of the seven who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned. Twenty of those lynched were negroes.

LYNCHINGS

The record of lynchings in 1930 as compiled by the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute does not form a very inspiring commentary on American civilization, south.

Into the records in 1930 went 21 lynchings, which were 11 more than in 1929. Unrest and violence in the year just past were responsible for lynching 14 men in the hands of the law, killing 3 in jail, shooting to death 2 prisoners, and burning down a jail to cremate 1 prisoner.

There is, of course, another side to the record, for the institute which Booker T. Washington founded points out that there were 40 occasions in the past year when officers prevented lynchings.

One white man and 20 Negroes constituted America's sacrifice to the Lynch law in 1930, for crimes ranging from murder to testifying as a witness. Eight lynchings were due to rape.

Lynching is almost entirely a problem of southern states. Last year the lynchings occurred in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, and Texas. Save for the Indiana incident when a mob burned the jail to get at two prisoners, the south was alone responsible for these incidents of mob law.

American civilization will not be of age until lynchings cease entirely. The only one excuse for a lynching is a dead sheriff. Whenever the law is willing to stake its own lives on the safety of its prisoners, lynchings will cease. If forty lynchings could have been prevented last year, they all could have been staved off.

The year 1930 has not had an envied record along several lines. Statistics recently compiled by R. R. Moton, principal of the Tuskegee institute in Alabama, reveals one of the darkest blots on the record left by the passing year.

These statistics deal with the lynchings which occurred throughout the country in 1930. It reports that according to the records there were 21 persons lynched in the United States during the year, an increase of 11 over the total of 10 for 1929, 10 more than the total 11 for 1928, five more than the total of 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926.

This record is all the more significant because it shows that mob violence, as evidenced by lynching, broke out in states which had previously been free from it. INCREASE IN LYNCHING

In a report issued from the Tuskegee Institute of Alabama it is disclosed that lynching during the past year increased in a marked degree over the three preceding years. There were, according to the Department of Records and Research of the colored industrial institute, 21 persons lynched in 1930, which was 11 more than in 1929, 10 more than in 1928 and five more than in 1927. However, the 1930 record was nine less than in 1926.

Of the 21 persons lynched during 1930, 14 were in the hands of the law, three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned the jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

On the other hand, the Institute reports that there were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each states are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

LYNCHINGS INCREASE

Fact Is Shown by Statistics Kept by Southern Negro Educator.

Dr. R. R. Moten, who is principal of the Tuskegee, Ala., Normal and Industrial Institute, for the education of negroes, who for many years has kept statistics of lynchings, sends the following report covering the year of 1930. It shows the number of lynchings increased over the number in either of the three preceding years. The report follows:

According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number of 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, 2 of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

"There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 53 Negro men and 2 Negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were Negroes. The offences were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

MORE LYNCHINGS.

The fact that lynchings in 1930, as reported by the Tuskegee Institute, were twice as numerous as in 1929 is discouraging. Twenty-one persons, one white and 20 negroes, were put to death by mobs during the year, as compared with 10 persons lynched in 1929. Fourteen of the victims were taken from the hands of the law and three of the number were killed in jails. In addition, there were 40 instances in which attempts at lynchings were frustrated by officers, either by removal of prisoners or augmented guards.

Murders by mobs took place in nine states, Georgia heading the list with six. Other states in which they occurred and the number in each are: Alabama 1, Florida 1, Indiana 2, Mississippi 4, North Carolina 1, Oklahoma 1, South Carolina 2 and Texas 3.

While the total of such crimes was greater than it has been since 1926, the outlook is not completely disheartening. Twenty-five or 30 years ago lynchings ran as high as 255 in one year. The set-back in 1930 from the steady decrease reported in the previous three years need not be regarded as a start toward the return of any such ghastly figure as that of a quarter-century ago.

The sudden increase this year will doubtless spur private citizens, public officials and social organizations to further and stronger action against mob violence. A study of the Tuskegee report shows that lynchings occur usually in communities where the economic and educational standards are low. This suggests constructive work in education and social welfare.

LYNCHING ON THE INCREASE

1930 Records Double Those of the Year of 1929; 21 Lives Taken in This Manner.

Tuskegee, Ala., Jan. 3.—Lynching in the United States during the past year were more widespread than any year since 1926, Robert H. Moton principal of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute announced here.

More than twice as many people were lynched during 1930 than in 1929, Moton said. The Tuskegee records revealed that 21 lives were taken in this manner during the past year, while only ten such deaths were recorded in 1929. There were 11 lynchings in 1928, 16 in 1927, and 30 in 1926.

Moton said 6 lynchings occurred in Georgia; Mississippi, 4; Texas, 3; South Carolina and Indiana, 2 each, and one each in Alabama, Florida and North Carolina.

A SAD RECORD

Principal Robert R. Moton, of Tuskegee Institute, reports that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned the jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned. Georgia, with six lynchings, led the hideous list.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men 52 Negro men and two Negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs. That is some consolation. But for the number of mob murders to double within the year is a sad commentary on our civilization.

LYNCH LAW

The Tuskegee Institute has formulated the report of the record of lynchings for 1930, showing that the hectic year went wild in Judge Lynch's court as well as in its erratic handling of stocks, crops and things generally. The report signed by [illegible] Moton, principal, is as [illegible]

LYNCHINGS IN 1930.

The principal of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute of Alabama, a training school for colored young men and women, has sent The Messenger information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. The Tuskegee institute annually keeps a record of lynchings and by so doing keeps the public informed as to the increase or decrease in this form of crime.

Mob rule and lynch law have no place in a civilized government. The law provides for the punishment of criminals. Not only is lynching a barbarous and inhuman procedure but not infrequently its victims are wholly innocent of the crime for which they are charged. There can be no such thing as a fair trial by an infuriated mob.

It is, therefore, a matter of deep concern to note by the Tuskegee record that the year just closed saw an increase in the number of lynchings over that of recent years. There were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, 2 of these were shot to death and 1 was burned to death when mob burned jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the 7 victims who did not come into the hands of the law, 1 was burned to death and 1 was put to death and his body burned.

There was an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930 in comparison with 1929, according to the report of the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, which every year keeps tab on violence of this kind. There were twenty-one lynchings in 1930, according to this report. This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number eleven for 1928, five more than the number sixteen for 1927, and nine less than the number thirty for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and thirty-five in Southern states. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two negro men and two negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, one was white and twenty were negroes. The offenses were rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

The encouaraging feature of the record for the year, according to the report sent out by Robert M. Moton, principal of the Tuskegee Institute, is in the number of lynchings prevented during the year, as indicated by the summary of lynchings and attempted lynchings. It will be noted that in forty-five instances officers of the law prevented lynchings, and there is a good lesson in that for men who are charged with the safe-keeping of prisoners, and whose duty it is to see to it that they get the full benefit of their legal rights in all cases.

It is unfortunate that we had an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930; but the record for the year, as revealed by the Tuskegee report, shows that we can still further reduce these unfortunate happenings, and officers of the law should profit by that fact.

1930 LYNCHINGS TWICE AS MANY AS 1929 SHOWED

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE RECORD SHOWS THAT 21 PERSONS WERE LYNCHED LAST YEAR

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Jan. 2.—Lynchings in the United States were more than twice as numerous last year as in 1929, and more numerous than in any year since 1926, figures just announced by the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, sets out.

A statement just given out by R. R. Morton, president of the institute, says:

"I find according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Tennessee Has No Lynchings During the Year

55

There was not a single lynching in Tennessee during 1930.

According to reports just released, at least one lynching was recorded in every state south of the northern boundary of Tennessee and east of the Mississippi, and in the United States as a whole, 21 persons, one white man and twenty negroes, were lynched during the past year, more than have been lynched in any one year since 1926. when the number reached 30. In 1927, sixteen persons were lynched; in 1928, 11 persons, and in 1929, 10 persons. Of the persons lynched, 14 were taken from the hands of the law, and seven, before they were arrested. Two were burned to death, while another was shot and his body burned.

On the other hand, there were 40 instances where lynchings were prevented by officers of the law, five in the north and west and 35 in the south. A total of 60 persons—six white men, and two negro women—were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

The offenses in the 21 cases where persons were lynched were as follows: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

States where lynchings occurred and the number in each are as follows: Georgia, 6; Mississippi, 4; Texas, 3; South Carolina, 2; Indiana 2; Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1.

LETTER ON LYNCHINGS

Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.
December 31, 1930.

To the Editor:
Dear Sir:

I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930. I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Instituute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than in 1929, 10 more than 1928, five more than 1927, and nine less than the number for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails; two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death, when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and thirty-five in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offences were. rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported. 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

21 LYNCHINGS IN NATION IN 1930

Twenty-one persons were lynched during the past year, according to the report just issued by the Department of Records and Research for Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, training school for colored young men and women. This number exceeds the total of any year since 1926 and includes one white person and 20 Negroes.

This is almost twice the number of lynchings which occurred in 1929, when only 11 were reported. The records show a total of 11 in 1928, also; a total of 16 for 1927, and a total of 30 for 1926.

Fourteen of the persons lynched last year were in the hands of the law. Three of these were killed in jails, two being shot to death, and one was burned to death when the mob burned the jail. Five of the other 11 persons were taken from jails and six from officers outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

In 40 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed, guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 52 Negro men and two Negro women were saved from death at the hands of mobs.

The offenses charged against the 21 persons who were lynched were as follows: Rape 8, murder 3, attempted rape 2, killing officers 2, robbery 3, being a witness 1, bombing houses 1, and charge not reported 1.

More lynchings occurred in Georgia than in any other state, with Mississippi second. The states in which the lynchings occurred and the number are: Alabama 1, Florida 1, Georgia 6, Indiana 2, Mississippi 4, North Carolina 1, Oklahoma 1, South Carolina 2, and Texas 3.

THE YEAR'S LYNCHINGS.

For 1930 the lynching record is worse than for any year since 1926. The steady reduction which had marked the previous three years offered hope that this evidence of barbarism was destined to disappear entirely. Within the last year there were 21 summary executions at the hands of mobs. This number was eleven more than in 1929, ten more than in 1928, and five more than in 1927. One of the victims was white; the others were negroes. Georgia offended the most grievously with six. Mississippi had four lynchings, Texas had three, Indiana and South Carolina two each, while Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma had one each.

While the record indicates a regrettable trend, there is an aspect that offers encouragement in that it may prove to be but a temporary lapse in direction. It is noted that in forty instances officers of the law prevented mobs from completing their designs. Of these 35 were in the Southern states which have been the worst offenders though not the sole ones. That so many possible lynchings were thwarted indicates increasing recognition that it is the community which is the chief sufferer from mob action. In comparison with a few years ago the record is not bad, but since the offenses had been steadily declining, it is a source of regret that there is an instance of

ACCORDING to a report prepared by the Department of Justice for the President, the opinion has been expressed that every criminal in the United States in 1930 costs as much "as the welfare influence in the lives of 160 normal boys." This conclusion was reached from estimating the annual crime bill in excess of $16,000,000,000, the annual child welfare cost at $5,000,000,000, the number of criminals at fewer than 1,000,000, and that child welfare affects 50,000,000 youths.

Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Institute, writes as follows on the lynchings of 1930:

"I find according to the records compiled in the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Institute that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927, and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926; 14 of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; 3 were killed in jails, 2 of them were shot to death, and 1 was burned to death when mob burned jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the 7 victims who did not come into the hands of the law 1 was burned to death and 1 was put to death and his body burned.

ANOTHER ONE ON 1930.

All sorts of mean things are being charged upon 1930 — drouth, low prices for farm produce, big increase of crime, business depression, Democratic victories and calamities of many kinds. And now among others we have to record a big increase in the number of lynchings in the land. For years the Tuskegee Institute, at Tuskegee, Ala., has kept a record of lynchings in the country and each year the principal sends out a report of them to the press of the country. Here is a letter The Times has just received from him:

I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. 14 of the persons were in the hands of the law, 3 were killed in jails, 2 of these were shot to death and 1 was burned to death when mob burned jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. It isn't a good report with which to greet the new year, but maybe it will make us ashamed of the record and result in improvement in the future.

No Lynchings In Tennessee In Past Year

Of twenty-one lynchings in the South during 1930, not one occurred in Tennessee, according to figures compiled by the department of records and research of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute. How~~ever the numbers showed an alarming increase over those of the past~~ three years.

According to the figures compiled, the number was eleven more than the number of lynchings in 1929, ten more than in 1928 and five more than in 1927. In 1926, however, the total was thirty, or nine more than in this year.

Fourteen of the persons lynched were taken from the hands of the law. Three were killed while in jail, two being shot and the third burned to death when the mob set the jail afire. Of the seven who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and another was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances, according to the Tuskegee figures, in which officers prevented lynchings. Of these, five were in Northern states and the remainder in the South. In thirty-three of these cases, the prisoners were removed, the guard augmented or other precautionary measures taken. Armed force was used to protect the prisoners in the other instances. It was estimated that a total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 Negro men and two Negro women, were saved by officers from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, only one was white. The offences were: Rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1, and charge not reported, 1.

States in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each State are: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2, and Texas, 3.

The Lynching Record

DISCOURAGING ~~as it is~~ in its main feature, the annual report of Tuskegee Institute on lynching bears this witness to the gradual ascendancy of law over lawlessness:

"There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings."

Not only that, but in 35 cases law officers in the South, where most mob killings occur, saved victims from mob vengeance. For the whole country, 60 persons, six white men, 52 Negro men and two Negro women, were rescued from death at the hands of mobs.

Turning to the darker side of the picture, there were eleven more lives taken by mobs in 1930 than in the previous year. The totals since 1926 are: 21 in 1930, 10 in 1929, 11 in 1928, 16 in 1927 and 30 in 1926. One white man was put to death last year by mob action.

Classification of offenses reveals the usual proof that the mob habit does not confine itself to unlawful dealing with any one crime. The alleged crimes are thus listed: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

Last year North Carolina fell from the grace that had for so many years saved the state from the shame of law trampled under foot by men unable to understand their assault upon law itself. In this state there was one lynching and the same number in Alabama, Florida and Oklahoma. Georgia achieved evil primacy with six; Mississippi, had four; Texas three; Indiana, two; South Carolina two.

Where Officers Overawed Mobs.

WHILE the increase in lynchings in 1930 revealed by the records of the Tuskegee Institute, the 21 of the year comparing with ten in 1929, cannot but be taken as significant, the blackness of the record is minimized somewhat by the fact that in no less than 40 other instances officers of the law performed their duty and checked the mobs. To the courage of the jailers and their assistants 60 persons owe their lives. In this aspect lies the hope for the future. The issue as it stands is decidedly in favor of the enlightened public sentiment which is now dealing with the question. The effect of the economic conditions which prevailed in the year may be responsible in some degree for the increase.

It was predicted at the start of the year now ended that lynching would be numbered among the lost crimes by 1940. Then, for three recurrent years, the totals were held to low figures. While the view seemed optimistic at the-time, something approaching it may be realized despite the 1930 gain. The newer attitude of the officers of the law may bring the forecast to partial reality. With resolution and character backing the interests of general society, the mob cannot work its will. This was demonstrated more than once last year; in a Texas incident all that was necessary for the sheriff to do was to slap the face of the leader of the hoodlums. The crowd then slunk away. It will be so wherever firmness works for the law.

Election to the key positions of men whose courage is undoubted and whose moral force has been proved under trying circumstances should mean further reductions.

JAN 4 - 1931

A Backslide Towards Barbarism.

IT IS disappointing to learn that 21 persons were lynched in the United States during the past year. The number is just equal to the total for the two preceding years taken together. It is not the worst record of the recent past, however, since the year 1926 saw 30 persons slain in this barbarous manner.

It is not to be supposed, however, that the increase of this year indicates that a general trend in the wrong direction has been established. One does not have to be an old man to remember when a single year's lynchings numbered more than eleven times as many as the bad record of the year just closed. The peak number, if we remember rightly, was 235, in the year 1892, and from 1885 to 1915 the average yearly number of lives taken in that way was more than 100. Compare this with the average of 17 for the past years, and it will readily be seen that enormous progress has been made.

The explanation of this progress is to be found in the growth of a healthier public sentiment in the regions where lynching, in the past, has been most common. Governors, sheriffs and city police officials who will connive at lynching, or flinch before a mob in cowardly fear, are becoming fewer and fewer. The Tuskegee institute which carefully gathers the statistics, tells us that there were 40 instances, during 1930, in which attempted lynchings were prevented by the prompt and effective action of officers of the law.

It is far better that local sentiment in the regions where lynching has most frequently occurred in the past should bring about this great improvement than that resort should be had to an anti-lynching law passed by congress, taking the matter out of the hands of local police authority. Such a law, by arousing bitter feeling might easily result not in eliminating the comparatively small number of lynchings now occurring, but in causing an actual increase.

MORE LYNCHINGS IN 1930.

Just about the time they think they have the lynching evil under control down south, it flames anew, as indicated in the report compiled by the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial institute, which finds that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930.

This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927, and nine less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when the mob burned the jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

It is encouraging, however, to find that in 40 instances lynchings were prevented by law officers. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in the south. All the lynchings with exception of two which occurred in Indiana were perpetrated in southern states, the enlightened state of Georgia leading with six.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were Negroes. The offenses were: Rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

The increase in lynchings is just another mark against the unfortunate year of 1930, although it is doubtful if the business depression had anything to do with it.

LYNCHING RECORD WORSE

Just at a time when it seemed the country's lynching record was to continue sufficiently low to give hope that it might be erased altogether, the graph on the chart takes an upward curve. According to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, 21 persons were lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 cheering instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1 South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

A Black Year in Lynching.

Lynchings leaped up from 10 in 1929 to 21 in 1930, two of these having been in South Carolina.

Notable in the report is the listing of two lynchings in Indiana, showing that disrespect of law and bitter racial animosities are not limited to the South.

Also noteworthy is the large number of lynchings averted. A total of 60 persons, involving some forty different occasions of threatened violence, are cited where officers of the law saved their prisoners from death or injury by mobs. Thirty-five of these were in Southern states.

The increase in lynchings has been explained by some on the ground that economic pressure accentuates racial differences. Others say it is simply in keeping with the increased lawlessness all over the country, neither of which can be considered as any excuse whatever for this degrading and shameful crime. Feeling that the increase of nearly 100 per cent. in one year of deaths by mob violence demands serious thought and prompt measures for improvement, recently a commission was formed, made up of leaders in civic and religious, educational and social work among both races, to study the cause of lynchings and advise on the cure.

The black record of 1930 indicates that the old sore is still festering. Until it is entirely removed, the whole country, but particularly the South, must suffer the severest condemnation of civilized peoples everywhere.

The 1930 Lynching Record

The practical certainty that 1930 would reveal a marked increase in the number of lynchings, in contrast to the downward curve from 1922 to 1929, was apparent before the year was half over. By that time Tuskegee had reported as against 11 for the whole of 1929, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which includes doubtful cases not counted by Tuskegee, had reported 12. The latter has now submitted its report for the whole year—25 persons murdered by mobs, all but one of them Negroes, all but two of them in Southern States, and only three of them even charged with criminal assault. Tuskegee's final report will probably show a total slightly smaller. But whichever count is taken, the year has clearly been one of the worst in recent American history not only in the number of lynchings but in the abandonment in numerous instances of any pretense at protection.

Numbers alone disregarded, any year which included such disgraceful mob murders as those in Sherman, Texas, or Emelle, Ala., or Marion, Ind., or Darien, Ga., would have to be counted as retrogressive. At Sherman the mob destroyed the jail, burned numerous residences, and for hours mocked the law with its orgy of sadistic violence. At Emelle four persons were murdered before the mob fury wore itself out. In Indiana the collapse of the law was again complete, and at Darien military and civilian officials still blame each other for mob actions which reasonable resistence by either could have prevented. Nor should it be overlooked that North Carolina, which in recent years has given encouraging examples of preventing and punishing mob violence, did nothing to prevent and has done nothing to punish, the first lynching it has had in years.

The bright side of the picture, with the exception of a few notable instances in which officials rose to their duty in the face of mob threats, is almost wholly in the promise of the committee of the Southern Interracial Commission. A group of intelligent men of both races has undertaken and is now pursuing the most thorough study of lynching which has ever been attempted. Their study of individual cases has not been completed, but they have already noted some fairly definite findings in regard to the social background of lynchings particularly with relation to the illiteracy and poverty of those who engage in mob violence. In addition, they have instituted, through the University of North Carolina Law School, a survey of the anti-lynching laws in Southern States, of other statutes relating to mobs and of the effectiveness of present methods for preventing and punishing "such disgraceful episodes." George Fort Milton, editor of the Chattanooga News, who is chairman of the committee, has suggested the possibility of offering a uniform anti-lynching law to all Southern States, but the decision as to that awaits the results of the legal survey.

It is to be hoped also that this commission will be able to discover whether, as many commentators have suggested, there is any relation between the current business depression, with its resulting unemployment, and the increased number of lynchings, and whether recent political events have had any influence. All such studies, however, are necessarily limited in value. The South already knows certain fundamental facts. Among them is the fact that in numerous instances the watchfulness and determination of officials can decide whether a prisoner will be defended so that he may enjoy his constitutional right to trial or whether he will be roasted alive. The most depressing single fact about 1930's record is the failure of officials to show this care and courage.

LYNCHINGS IN 1930

The subject is not a pleasant one and the record of 1930 is not an agreeable one to contemplate for instead of the improvement that has been noted in the past three or four years the twelve months past marked another recession to carry us back to 1926. The total number of lynchings for the year was 21 which is 11 more than for 1929, ten more than for 1928, five more than 1927 and nine less than for 1926, when the total was 30.

The record is discouraging for there had been the hope that this peculiarly American crime was on the decline and would eventually come to be negligible. The basis for this hope has been the fact of the increase of popular sentiment against lynchings in the South and the evidence of a stronger determination on the part of officials to prevent them where they were threatened.

This sentiment and this determination still exist so we may still hope that it was only by chance that the big increase occurred last year and that 1931 may witness even fewer than before. At any rate we do know that lynching has ceased to be a policy of the South, as it once was when they believed down there that it was the only defence that they had against crimes of a certain kind. As for the officials, while 21 lynchings were committed they managed to prevent 40 mob killings that were attempted.

As in the past the majority of the lynchings were in the Southern states and the victims were negroes.

By the Tuskeegee institute which compiles lynching statistics the following figures are given:

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 7 other instances armed force was used to repel the would be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 52 negro men and 2 negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, 1 was white and 20 were negroes. The offences were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

It will be seen from the foregoing that 20 of the 21 victims of these mob crimes were negroes and that rape, attempted rape and murder, including killing of officers of the law were the crime for which summary vengeance was taken in 15 of the total of 21 cases.

It is only in the United States that this form of violence is resorted to to any disturbing extent and the reason therefor is obvious. It is a phase of the eternal race question that exists in the South and has existed there since the days of slavery. The people of the South have not yet paid in full the penalty of that blot upon their civilization and there are many to wonder if it ever can be paid.

THE LYNCHING RECORD

There were 21 persons lynched in 1930, one white and 20 negroes, according to figures from Tuskegee Institute. Georgia led with six, Mississippi was next with four, Texas third with three, and Indiana and South Carolina next with two each. One lynching occurred in each of the following states: Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926.

Of those lynched 14 were taken from the hands of the law, and three were killed in jails.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, five in Northern and Western states, and 35 in Southern states. A total of 60 persons, six white, and 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

The mob spirit will never be eradicated but it can be controlled by determined officers.

A Bad Lynching Record

While the tabulators do not agree on the number of lynchings which took place in the country in 1930, therecord is disgracefully high and marks the peak year since 1926. The World Almanac puts the number who met death at the hands of mobs at 25 while the Tuskegee Institute which is recognized as a more trustworthy authority places the number at 21. The World credits Alabama with four lynchings; Tuskegee credits it with only one.

But the record, whatever the correct figures show, is a reproach on our civilization. Only 12 persons were lynched over the whole country in 1929 and the feeling of pride induced by this excellent showing is now dissipated by the ugly record of the present year. Not since 1926 have mobs so frequently taken the law into their own hands. In 1919 there were 83 lynchings, in 1909 there were 87 and in 1899 there were 107 and in 1892 there were 255.

There were 40 instances in 1930 in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was use to repel the would-be lynchers. Lynching on the Increase Statistics [illegible]ching compiled by the Tuskegee Institute show there were 21 persons lynched in 1930, exceeding the record of any year since 1926. This is 17 more than in 1929, 10 more than in 1928, 5 more than in 1927 but 9 less than in 1926. Fourteen of the victims were in the hands of the law, 3 were killed in jails, 5 taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven who were not under arrest, one was burned to death and one burned after death.

Of the 21 lynched, 1 was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: rape 8, murder 3, attempted rape 2, killing law officers 2, robbery 3, being a witness 1, bombing houses 1, charge not reported 1. Georgia, as usual, led the lynchings with 6, Mississippi was second with 4, Texas staged 3, South Carolina and Indiana 2 each, with one each in Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

On the other side of the balance sheet, officers of the law in 40 cases prevented lynchings, 5 in the northern states and 35 in the southern states. A total of 60 persons were saved from mobs, 6 whites, 52 negro men and 2 negro women. In 23 of the cases, the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented and in 7 cases troops or other armed forces repelled the mobs.

The increase in lynchings, like the increase in crime, is largely due to unfavorable economic conditions which make for unrest and discontent. The showing however, is not a favorable one for a country that calls itself civilized but the increased efforts of southern law officers to prevent lynchings is an encouraging sign. The South Carolina law, which makes a sheriff and his bondsmen liable for damages to heirs of those lynched, should be enacted in other states as a deterrant of lynching.

A HORRIBLE RELAPSE—THE 1930 LYNCHING RECORD

"Largely because of the steady decline in lynchings, we had begun to hope that we had a new South morally, economically and politically," an eminent educator said last September. Then he deplored a 1930 record which "revealed the presence of tragic conditions we had hoped we were leaving behind."

In its annual report, Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute today shows how serious the relapse has proved: 21 mob murders in 1930, as compared with 10 such crimes—less than half as many—in 1929.

To find a condition as bad, the chronicler must turn back five years: 30 victims were lynched during 1926.

However, the miserable picture is relieved somewhat by this highly creditable record: During the year State and local officials—by quick action in an emergency, or courage in resisting attack—saved 60 persons from mob violence. In seven instances the officers employed armed force to repel would-be lynchers.

Every such act requires not only physical, but moral, courage; yet the results almost invariably justify the risk. Some years since, after Governor Morrow in Kentucky and Governor Cooper in South Carolina (for examples) had dared use State troops to vindicate the law, the mob spirit noticeably declined. Perhaps a show of official force at the critical time is the most practicable means of curbing the evil. That speaks the only language which a mob can understand.

Meanwhile, civic leaders in many fields are seeking to cure the malady by removing the cause. Last September, six eminent citizens accepted from the Commission on Interracial Co-operation, in Atlanta, an assignment to conduct "the first scientific study of lynching." That body was requested to "bare the basic causes of lynching and devise a working program of prevention." Perhaps its report will suggest some hopeful line of procedure.

For the present, it is well to recognize official courage and to foster it as the Interracial Commission seeks to do with its gold medals. The arrest, conviction and punishment of mob murderers is equally important, of course, but much more difficult to accomplish. After a court had sent nine lynchers to the penitentiary—the leader for life—Georgia was blessed with nearly four years' freedom from the infamy.

Unhappily, that State suffered an epidemic of mob outrages last fall, and it heads the roll with six lynchings in 1930. Soon after the outbreaks, Southern clubwomen met in Atlanta and declared that "every citizen who condones lynching, even by his silence, must be prepared to share the guilt." About the same time several Southern religious organizations spoke in similar terms.

Mississippi, with four lynchings, is second on the list; Texas, with three is third. This State has indicted, but has not yet brought to trial, alleged participants in the mob that burned the Grayson County courthouse down upon its victim. Until justice shall be done in that case, the Commonwealth itself will be on trial.

Lynchings Increase.

While we are looking about at the things that have been done during the year 1930, and taking pride in our many achievements, it is not out of order to take notice of the number of lynchings that have occurred during the year. Reports just issued by the authorities of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute place the total for the year at 21. That many persons died during 1930 without a trial before a jury, a right guaranteed all by the Constitution. In that many instances constituted authority was dethroned for the time being by mob violence.

If this number means nothing to the individual, something of its significance may be obtained by a comparison with figures for previous years. The total for the year just closed is 11 more than the 1929 total, 10 more than the number for the year 1928, and five more than the number for 1927. These facts, of course, are far from complimentary to the American attitude toward law observance, which is supposed to become more broad-minded with the spread of education.

The records indicate that a considerable number of men still permit passion to rob them of reason for a time, and that the tendency is not actually increasing is at least not abating. We who expect protection from the law, and should respect it more each year, are showing a growing tendency to cast it aside and give free reign to the destructive expression of passion.

Even if the victim deserves the fate that is meted out by mob violence, but this can seldom be determined because of the prejudiced spirit that characterizes mob action we are striking at one of the fundamental institutions of our Government.

To Be Deplored

Not the least of the things to be deplored which took place in this country during the year that ended last night was the increase in the number of lynchings. The record speaks for itself, and we pass it on here as it came to our desk yesterday from Dr. R. R. Moton principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute. His letter follows:

"I send you the following information concerning lynchings for the year 1930 I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930 This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number eleven for 1928, five more than the number sixteen for 1927 and nine less than the number thirty for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

"There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings Five of these were in Northern and Western states and thirty-five in Southern states. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two negro men and negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

"Of the twenty-one persons lynched, one was white and twenty were negroes. The offenses were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

A SHAMEFUL RECORD

Among statistics coming in for the year 1930, some of which we are not so proud, is the lynching record. Figures given out by the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute show that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930 in the United States. Figures from other sources show 25, but we prefer the 21. The only saving grace, so far as we are concerned, is the fact that Florida has reduced her figure to 1, whereas back in 1925, we lead the nation.

Other information given out by the institute states that the figure this year is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails 2 of these were shot to death and 1 was burned to death when mob burned jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. LYNCHINGS IN 1930

There was an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930 in comparison with 1929 according to the report of the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, which every year keeps tab on violence of this kind. There were twenty-one lynchings in 1930, according to this report. This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number eleven for 1928, five more than the number sixteen for 1927, and nine less than the number thirty for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and thirty-five in Southern states. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two negro men and two negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, one was white and twenty were negroes. The offenses were rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

The encouaraging feature of the record for the year, according to the report sent out by Robert M. Moton, principal of the Tuskegee Institute, is in the number of lynchings prevented during the year, as indicated by the summary of lynchings and attempted lynchings. It will be noted that in forty-five instances officers of the law prevented lynchings, and there is a good lesson in that for men who are charged with the safe-keeping of prisoners, and whose duty it is to see to it that they get the full benefit of their legal rights in all cases.

It is unfortunate that we had an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930; but the record for the year, as revealed by the Tuskegee report, shows that we can still further reduce these unfortunate happenings, and officers of the law should profit by that fact.

The 1930 Lynching Record.

Records kept by Tuskegee institute for 1930 show a sharp rise in the number of lynchings in the country. Where only 11 persons were lynched in 1928, and but 10 in 1929, there were 21 victims of mob violence in the year just ended. The increase over 1929 was thus more than 100 per cent, and the lynchings recorded in 1930 exactly equalled the total for the 24 preceding months.

While this showing is a regrettable one, it is not particularly difficult to explain. A study of lynchings over a long period of years reveals the fact that increases have almost invariably occurred during times of depression. In 1892, for example, 255 persons were lynched in the United States, an all-time record for the country, and in 1908, another depression year, there were 100 lynchings as compared with 63 in 1907. Even in 1921 lynchings were numerous enough to break a 13-year-old record.

Quite obviously, then, some definite relationship exists between depression and mob violence, so it is hardly surprising that 19[illegible]ed the wo[illegible] year for lynchings since 1926. The fact of this relationship does not make the 1930 showing any less shameful in itself, but when it is compared with the mob savagery of other depression years, it is impossible not to conclude that we are making progress. The Tuskegee institute reports 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings in 1930, and 35 of these were in southern states. Here alone is impressive evidence of the fact that public opinion in the south is standing rather solidly behind the authorities in the performance of their duties. As for the bare record of lynchings in 1930, while it is bad enough, it is still infinitely better than those of 10 or 20 years ago. There is still good reason to believe, considering the progress thus far made, that the United States may record, within the next decade or two, a year without a lynching. And there is at least some basis for the hope that the 1930 showing, such as it is, may never again be equalled.

THE BLOT GROWS BLACKER

THERE were 21 lynchings in 1930, eleven more than in 1929, ten more than in 1928, five more than in 1927, but nine less than in 1926. It had seemed that the blot of this national disgrace was being gradually and definitely erased and the reasons for its sudden flare up during the past year are obscure, unless they are to be explained in the lessening respect for law growing up throughout the country from causes entirely unconnected with those leading up to this barbaric practice. Of last year's lynchings fourteen of the victims, just two-thirds, were taken from the hands of the law, taken from jails or from officers, whose duty it was to protect them, or killed while actually in the hands of the law. All except one of the victims were negros and all except two of the lynchings were in southern states. Only eight of the offences charged were rape.

The only encouraging note in connection with this record of disgrace, is the fact that 40 instances are noted in which officers of the law prevented lynchings and 35 of these were in southern states. Preventative measures in most cases were the removal of the prisoners or the strengthening of the guards but in seven cases armed forces were used to repel lynchers and, actually, two of such instances were in southern states. A total of 60 persons, 52 negro men, six white men and two negro women were thus saved from violent death at the hands of mobs. It would be interesting to know how many, if any, of the members of the mobs that murdered or tried to murder defenseless prisoners, were punished for their lawlessness.

A BAD LYNCHING RECORD.

One good result, among many others, that will be obtained by rushing the work of the present Congress through so that an extraordinary session of the 72nd will be unnecessary is the postponement of anti-lynching bills. The lynching record of last year was disappointing and even disheartening. The number of these crimes doubled as compared with 1929, and according to some statistics approached that of 1926. Twelve lynchings (the 1929 figure) are too many and are indeed enough to constitute a national disgrace; but what shall we say of 25 or even 21, to take Principal Morton's figures?

Undoubtedly the movement for a federal anti-lynching law would be tremendously stimulated by this retrograde movement, and, considering that the Republican platform of 1928 favored such a law, the president might not feel that he ought to veto any reasonable act that might be passed, whatever his personal opinion should be. If Congress does not assemble until December, it may be hoped that a far better showing in 1931 would produce a more hopeful feeling with regard to the effects of public sentiment and state action in lessening and finally exterminating this evil.

The statistics of the past decade show on the whole a history of progress. The first sharp decrease was in 1923, although 1903 was the last year in which lynchings had exceeded 100, 1899 having been the first year that the 100 mark had not been reached. The tide was on the ebb and a new low mark was reached in 1922, when the number was 57. But the next year there was an unprecedented break (proportionately to the whole number) when there were only 33 lynchings. The next year repeated with a drop to 16. This did not hold, and the figure for 1926 was 30. By 1928 there was a reduction to 11 and only one more was recorded the following year. Each recurrence of a lynching wave seems to be followed of late by a renewal of public agitation and it is to be expected as well as hoped that such indignation will be effective this year to bring about a revival of law and order. It is perhaps not too much to hope that even a new low may be made.

We do not see how the enactment of a federal law can be avoided if the situation does not improve during the present year, decidedly as we believe that it is better to leave the matter in the hands of the states. There is little hope that a federal statute would put an end to the present conditions. One of the proposals for such a law is that counties or other administrative units should be heavily fined when such lawlessness occurs within their limits. We will leave it to those who advocate such measures to designate the clause of the Constitution which authorizes the "fining" of municipalities within the states! It is to be doubted, for that matter, that any anti-lynching law whatever would be constitutional.

In any event, the nation has already found that the effect of the taking over of state police activities by the federal government has been to cause a relaxation of local enforcement. The most obvious example is furnished by prohibition, but there is some reason to believe that the Harrison drug act has been followed by some relaxation of the efforts made by the states to enforce their own laws pertaining to the sale of narcotics.

No one can plausibly argue that the southern states, where all but two of the 1930 lynchings occurred, are doing all that is humanly possible to suppress this evil. Yet it is made evident in many ways that there is a growing sentiment among the better class of people in the South that this lawlessness is a sectional disgrace, and a growing determination that it shall be done away with. It is probable that this sentiment will be more effective to bring about the establishment of law and order than outside interference would be. The South bitterly resents any encroachment upon local government, except with regard to prohibition, and it is fully to be expected that the more the federal power interferes, the less will be done by that section to work out its own salvation. We do not believe the nation should give up hope that the southern states can solve the problem for themselves merely because one year has shown a serious backsliding. If the record of two or three years should indicate that this evil is again getting the upper hand, it may be necessary to consider the constitutionality and the advisability of federal interference—but the time is not yet.

LYNCHINGS IN 1930

The Tuskegee Institute of Alabama reports that there were 21 persons lynched in the United States in 1930. This is 11 more than in 1929, 10 more than in 1928; five more than in 1927 and nine less than in 1926. It is further shown that 14 of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law; three were killed in jail and one was burned to death when the mob burned down the jail in which he was incarcerated. Five of the other 11 persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers outside of the jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned. The states in which the lynchings occurred and the number in each state are: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

This is a very gruesome record and one which renews the demand that something be done to prevent such tragedies and to secure for every offender, regardless of his crime, a fair trial by jury. Twenty of the 21 persons lynched were negroes; and it is evident that they became the victims of infuriated mobs as a result of sudden impulse which the police or government authorities should have restrained. It has often been apparent that the officials of jails and other prisons have yielded too readily to the demand of lynching mobs for the delivery of prisoners while awaiting trial. In many cases, some of the sheriffs have yielded too easily to the demands of such mobs. This lynching business is a disgrace to the United States that is not paralleled in any other civilized country.

There was an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930 in comparison with 1929, according to the report of the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, which every year keeps tab on [illegible] of this kind. There were twenty-one lynchings in 1930, according to this report. This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number eleven for 1928, five more than the number sixteen for 1927, and nine less than the number thirty for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and thirty-five in Southern states. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented on other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two negro men and two negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, one was white and twenty were negroes. The offenses were: rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

The encouraging feature of the record for the year, according to the report sent out by Robert R. Moton, principal of the Tuskegee Institute, is in the number of lynchings prevented during the year, as indicated by the summary of lynchings and attempted lynchings. It will be noted that in forty-five instances officers of the law prevented lynchings, and there is a good lesson in that for men who are charged with the safe-keeping of prisoners, and whose duty it is to see to it that they get the full benefit of their legal rights in all cases.

It is unfortunate that we had an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930; but the record for the year, as revealed by the Tuskegee report, shows that we can still further reduce these unfortunate happenings, and officers of the law should profit by that fact.

No Lynchings in Tennessee.

There was a slight increase in the number of lynchings during the year past, according to the report of President Moton of Tuskegee Institute, but in the list of states in which mob tragedies occurred the name of Tennessee is conspicuous by its absence.

This is the goal to which the Volunteer state has aspired for many years. And the fact that it has at last been reached is a tribute indeed to an increasing enlightenment among her citizens.

Another encouraging feature of Doctor Moton's annual survey is the revelation that in forty instances during 1930 officers of the law were able to prevent lynchings. Five of these frustrated efforts occurred in Northern and Western states and thirty-five were due to the vigilance of Southern sheriffs or law enforcement officials.

The means of prevention was usually that of removing the prisoner to some less hostile atmosphere, or augmenting the guard for his protection.

It would have been equally as interesting and effective if the Tuskegee research department had also provided information as to the results of legal action taken against those threatened with lynchings. In the more extreme cases which are often used as a justification for mob violence—and happily these were in a great minority in the past year—it is safe to say that investigation will show that the law has not failed to function quickly and effectively to exact the proper penalties.

Tennessee may well be proud of her 1930 lynching record and should resolve to keep it unblemished.

Incidental to the Tuskegee Institute's record of lynchings in 1930, is information that in 40 instances, officers of the law prevented mob violence. Five of these preventions were located in Northern and Western States, while in the South, the law prevented 35. And yet, one lynching in the South creates more front page stuff than half a dozen lynchings in the North. It is a circumstance worth remembering that in 1930, as many as 35 lynchings were prevented in the South, against five in the North and West.

ANOTHER ONE ON 1930.

All sorts of mean things are being charged upon 1930 — drouth, low prices for farm produce, big increase of crime, business depression, Democratic victories and calamities of many kinds. And now, among others we have to record a big increase in the number of lynchings in the land. For years the Tuskegee Institute, at Tuskegee, Ala., has kept a record of lynchings in the country and each year the principal sends out a report of them to the press of the country. Here is a letter The Times has just received from him:

> I find according to the records compiled in the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute, that there were 21 persons lynched in 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. 14 of the persons were in the hands of the law, 3 were killed in jails 2 of these were shot to death and 1 was burned to death when mob burned jail; 5 of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and 6 from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the 7 victims who did not come into the hands of the law, 1 was burned to death and 1 was put to death and his body burned.
>
> There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. 5 of these were in Northern and Western states and 35 in Southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the 7 other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 52 Negro men and 2 Negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.
>
> Of the 21 persons lynched, 1 was white and 20 were Negroes. The offenses were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempt rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.
>
> The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Arkansas, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

It isn't a good report with which to greet the new year, but maybe it will make us ashamed of the record and result in improvement in the future.

A BLACK YEAR IN LYNCHING

Lynchings leaped up from 10 in 1929 to 21 in 1930, two of these having been in South Carolina.

Notable in the report is the listing of two lynchings in Indiana, showing that disrespect of law and bitter racial animosities are not limited to the South.

Also noteworthy is the large number of lynchings averted. A total of 60 persons, involving some forty different occasions of threatened violence, are cited where officers of the law saved their prisoners from death or injury by mobs. Thirty-five of these were in southern states.

The increase in lynchings has been explained by some on the ground that economic pressure accentuates racial difference. Others say it is simply in keeping with the increased lawlessness all over the country, neither of which can be considered as any excuse whatever for this degrading and shameful crime. Feeling that the increase of nearly 100 per cent. in one year of deaths by mob violence demands serious thought and prompt measures for improvement, recently a commission was formed, made up of leaders in civic and religious, educational and social work among both races, to study the cause of lynchings and advise on the cure.

The black record of 1930 indicates that the old sore is still festering. Until it is entirely removed, the whole country, but particularly the South, must suffer the severest condemnation of civilized peoples everywhere.—Columbia State.

LYNCHINGS

Every year about this time there comes to the editorial desk a letter from the principal of the Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, and we know before we tear the envelope that we have the figures on lynchings during the previous year. It came by air mail this time, a few days earlier than usual, and conveys the information that there were 21 lynchings in the United States in 1930, as compared to 10 in 1929, 11 in 1928, 16 in 1927, and 30 in 1926. In short, a report of year-by-year improvement until 1928, and a revolting growth of barbarism in the year just passed. All the victims save one were negroes, and all but two took place in southern states, the exceptions being in Indiana. It is a disgraceful situation but there isn't anything we can do about it; the problem belongs to the south.

Lynchings Grow Out of Idleness

Lynchings in the United States during 1930 were more than double those in 1929. Ten were lynched in 1929; 21 in 1930. One goes back four years, to 1926, to find last year's lynchings exceeded. In 1926 lynchings totaled 30.

These figures are from the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute. Against the lynching record, the institute reports that in 47 instances a total of 60 persons, 6 white men, 52 negro men, and two negro women, thru efforts of officers of the law, were saved from death at hands of mobs. In seven cases officers used arms to check mobs.

The increase in lynchings during last year over the previous one indicates that idleness is an important factor, in our opinion. Idleness works two ways. Crime increases when men are idle. With idle men, including Negroes, roaming the south, it is not surprising that more crimes which the South believes deserve lynching were committed. Jobless men loafing about small cities are ripe material for mob leaders. Increase in lynching lies at the door of economic depression.

Some time ago we spoke, perhaps thoughtlessly, of the "less enlightened" South. We got "bawled out" for it, by a contributor to the Public Forum.

It is interesting to note that 18 of the 21 persons lynched fell victims to mobs in the "deep South," while the other three were divided, two from Indiana and one from Oklahoma.

More Lynchings, But . . .

Dr. R. R. Moton, of Tuskeegee, is in the prints with his annual report on lynching. The lynching curve has turned upward again. The number of mob murders in 1930 was 21, nearly double the number in 1929, which stood at 12. Of the twenty-one persons lynched, twenty were Negroes and one was white. With the exception of two in Indiana, all these mob murders occurred in eight Southern states—Georgia 6; Mississippi 4; Texas 3; South Carolina 2; and one each in Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma. Less than half of the victims were charged with rape or attempted rape.

In seeking an explanation for a revival of mob law which nothing can excuse we may find it in the disturbed condition of the times. Students of the subject point out that all sorts of crime, particularly crimes of violence, increase in periods of anxiety and suffering from hard times. But the real cause goes deeper and is to be found in the tradition that collective lawlessness is no crime and that swift and summary vengeance will act as a deterrent to others, especially Negroes. In most cases a mob is actuated by unbridled passion and is more interested wreaking vengeance—in getting hold of a victim than in being certain that it is hanging or burning or otherwise torturing the right man.

It is an outrageous invasion of the authority of the state for a band of lawless people to determine for themselves the guilt of an accused person and to murder him out of hand without pretense of trial. The whole procedure is so vicious, so calculated to lead to tragic mistakes and so unnecessary to assure proper punishment for crimes committed by Negroes, or white people either that no effort should be spared to wipe out this unspeakable evil. But before such effort becomes the regular procedure, no matter how attrocious an offense may be, there must be created in every state and community an enlightened public sentiment which will recognize lynching as the hideous thing that it is—sheer savagery, foul murder—a virile public sentiment which will mark the brow of every lyncher with the brand of Cain, uncover his cowardly anonymity, punish him as he deserves, and which will cast down every weak-kneed sheriff or other official who fails to uphold the majesty of the law at any cost.

It is gratifying and heartening to know that such sentiment is growing. This is shown by the fact that sixty mob murders were prevented last year by officers of the law and, in a few cases, by the use of armed forces. Additional encouragement is to be derived from a survey of the record for the past half century. The lynching curve for that period shows, in general, a steady decline. There were 255 lynchings in 1892. Taking into account the population then and now, we find that had the same ratio of lynching continued, there would have been nearly 500 lynchings last year instead of twenty-one.

Which still are twenty-one too many. These figures point to the time when a quickened and aroused and a determined public sentiment will wipe out the last stain of mob vengeance. That time cannot come too soon to remove the blight of mediaeval barbarity from our Southern and American civilization.

GEORGIA NOT THE WORST

Journal

Our editors of race papers on the other side of the Mason-Dixon Line take a keen delight in holding up the South and everything southern to ridicule. Bro. J. H. Murphy of the Afro-American published in Baltimore, Md., joined the ranks of such irrational demagogues in his editorial of last week, under the caption: "We die faster, but live longer." Among other things he asks such a childish question, "Who would want to stay in Georgia?" the query may have sounded smart to the doty editor, but to thoughtful people, regardless of residence, it smacked of senility. What he was driving after wanted to prove, the editorial fails to determine. Probably he just sat down to his trusty Oliver machine and just wrote or rather tried to write, a space filler.

Georgia is by no means the only plague spot in the United States, neither is it by a long shot the worst place in which to live. Segregation is as rampant in Baltimore as Atlanta, and decidedly worse than Savannah, Ga. Negroes are billied and shot by Baltimore guardians of the law as freely as any where in the black belt. Baltimore has unequal salary standards for its teachers as you will find in any other southern community. If the light were turned on, and the facts known, the state in which Bro. Murphy lives would rank as high in Negro killing as Georgia.

Thousands of Negroes in Baltimore and other Northern centers would fare much better in Georgia during these hard times than is their lot at present. Brother Murphy Georgia is not the worst.

Below we present two excerpts, one clipped from the Pittsburgh Courier and the other from the Savannah Evening Press. Both of them deal with human needs and suffering. One in Georgia and the other in Pennsylvania. If any one were to ask the freed prisoner if he preferred to live in Georgia or elsewhere, his answer would be Georgia.

Lynching In 1930

TUSKEGEE Institute reports 21 lynchings for 1930, a~~nd the Na~~tional Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 25. The number for 1929 is set at 10 or 12, so that it is fair to say that, whether it was 21 or 25 last year, the number was double that of the previous year.

Just as the commission that is investigating lynching for the Commission of Interracial Cooperation has reported that there is a relation between the lynchings in any community and the economic condition of the community, so there is a relation between the total lynchings and the economic situation of the people as a whole. The records of lynching show that the number has tended to rise higher in years of business depression. The present depression did not begin till the end of 1929 and it grew steadily worse through 1930. That is one explanation for the doubling in the number of lynchings from one year to the other.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored people is out-and-out for federal anti-lynching legislation. Walter White, its acting secretary, calls for prompt Congressional action to prevent the lynching total from going still higher this year, owing to a continuance of the depression. It may come to federal legislation in the end, as many people think it must, but there are not lacking present efforts that may stimulate the states to greater endeavor to suppress the evil.

One is the survey now being conducted by the Interracial commission. Another is the significant repudiation of lynching as a form of protection for women by representative southern women in 12 states. Analysis of lynchings has long made it obvious that the crime is no longer committed chiefly as "punishment" for offences against white women, whatever may have been true years ago. The movement of intelligent and representative white women to condemn the crime with all the vigor at their command should have considerable influence on public opinion in the South.

A Shameful Record.

For two or three years there had been a gradual and gratifying improvement in the country's lynching record and the law-respecting public was encouraged to believe we were getting away from this sinister species of lawlessness. Then, last year, the mob "broke out in a new place" and again issued a challenge to Twentieth Century civilization.

According to statistics compiled by Tuskegee Institute at Tuskegee, Alabama, there were twenty-one lynchings during 1930. According to the Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the number was twenty-five. There were not less than twenty-one lynchings and there may have been twenty-five. Certainly the lynching mob made a record of which the American people need to be ashamed.

There were six lynchings in Georgia, four in Mississippi, three in Texas, two in South Carolina, two in Indiana, and one each in Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma. Thus it will be seen that, as usual, the mob's murderous activities were confined chiefly to the South. And it can not be said that the Southern lynchings were provoked by crimes against white women by Negroes, for less than half the lynchings were for crimes or attempted crimes of that character.

With one exception all of the mob victims were negroes, and the offenses for which the mob presumed to mete out punishment were rape, eight; attempted rape, two; murder, three; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one, bombing-houses, one, and charge not reported, one. Whether all the persons put to death illegally for these offenses were guilty is not known, since none of them was given the day in court which the fundamental law of the land says every accused person shall have.

But granting that all of the twenty-one or twenty-five victims of lynchings were guilty, there was no call for mob violence in any case. Those who had committed capital crimes would have been tried and put to death in a legal and orderly manner, while those who had committed lesser crimes would have been punished according to law. So-called mob justice appears all the more heinous when it exacts the lives of persons guilty of no offense punishable by death or even by a prison sentence.

What we must have in every community in this country is rule by the law at all times and rule by the mob at no time. We shall have that when officers of the law everywhere faithfully perform the duty devolving upon them to protect their prisoners. And this will happen when every officer who fails to protect a prisoner in his keeping is held to strict account for his dereliction of duty. While mobs were staging from twenty-one to twenty-five lynchings last year there were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Most of the lynchings that occurred could have been prevented, since most of the victims were taken from the hands of the law. A determination to protect prisoners and to punish lynchers would soon free the South from the disgrace of mob lawlessness and savagery. This much the people of every Southern State and community should demand of those in authority.

Lynching Survey

THE ANNUAL SURVEY of mob violence in this country made by the Tuskegee Institute is being carried in today's Free Press. Principal Robert Moton, the celebrated negro educator and head of the school states that according to statistics gathered by the Department of Records and Research of the Institute 21 persons were lynched in 1930. Comment was made in these columns a few days ago on the statistical report carried by the New York World in which it was stated that there were 25 lynchings.

The Free Press hopes that the Tuskegee record is correct and it is inclined to accept the figures of Professor Moton for his Institute has made a practice for many years of compiling these statistics.

The survey shows that the number of lynchings in 1930 was greater than in any year since 1926 when a total of 30 victims of mob violence were reported.

Fourteen of the 21 victims in 1930 were in the hands of the law, either in jail or in custody of officers when taken by mob. Only seevn had not come into the hands of the law.

An interesting comment on the records of the year says that there were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Thirty-five of these were in Southern states. A total of sixty persons were saved from mob violence in these forty instances. Of those lynched in 1930 twenty were negroes and one was white. Nineteen of the lynchings were in Southern states. The only Northern state in which mob violence was meted out was Indiana which had two victims. Georgia led with six and Mississippi with four. Texas had three, South Carolina two, Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma had one each.

The lynching in North Carolina was the first in this State in a decade or more.

LYNCHING STATISTICS.

It is rather strange that, as the number of lynchings has greatly decreased from that recorded at the beginning of the century, the statistics have become rather less than more trustworthy. The Philadelphia Public Ledge lately gave 25 as the record for 1930, with details showing the number from each state. Principal Moton, whose Tuskegee Institute figures are generally considered to be standard, places the number at 21, There has been, if we are not mistaken, similar divergence among different authorities as statistics for the earlier months have appeared.

A possible explanation is that there may be a difference of opinion as to the status of wholly unnecessary killings, following upon the pursuit of fugitives from justice. Some may class these as lynchings, while others may include only those mob murders where the victim has been taken deliberately from the custody of officers of the law. It is a crime to kill a prisoner who has been fairly overpowered, even if he had previously resisted capture and fired upon his pursuers; yet there is an obvious difference between such a homicide, committed in hot blood by a posse which had been organized with the legitimate purpose of aiding in an arrest, and a deliberate murder by a mob that had got together with the intent of depriving a prisoner of a trial by law.

INCREASE IN LYNCHING

In a report issued from the Tuskegee Institute of Alabama it is disclosed that lynching during the past year increased in a marked degree over the three preceding years. There were, according to the Department of Records and Research of the colored industrial institute, 21 persons lynched in 1930, which was 11 more than in 1929, 10 more than in 1928 and five more than in 1927. However, the 1930 record was nine less than in 1926.

Of the 21 persons lynched during 1930, 14 were in the hands of the law, three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned the jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

On the other hand, the Institute reports that there were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offenses were: rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each states are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

LYNCHINGS IN 1930

There was an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930 in comparison with 1929, according to the report of the Department of Records and Research of the Tuskegee Institute which every year keeps tab on violences of this kind. There were twenty-one lynchings in 1930, according to this report. This is eleven more than the number ten for 1929, ten more than the number eleven for 1928, five more than the number sixteen for 1927, and nine less than the number thirty for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law, three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when mob burned jail; five of the eleven other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside of jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were forty instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in Northern and Western states and thirty-five in Southern states. In thirty-three of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of sixty persons, six white men, fifty-two negro men and two negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the twenty-one persons lynched, one was white and twenty were negroes. The offenses were: rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; Indiana, two; Mississippi, four; North Carolina, one; Oklahoma, one; South Carolina, two; Texas, three.

The encouraging feature of the record for the year, according to the report sent out by Robert R. Moton, principal of the Tuskegee Institute, is in the number of lynchings prevented during the year, as indicated by the summary of lynchings and attempted lynchings. It will be noted that in forty-five instances officers of the law prevented lynchings, and there is a good lesson in that for men who are charged with the safe-keeping of prisoners, and whose duty it is to see to it that they get the full benefit of their legal rights in all cases.

It is unfortunate that we had an increase in the number of lynchings in 1930; but the record for the year, as revealed by the Tuskegee report, shows that we can still further reduce these unfortunate happenings, and officers of the law should profit by that fact.

THE LYNCHING BLOT OF 1930

For the past several years the number of lynchings in America decreased at an appreciable rate annually, and it was believed by whites and blacks alike that this blot on our national life was rapidly being eliminated. But now comes the disheartening announcement that lynchings numbered 21 in the United States during 1930, the largest number since 1925. Georgia headed the list of states with six lynchings. One northern state, Indiana, joined the ranks withtwo. North Carolina, the southern state which has had the best record in this matter rejoined the doubtful list with one lynching, the first in nine or ten years. Only eight of the charges, or less than 40 percent were for the time-honored incentive to lynching—that of rape. Three were lynched for murdering whites, while the other 10 cases were more or less trivial—at least, too trivial to give any group of people an excuse for resorting to mob violence. Southern people condemn the mob spirit as heartily as do northerners. In fact, the north and west have no reason whatever to point a finger of scorn at the South, for in the whole history of the United States, there have been only five of the 48 states in which lynchings have not occurred — Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire. It appears to be largely a matter of controlling mob psychology, which is just as likely to be manifested north of Mason and Dixon's line as south of it, or west of the Mississippi as readily as east of it. Of course, there has been a decidedly drop in the number of lynchings annually in the country during the past generation. Prior to 1900, there was an average of over 250 lynchings a year in America. Then the various organizations for the promotion of understanding and good will between the races began their constructive efforts toward the eliminating of this blot on American civilization with the result that the past three years, the average was about 13. Now there is an upward trend which it is hoped will be turned during 1931 and shortly wiped from the country forever.

OLD YEAR SAW 21 LYNCHINGS

20 Blacks, One White Victims of Mob Fury During 1930

The United States during 1930 lost its good record of decreased lynchings that had been characteristic of the past few years and enrolled a total of 21 persons who met their death violently at the hands of mobs. The statistics, compiled by Major Robert R. Moton, principal of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute at Tuskegee, Ala., the school founded by the late Booker T. Washington, were released today.

Major Moton compared the statistics with those of the past five years, showing that they were 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, five more than the number 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926.

Fourteen of the persons lynched

during 1930 were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned the jail where he was confined. Five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside the jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, the report revealed. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women, were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offences were: Rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 1; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

JUDGE LYNCH HOLDS COURT [illegible]NER

With only 10 lynchings in [illegible] and 11 in 1928, as compared with 30 or 40 a few years ago, the country had begun to congratulate itself on success in erasing this blotch on orderly government. But, according to records compiled by Tuskogee Institute, in Alabama, 21 persons were made victims of mobs in [illegible] just ended. Moreover, 14 of these persons were in the hands of the law when seized to be sacrificed to mob fury. Three were killed in jails, the death of [illegible] being accomplished by firing and destroying the jail itself. Five others were taken from jails and six were taken from officers outside of jails.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state were: Alabama, 1; Florida, 1; Georgia, 6; Indiana, 2; Mississippi, 4; North Carolina, 1; Oklahoma, 1; South Carolina, 2; Texas, 3.

Twenty of the 21 persons lynched were negroes. The offences were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

However, against this record is the fact that in 40 instances officers of the law prevented lynchings, sometimes only by resort to extreme means, thus saving a total of 60 persons from mob fury. Thirty-five of these instances were in southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or guards augmented or other means taken to safeguard them, while in seven cases armed force was used to repel mobs. The fact of the use of extreme measures by peace officers to protect prisoners is the most encouraging sign of all. Lynch law cannot prevail against the determination of officers to do their full duty.

NOT SO BAD

The annual lynching statistics are again available, being sent out with the accustomed promptness by the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, the South's best known negro college.

While the nation as a whole does not show up so well and Georgia showed a humiliating lapse, there is considerable satisfaction in the thought that Florida was less blood-thirsty than during some previous years. But one unlawful execution was marked against the escutcheon of this commonwealth, a much better mark than was registered the previous year. It was about as good as the last year of the Martin administration, when the fear of the law had been thrown into the hearts of mass executioners by the use of state militia in repulsing an assault upon the Tampa jail.

According to the records kept at Tuskegee 21 persons were lynched in the United States during 1930. This is 11 more than the number 10 for 1929, 10 more than the number 11 for 1928, 5 more than the number 16 for 1927 and 9 less than the number 30 for 1926. Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails. Two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when the mob burned the jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from jails and six from officers of the law outside the jails. Of the seven victims who did not come into the hands of the law, one was burned to death and one was put to death and his body burned.

A most commendable fact is that officers of the law prevented 40 lynchings during the year. Thirty-five of these instances are from Southern states, and only five from Northern and Western states. This diligence upon the part of the authorities down South will probably prove disheartening to critics of the section and goes to show that sentiment against lynching is rapidly increasing in Dixie.

In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

MORE LYNCHINGS.

The fact that lynchings in 1930, as reported by the Tuskegee Institute, were twice as numerous as in 1929 is discouraging. Twenty-one persons, one white and 20 negroes, were put to death by mobs during the year, as compared with 10 persons lynched in 1929. Fourteen of the victims were taken from the hands of the law and three of the number were killed in jails. In addition, there were 40 instances in which attempts at lynchings were frustrated by officers, either by removal of prisoners or augmented guards.

Murders by mobs took place in nine states, Georgia heading the list with six. Other states in which they occurred and the number in each are: Alabama 1; Florida 1, Indiana 2, Mississippi 4, North Carolina 1, Oklahoma 1, South Carolina 2 and Texas 3.

While the total of such crimes was greater than it has been since 1926, the outlook is not completely disheartening. Twenty-five or 30 years ago lynchings ran as high as 255 in one year. The set-back in 1930 from the steady decrease reported in the previous three years need not be regarded as a start toward the return of any such ghastly figure as that of a quarter-century ago.

The sudden increase this year will doubtless spur private citizens, public officials and social organizations to further and stronger action against mob violence. A study of the Tuskegee report shows that lynchings occur usually in communities where the economic and educational standards are low. This suggests constructive work in education and social welfare.

Lynchings In 1930

Indiana was ~~the only northern~~ state to stoop to lynching during the year that has just closed. Two persons were lynched in the Hoosier state—both at Marion, Indiana. Michigan had no lynchings nor near-lynchings, so far as is known by the records made by the Tuskegee Institute which compiles and sends to all newspapers an annual report of mob activities.

In 1930 there were 21 lynchings, which is the highest number of any year since 1926. In 1929 there were 10 lynchings.

Fourteen of the luckless persons who died at the hands of infuriated mobs, were in the hands of the law. Three of them were killed in jails; in fact the jail was burned down in one case, with the victim inside. Others were taken from officers and shot and burned.

All of those who were lynched, with one exception, were Negroes. Their crimes were; for rape 8; murder 3; attempted rape 2; killing officers of the law 2; robbery 3; being a witness 1; bombing houses 1. The charge against the other man is not reported.

Georgia takes the leather medal for the number of lynchings it perpetrated—having six on its roll. Mississippi mobs slew four, Texas three, South Carolina two, and Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma one each.

A civilized people is one which puts the law in control and inflicts just punishment calmly and in due course of legal trial and procedure. The south has a problem which is seldom faced in the north and the belief persists that the only way to keep down the blackman is to deal swift, violent, public retribution to wrongdoers. If lynching has any justification in the south, however, it has none in such states as Indiana. Certainly a blush of shame must arise in that state for the damage to its reputation as a center of culture done during the past year by the white-robed mob at Marion.

Rather Discouraging

These statistics deal with the lynchings which occurred throughout the country in 1930. It reports that according to the records there were 21 persons lynched in the United States during the year, an increase of 11 over the total of 10 for 1929, 10 more than the total 11 for 1928, five more than the total of 16 for 1927 and nine less than the number 30 for 1926.

This record is all the more significant because it shows that mob violence, as evidenced by lynching, broke out in states which had previously been free from it. In other years the lynchings had been confined almost entirely to a few southern states; in 1930 these outbreaks had occurred in more states, namely; one in Alabama, one in Florida, six in Georgia, two in Indiana, four in Mississippi, one in North Carolina, one in Oklahoma, two in South Carolina and three in Texas.

The record is discouraging. Lynch law and mob law are attacks at organized law of the land. The 1930 total shows that there has been a set back in the progress which had been made in decreasing such outbreaks. But it must be remembered that such relapses are to be expected. Despite this shameful record, there is a general trend to let the law take its regular course. The past year, it is to be hoped, was an exception.

MOB SLAYINGS INCREASED

Mob murders followed an upward curve last year when 21 persons were lynched in the United States. Two of these were in Indiana and the others in the South.

This is the highest number occuring any year since 1926 according to records compiled at Tuskegee institute.

The greatest reflection on those employed to uphold law is the fact that 14 of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law.

As against this 40 lynchings were prevented by officers.

Despite law and public opinion it seems almost impossible to end mob violence.

When men are angered to the point where only vengeance satisfies, it takes force and courage to protect those suspected of revolting crimes. Yet it is a blot on government that suspects are not tried and punished by due process of law.

WE SHUDDER at the number of American lynchings annually. Down at Tuskegee, Alabama, is the negro institute made famous by the late Booker T. Washington. This school keeps an accurate record of the lynchings and the figures given out are not pleasing.

Lynchings in 1930

Lynchings for 1930, according to Principal Moton of Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, numbered twenty-one, eleven more than in 1929, and the largest number in any year since 1926. Of the twenty-one, twenty were Negroes, and the state with the worst record was Georgia, with six.

One feature of the year's record that will bear stressing is that exactly two thirds of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. In the states which have recourse to the lynching of Negroes, there is never the slightest ground for believing that a suspect in the hands of the police will escape punishment if he is guilty. The danger is that he will be found guilty on insufficient evidence—evidence that would not secure a conviction in the case of a white man. The only possible excuse for a resort to lynch law was, therefore, lacking in these fourteen cases—namely, the excuse that the law could not be depended upon to punish the guilty.

If fourteen prisoners taken from the law and put to death makes a shameful record, there is ground for satisfaction in the knowledge that forty cases of attempted lynchings were prevented by officers who had the courage to defy a mob. Thirty-five of these foiled lynchings were in the southern states and of sixty prisoners menaced by them, forty-two were Negroes.

A DISGRACEFUL RECORD

As in most other matters the record of lynchings for 1930 was a bad one.

Each year the Tuskegee Institute compiles the statistics on lynchings, showing the number and the reasons for them.

During 1930, just 21 persons were lynched in America. This is 11 more than in 1929 when the low water mark of 10 was reached. For the last decade the number of lynchings in America had been steadily declining until the year 1930. A decade ago, mobs were murdering as many as 50 persons in a year, or about one a week.

During 1930, however, there were 40 cases in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, which reveals a rising tide of sentiment against them.

Of the 21 persons lynched last year 1 was white and 20 were colored. The offenses charged against the victims were: rape, 8; murder, 3; attempted rape, 2; killing officers of the law, 2; robbery, 3; being a witness, 1; bombing houses, 1; charge not reported, 1.

Georgia led the list with 6 lynchings; Mississippi had 4; Texas, 3; South Carolina, 2; Indiana, 2; and Alabama, Florida, North Carolina, and Oklahoma had 1 apiece.

From these figures it will be seen that the old defense of mob law, that it was necessary to "protect the honor of the women of the South" is no longer valid. In half of the cases there was no charge of rape or attempteed rape.

Lynching is nothing more or less than mob murder. Until last year, we were rapidly getting to the point in America where it would be extinct, but last year brought a serious setback. That lost ground must be recovered in 1931, and it is to be hoped that the day is not far away when lynch law will cease to exist in this country.

LYNCHINGS INCREASED

Americans as individuals and as a people despise lynching, yet there are occasions when this prejudice is forgotten, mob spirit rules and a "necktie party" is the result. For years now, authorities have been trying to cut down the number of yearly lynchings with a fair degree of success. The year 1929 was the banner year as regards numbers. Only ten lynchings took place in that year.

But in 1930 the number went up to 21. Many people will see in that further evidence of present-day lawlessness. It is either that, or disgust with the frequent apparent futility of legal methods and an effort by citizens to take justice into their own hands. Lynchings, as a rule, are the result of hysteria following the commission of some particularly heinous crime. Members of the lynching party are as often as not normally law-abiding citizens, temporarily unbalanced.

That does not excuse lynchings, however. The work of preventing them should continue. There is never sufficient reason for the use of the lynch law, no matter how dastardly the crime, nor how slow the ordinary operation of justice. The increase from 10 to 21 lynchings in the past year means that a little more care must be taken in the future to prevent mob justice. It is mostly the southern states which suffer from lynchings and among the twenty-one persons lynched in 1930 there was one white man. Such record speaks for itself.

FOND DU LAC, WIS.

WHAT ABOUT THIS?

During the year just ended there were twenty-one persons lynched in this country.

States in which lynchings occurred were Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Texas. Georgia headed the list with four crimes of that nature while Texas was second with three.

The record discloses that twenty out of the twenty-one persons lynched were Negroes. In other words mobs in some places are still trying to solve by lynchings the so-called race problem that is always a mooted subject in most states where there is a large colored population.

Last year's total of lynchings shows an increase over that of the preceding year of eleven. In fact it provides the largest total during the past fourteen years.

Lynchings are merely one demonstration of mob rule. No matter where or when they are staged or who the victims may be, every lynching party is in direct defiance of law; it is a throw-back to the days when law and order in any form did not prevail in this country or when it had broken down to such an extent that lynching parties were considered the only solution of the trouble.

It is especially significant that the ring leaders in lynching parties, although known in most instances to the authorities, are seldom prosecuted and punished. That can have but one meaning—law and order are inclined to wink, when it suits their convenience to do so at the very things that tend to create distrust and suspicion of all laws.

Many lynchings during the last year revealed as active members of the mobs both boys and girls in their 'teens. There is something even for the states where the race problem is supposed to be pressing to ponder over in relation to what may happen in the future.

And if lynchings be the proper thing in the states where cases of that sort occur, why the special efforts of those states to suppress the threat of mob rule with respect to anything else in those places?

1930'S RECORD OF LYNCHINGS

The heavy increase in the number of lynchings which 1930 witnessed is a disturbing reminder of the fact that this evil still constitutes a very real problem. A total of 21 lynchings was recorded during the year, that being as many as for the two previous years combined. We may hope that 1930's record in this respect is a sporadic one and that it does not mean that lynch law has definitely returned to the status it held a decade ago.

The figures, incidentally, are subject to some editing. Two of the instances included were those in which fugitives were shot to death by their pursuers. There is a wide difference, so far as respect for the law is concerned, between that sort of thing and the deliberate taking of a suspect from a jail.

Six of the 21 lynchings were in Georgia, four in Mississippi, three in Texas, two each in South Carolina and Indiana, one each in Alabama, Florida, North Carolina and Oklahoma.

By far the ugliest instance of mob law in 1930 was that at Sherman, when an accused negro was killed and the courthouse burned. That was one of the most disgraceful manifestations of the mob spirit in the entire history of the lynching evil.

An encouraging feature of the record, as compiled by Tuskegee institute, is the large number of cases in which officers bowed their necks, stiffened their spines and employed their wits to protect prisoners from lynching. There were 40 such instances, with a total of 60 prisoners protected. Every officer who thus lives up to his oath of office makes it just a little less likely that the next lynching attempt will succeed.

The Mob, Ignorance and the Law.

With reference to a renewal of mob violence in America in the last year one student of the situation recently observed that "when the illiterate whites below the Mason and Dixon line become desperate, it is time for the blacks to beware." The inference is that depression and unemployment, which have been especially marked in the South, had created racial friction of a severe character.

There is an element of truth in the assumption that disturbed industrial conditions, idleness and competition for jobs contributed to the showing of twenty-one lynchings in the last year as compared with ten in 1929 and eleven in 1928. To this unusual record, for a recent period, must be added outbreaks of violence—a race riot in Alabama, scores of threatened lynchings and heightened racial antagonism in numerous centers—which give the year just ended a most unsavory aspect.

It has been shown that in other depression years of the past there were similar lawless disturbances. It is not wholly correct to attribute these to a single section, although a majority of the outbreaks are in one section and are racial in character. The condition relates to a feeling of antagonism on the part of an element of the population that existed in slavery days. That feeling was even more marked when labor competition, as between the two races, became stronger in the decades following the Civil War, at which time the crimes of mob violence were most numerous. Yet it must be observed that in a period of nearly half a century almost a third of the mob victims have been white persons.

No Lynchings in Tennessee.

There was a slight increase in the number of lynchings during the year past, according to the report of President Moton of Tuskegee Institute, but in the list of states in which such tragedies occurred the name of Tennessee is conspicuous by its absence.

This is the goal to which the Volunteer state has aspired for many years. And the fact that it has at last been reached is a tribute indeed to an increasing enlightenment among her citizens.

Another encouraging feature of Doctor Moton's annual survey is the revelation that in forty instances during 1930 officers of the law were able to prevent lynchings. Five of these frustrated efforts occurred in Northern and Western states and thirty-five were due to the vigilance of Southern sheriffs or law enforcement officials.

The means of prevention was usually that of removing the prisoner to some less hostile atmosphere, or augmenting the guard for his protection.

It would have been equally as interesting and effective if the Tuskegee research department had also provided information as to the results of legal action taken against those threatened with lynchings. In the more extreme cases which are often used as a justification for mob violence—and happily these were in a great minority in the past year—it is safe to say that investigation will show that the law has not failed to function quickly and effectively to exact the proper penalties.

Tennessee may well be proud of her 1930 lynching record and should resolve to keep it unblemished.

21 LYNCHINGS FOR PAST YEAR

Survey Indicates That One White and 20 Negroes Died.

Twenty-one persons were lynched in the United States in 1930, according to a report of the department of records and research of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute of Alabama, founded by Booker T. Washington for the training of colored young men and women. This number exceeds the count for the years, 1927, 1928, and 1929, and is nine less than the number of 30 during the year 1926.

Fourteen of the persons lynched were in the hands of the law. Three were killed in jails, two of these were shot to death and one was burned to death when a mob burned the jail; five of the 11 other persons in the hands of the law were taken from the jails and six from officers of the law outside the jails. Of the seven victims who did not fall into the hands of the law, one was burned to death, and one was put to death and his body burned.

There were 40 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings. Five of these were in northern and western states and 35 in southern states. In 33 of the cases the prisoners were removed or the guards augmented or other precautions taken. In the seven other instances, armed force was used to repel the would-be lynchers. A total of 60 persons, six white men, 52 negro men and two negro women were thus saved from death at the hands of mobs.

Of the 21 persons lynched, one was white and 20 were negroes. The offences were: Rape, eight; murder, three; attempted rape, two; killing officers of the law, two; robbery, three; being a witness, one; bombing houses, one; charge not reported, one.

The states in which lynchings occurred and the number in each state are as follows: Alabama, one; Florida, one; Georgia, six; South Carolina, one; Texas, three.

Fugitive Is Found Near Scene Of Rioting

Montgomery, Ala.

LIVINGSTON, ALA., Aug. 22.—(AP)—Tom Robertson, negro, tonight was in Kilby Prison to answer charges of murder, while two of his sons, Ollis and John, still were sought for the slaying of Grover Boyd, white storekeeper, at Emelle, July 4.

It was the slaying of Boyd and the subsequent search for Tom and his sons that resulted in the death of Charlie Marrs, white posseman, the slaying of Tom's brother, John Newton, the killing of two other negroes and the lynching of Esau Robertson, another son of Tom.

Tom was captured today in the woods near the Alabama-Mississippi line, not far from the scene of the slayings, by W. T. Treadway, of Boyd, Ala., and W. L. Grantham, of Porterville, Miss., who brought him here and surrendered him to county authorities. Sheriff Scales carried him to Selma, where he was handed over to Walter K. McAdory, chief of the law enforcement department, who placed the negro in Kilby tonight.

Return of the negro here created little excitement, and officers said there was no indication of violence. The negro probably will be brought to trial at the October term of court.

Indictments charging Tom and his sons, Ollis and John, with murder were returned Wednesday by a special Sumter County Grand Jury. The Grand Jury spent two and one-half days questioning witnesses in regard to the Emelle disorders and on the conduct of the county officers, but, while terming the disorders "deplorable," said not sufficient evidence could be obtained to return indictments against other participants.

Ollis, according to county officials, was the one who shot Grover Boyd in the back as he went to the aid of his nephew, Clarence Boyd, whom Tom and three of his sons are charged with attacking.

Esau was caught by bystanders, but Tom, Ollis and John escaped. It was while possemen ranged the neighborhood seeking them that four of the deaths occurred. Esau was lynched, and posses formed to search for Tom and the other two sons who fled.

John Newton Robertson, Tom's brother, was slain while resisting efforts of a posse to search his home for the fugitives. Charlie Marrs was wounded fatally during the firing at John Newton Robertson's home. Believing the negroes sought were hiding in the house, members of the searching party burned it.

Feeling waned, but a grim search continued through Saturday night at Narkeeta, Miss., a flag station, an unidentified negro was found in the station house. His reply to an order to holdup his hands, was to fire, wounding a posseman who in turn killed him.

A little later, a negro woman, the wife of James Eyer, was killed by bullets fired at her husband's automobile, when he failed to obey a command to halt.

The trouble had its inception in a demand by Clarence Boyd for payment for an automobile battery sold to one of the Robertsons. When payment was not forthcoming, young Boyd seized the battery and a short time later the Robertsons came to Boyd's store, where the trouble began with an attack on the young white man.

Sheriff W. T. Scales of Sumter County and Walter K. McAdory, chief of the State Law Enforcement Department, arrived about 10 p.m. at Kilby Prison with the negro Tom Robertson

Emelle Riots Will Be Probed Today

Advertiser

LIVINGSTON, ALA., Aug. 17.—(AP)—A special Grand Jury will convene here tomorrow to investigate the Fourth of July disorders at Emelle, which resulted in the deaths of two white men and four negroes. The probe was ordered by Gov. Graves and the Grand Jury will be charged by Judge B. F. Elmore.

Judge Elmore said tonight that the Grand Jury also will be asked to probe charges of prohibition laxity against the Sumter County sheriff, solicitor and court clerk.

8-18-30

The disorders at Emelle, which started in an argument between a white man and a negro over an automobile battery, continued for three days. Four of the dead lost their lives on the Fourth of July while two negroes, one a woman, were killed the following Sunday by possemen seeking a negro involved in the disorders.

Montgomery, Ala.

Grover Boyd, white, who engaged in the original argument, was the first to be killed. Charlie Marrs, white and John Robertson, negro, were killed when a mob stormed the Robertson negro's home in search of the negro believed to have been Boyd's slayer. Later Esau Robertson, son of John Robertson, was found lynched.

SEVEN WHO ESCAPED ALABAMA MOB RELEASED FROM PRISON

Reporter

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 4.—(ANP)—Seven members of the Robertson family who escaped death at the hands of a mob of Emelle, Alabama, whites July 4, and who have been held at the Kilby Prison for safekeeping were released Thursday morning.

9-6-30

The Robertson family was attacked and chased by a mob of whites after one of the members of the family had killed Grover Boyd, a white man, in a fight. The killing aroused the whole family and resulted in the lynching of five Negroes, three of whom had no connection whatever with the killing, but were the victims of the wrath of the whites when they failed to capture the Robertsons.

Montgomery, Ala.

Robertson and his family made their escape across the Mississippi state line and later turned up at the Kilby Prison for protection. After three of the members of the family were indicted in connection with the killing of the white man all of them were ordered released but were afraid to leave the prison, fearing that they would be lynched. Thinking that the feeling against them had subsided Thursday morning they accepted their freedom.

Two Negroes Slay Pine Bluff Farmer On Highway

PINE BLUFF, Ark., Nov. 9.—Feeling is running high tonight in Southern Jefferson and Northern Cleveland counties over the killing shortly before noon of George Crawford, popular farmer living 16 miles southeast of here on the Pine Bluff-Rison road.

11-10-30

Officers in both counties tonight are engaged in an extensive search for A. A. Thomas and U. L. Thomas, negroes and brothers, who have been convicted several times in courts in this section for violation of liquor laws.

First reports said that Mr. Crawford, who was working for the highway department on a contract job on the Rison road, was shot when he waved down two negroes in a light sedan who were speeding up the highway toward Pine Bluff.

Officers were first informed that instead of stopping the negroes opened fire with pistols, one bullet striking Crawford below the heart.

Belief was expressed at that time that the negroes had a load of whisky in the car and were afraid of being searched. Reports reaching officers a short time later that the two Thomas negroes were seen a short distance north of where the shooting occurred led officers to start their search for them.

Several hours later officers were informed that the shooting was at a filling station during a robbery. This report was being investigated tonight. The Thomas negroes are regarded by officers as desperate characters.

AUGUSTA, Ark., Nov. 9.—Will Freeman, negro chauffeur of R. R. Givens, is still at large in spite of the efforts of authorities and posses who have been searching fields, thickets and houses for him since the fatal shooting last Saturday.

Freeman, according to the account of witnesses, had been drinking when he reported for work at Union gin, about six miles east of this place, last Saturday morning. He was ordered away by Mr. Givens when he and other employes became involved in an argument Saturday morning. Givens remonstrated with the negro and in the argument that followed, Freeman was hit with a small stick. He drew a pistol and shot Givens and fled. The bullet entered Givens' body below the heart. Posses were formed immediately and took up the trail of the murderer, but all search has so far been of no avail.

Mr. Givens was a prominent citizen of the county, being a member of the county Democratic central committee. He was 55 and is survived by his wife and five sons and three daughters.

Gov. Trumbull, Conn., Refused Demand for Requisition

New York
N.Y.

Hartford, Conn.—Gov. John H. Trumbull refused to allow Johnny Williams, 28, a Negro, to be extradited from Connecticut by the authorities of Alabama last Tuesday.

A sheriff from Henry County, Ala., who had come for Williams, started back without his man. Williams' extradition had been applied with, in connection with the murder of a white girl, (Annie White) in 1928.

Gov. Trumbull informed the officers on Tuesday that he could not honor the requisition because an Alabama Grand Jury failed to indict Williams within six months after the crime.

Williams had been sought by the Alabama officials a long time after he left the State. He has been working in a barrell factory for more than a year. Some people who knew of his whereabouts gave the tip upon which the authorities acted. Influential Negroes put up a stiff fight to save Williams from being returned South, where, they believed, he would not be granted a fair trial and would probably be lynched.

Not Safe In Hartford

Although they believed that Gov. Trumbull acted fairly and with justice, Negroes here in Hartford express the belief that Williams is not entirely safe here because of the well-known Klan activities in this locality.

A white man, named Miller, had been arrested, tried and convicted in Alabama for the killing of the girl. Williams, with twelve others, were arrested as witnesses, at the time, but Williams was released after eight days. He stayed in Henry County eight months after that, and only came North when a white man, a fellow worker in a barrel factory in Henry County, who had already come to Hartford and secured work, sent him money for transportation to come to Hartford and work in the barrel factory here.

Williams came to Hartford in early spring of 1929, and has been here ever since, a year and four months. His white friend was a staunch witness in his behalf in the extradition proceedings, testifying as to his innocence of the alleged crime.

He was defended by Attorney Benedict M. Holden, and Robert L. Halloran, his assistant.

Salesman Is Found Hanged by Road

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 23. (AP)—The body of Willis A. McMurry, 28, salesman, was found hanging by a rope from a small tree beside the highway ten miles south of here late today. McMurry came here from Hutchinson, Kan., about five years ago. The authorities were inclined to believe the man took his own life.

The body was discovered by two children playing beside the Gainesville-Jacksonville road. They reported the matter to W. C. Fowler, who lived nearby, and he cut it down and attempted to revive the man.

FOUR UNMASKED MEN FLOG FLORIDA FARMER

PLANT CITY, Fla., April 2[illegible].—(AP) Four unmasked men, posing as officers, took Otis Keen, strawberry grower, from his home on the outskirts of the city here early this morning and severely flogged him with a leather strap.

Keen told officers today he was awakened about 1 o'clock this morning by an unidentified man who read what was purported to be a warrant for him and ordered him to go to Tampa.

Constitution

He started out with the man, Keen said, and got into an automobile with three other men outside his house. He was driven a short distance, he related, and then blind-folded with a towel and told to leave the car.

4/28/30

The men questioned him about a man they said was suspected in the bombing of the J. L. Waller home here last Thursday in which Mrs. Waller was seriously injured and the planting of dynamite about the premises of the H. B. Willaford home. Keen said he knew nothing of the man nor his whereabouts. His answers were greeted with blows, he said.

Atlanta

Finally, after insistent questioning, Keen continued, he was taken back to the car, driven home and put out. He said he could not identify any of the men.

Although Keen required the attention of a physician, he was reported to be resting comfortably at his home tonight and was not believed to have been seriously injured.

Deputy Sheriff Abbott and Police Chief McDougald are investigating the case. No arrests had been made tonight.

Florida Man, Married a Year, Released From Jail Without Trial As Mob Arrives On Scene.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Dec. 18.—(ANP)—Timothy Rouse, employed as orderly by the Municipal Hospital located on Davis Island, was accused of approaching one of the white nurses and asking her to kiss him while riding on the elevator, December 2. He was arrested the following morning, put in jail. Without a trial or hearing he was released about midnight. His release seemed to have been timed with the assembling of a mob, for before he had gotten a block from the jail he was taken by a mob and carried to some part of the city, anaesthetized and an operation performed, evidently by a physician, and left by the roadside. An ambulance was called and advised to pick up a patient at this point. He was taken to a Negro hospital for treatment.

No investigation has been made; no attempt to discover the responsible parties or to verify the alleged foundation for the tragedy. Why the jailer released him without trial or why the release came at such an opportune time is a question.

Rouse married about a year ago, but has no children, is 24 years of age, and his wife 22. He, therefore, came to his misfortune "at the hands of parties unknown. Thus another chapter of brutality and mob violence ends.

EXTRADITING NEGROES

After insisting on the last possible step that could be required of the authorities of Alabama, Governor Trumbull, we feel sure with reluctance, has turned over to the authorities of that state the Negro John Williams, now indicted for the murder of a young white girl at Abbeyville. The case has become well known, owing to the failure of the Alabama authorities to obtain extradition of the Hartford Negro at the first attempt, to the fact that two Alabama grand juries had previously refused to indict Williams and to the circumstance that the governor of Alabama has assured Governor Trumbull that the Negro will not only receive a fair trial but will be protected, if necessary, by the National Guard of the state.

How significant is this latter promise is to be gathered from the simultaneous news that the Alabama militia, on the very day on which Governor Trumbull signed the Williams extradition papers, had a fight with a mob determined to lynch a Negro accused of murder. In this latter case the accused man so far appears to have received adequate protection.

One thing is certain. If the Southern states want to maintain the extradition system as anything more useful than a polite fiction they will have to rid themselves of the reputation of lynching. The movement of colored people between the South and the North has reached large proportions and it is highly probable that in the future there will be many more cases of Negro criminals or suspects making their way to Northern states than in the past. Obtaining extradition of such suspects will not be difficult if Northern governors are assured that the prisoners will be granted trials in court and the verdicts of the courts be abided by, for Southern juries are as liable as any other juries to be fair to a Negro. But a Southern mob is another affair and Northern authorities will not be likely to turn Negroes over to states where they are liable to fall into the hands of Judge Lynch.

NEWMAN, GA., April 20.—(AP)—A posse of 500 persons tonight was seeking John Upshaw, 55-year-old negro, as a result of the shotgun slaying here yesterday of Cotton Thornton, a white man, and the serious injury of another white man.

Officers said Thornton was shot as he tried to enter Upshaw's home to sieze the son of the negro for an alleged attempted holdup of J. M. Watkins, white. Thornton's companion, Amos Worthman, was shot in the back and arm and is reported to be in a critical condition.

Montgomery Ala

Watkins said two negroes, one of whom he charged was young Upshaw, held him up and slashed him severely with a knife when he said he had no money. Young Upshaw also was wounded. He was arrested after the shooting and his father's flight.

Officers said Thornton was shot to death as he tried to enter Upshaw's home Saturday to seize the son of the negro for an alleged attempted holdup of J. M. Watkins, white. Thornton's companion, Amos Worthman, was shot in the back and arm.

Watkins said two negroes, one of whom was young Upshaw, held him up and slashed him with a knife when he said he had no money. Watkins said he grappled with the negroes and cuts which later were found on young Upshaw strengthened his identification.

Young Upshaw was arrested after the shooting and his father's flight. A crowd gathered at the jail but dispersed at the request of a brother of the slain man.

55-Year-Old Negro Sought for Slaying White Man With Shotgun.

4-21-30

NEWNAN, Ga., April 20.—John Upshaw, 55-year-old negro, was being sought by county officers and a posse of 500 persons today, following the shot-gun slaying late Saturday night of Cotton Thornton, white, and the serious injury of another white man.

Thornton, it is alleged, was shot to death as he tried to gain entrance to Upshaw's home to arrest Roy Upshaw, son of the negro, who was wanted by county officers. Amos Worthman was shot in the back and arm as he fled from the house, and is reported in a critical condition.

Thornton was shot through the chest and died instantly.

According to officers, the trouble grew out of an attempted holdup by young Upshaw and another negro about 8 o'clock Saturday night. The pair, it is charged, accosted J. M. Watkins, white, of Hogansville, and demanded that he hand over his money. Watkins said when he told them he didn't have any money with him, an altercation followed. Watkins said he drew his knife after the negro had cut him severely about the head and face. The negro also suffered several bad cuts that required medical attention.

Atlanta Ga

Following the shooting officers arrested young Upshaw at the home of his father. The negro refused to name his companion.

Identity of Watkins' assailant was learned when Thornton and Worthman followed Dr. Nathaniel Lamar, negro doctor, to the Upshaw home. He had been called to treat the negro's wounds.

It was first believed that Dr. Lamar was implicated in the shooting, but officers said that there would be no charge placed against him. He is being held in jail, however, for safekeeping.

Shortly after young Upshaw was placed in jail a large mob gathered at the door, but dispersed quietly at the request of Drew Thornton, of Chillicothe, Ala., brother of the slain man.

Railroad and Pullman in Effort to Dodge Liability, Theory

NEW YORK—Frank P. Walsh of this city, nationally famous labor lawyer, has consented to take the case of the lynching of J. H. Wilkins, of Kansas City, Pullman porter, who was mysteriously slain early on the morning of April 5, near Locust Grove, Ga.

5-2-30

The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters conferred with Mr. Walsh on the case and A. Phillip Randolph, general organizer, announced that Mr. Walsh had consented to take the case.

Kansas City Mo.

To Raise Defense Fund

Local organizations of the brotherhood all over the country are expected to begin the raising of a defense fund at once and roll up enough to carry the case to a successful conclusion.

While Mr. Walsh would not make a statement of his plans until he could study the case, it is believed that he will proceed against the Pullman company and the Southern Railway System.

Killed on Duty

Wilkins's body was found in a patch of woods near Locust Grove and no one has ever been able to explain how he got off the fast Florida Special which was not supposed to stop at the little Georgia town.

The rumor has persisted that Wilkins came to his death at least with the knowledge of the train crew, if not at their hands. The Pullman company and the railway officials have been accused of "covering up" the facts. James Keeley, vice-president of the Pullman company, admitted he had some facts on the case but refused to discuss them.

TO START FUND RAISING IN KANSAS CITY

Spencer Watson, 2412 Campbell street, identified with the brotherhood in Kansas City, stated that plans for raising money for the Wilkins defense fund were being formulated here and would be announced soon.

Company Holding Insurance

It was revealed here yesterday by members of Wilkins's family that his group insurance policy, which was carried in the Prudential Life Insurance company, has not yet been paid.

The Prudential office here in the Federal Reserve Bank building told a reporter for The Call that all that was necessary for payment was the death of the insured. This office also told Wilkins's realtives the same thing. But the insurance is handled in Chicago and the family is of the opinion that the Pullman company has requested the insurance company to hold off payment for a little while until some "agreement" can be reached with the beneficiaries.

Don't Want Liability

Relatives and friends of Wilkins here believe the company is not willing to have the amount of the insurance paid as an "accident," because in that case, since Wilkins was in active service on one of its cars, it would be liable for damages. The railway company also is said to favor payment of the insurance as a "natural death" to avoid claims for damages.

One other life insurance company with headquarters in Chicago is also holding up the payment of Wilkins insurance, stating that the "nature of the case" was responsible.

WAS THE PORTER LYNCHED

[illegible]

It was boldly announced from a certain source that Mr. Wilkins, the Pullman car porter who was found dead under the limb of a tree near Locust Grove, Ga., was in reality lynched. It is also alleged that the crew on the train on which he ran have a guilty knowledge of the affair. The perfunctory investigation by the authorities is not at all satisfying and has led nowhere whatever. The officials of the railroad and county authorities owe it to themselves and the cause of justice to sift this matter more thoroughly. The same interest that would have manifested if the porter was a white man, should be displayed in this case. The public will not be satisfied until it is convinced fully about the manner of this tragedy. If Mr. Wilkins did anything to merit the deed, it should be made known, and those who are concerned in it should be brought to justice. It should not be such a problem to solve. Just a little more sense of justice and forgettng friendship of the fellow further up, would immediately solve the crime so far as the unknowing public is concerned and speedily bring the guilty to justice.

NEGRO IS SOUGHT FOR SLAYING DEPUTY

Officers of Brantley and Surrounding Counties Join in Hunt.

Atlanta, Ga

BRUNSWICK, Ga., June 2.—(AP)—Although the trail was 48 hours old, officers of Brantley and surrounding counties Monday continued a hunt for Rufus Swanson, negro, who Saturday night killed Ward Watson Gibson, 26, special deputy.

Two of Swanson's brothers were held for questioning. They were taken to jail at Nahunta for safekeeping.

Swanson shot and killed Gibson when he and his brother, K. K. Gibson, deputy sheriff, attempted to arrest the negro at Waynesville Saturday night. The negro had been threatening a breach of the peace, witnesses said, and K. K. Gibson went to a store to arrest him. He was accompanied by Ward Gibson. Learning the negro might be troublesome, the officer deputized Ward.

Swanson, witnesses said, resisted their efforts to arrest him and when Ward Gibson struck at him with a blackjack he fired three shots into Gibson's body and fled.

K. K. Gibson shot at him several times as he disappeared.

A posse was organized hastily and took up his trail. Bloodhounds were set on the trail yesterday but lost it.

Swanson's two brothers said he spent Friday night with them.

Take Another Porter Off Train in Georgia

Taking Pullman porters off trains in Georgia is getting to be a regular pastime, if reports from Jesup, Ga., are true. According to an eye-witness, a porter on a run from Jacksonville, Fla., to Richmond, Va., was taken from the train at Jesup last week because he is said to have come aboard with the smell of liquor on his breath.

The witness claims that the train conductor told another white train official that the "nigger porter was being sassy," and that when the train arrived at Jesup a crowd of whites had gathered as if by magic. "Where's the nigger?" was asked by members of the mob. And the conductor is said to have turned the porter over to this crowd of whites. The porter, who was not known to the witness, a passenger on the train, was taken from the train and whisked away.

A telephone call to the Pullman company office in Chicago fails to substantiate this report. Officials claim that they have heard nothing of this case and that no such report has reached them. But the Georgia passenger, who is now in Virginia, declares that she witnessed the incident.

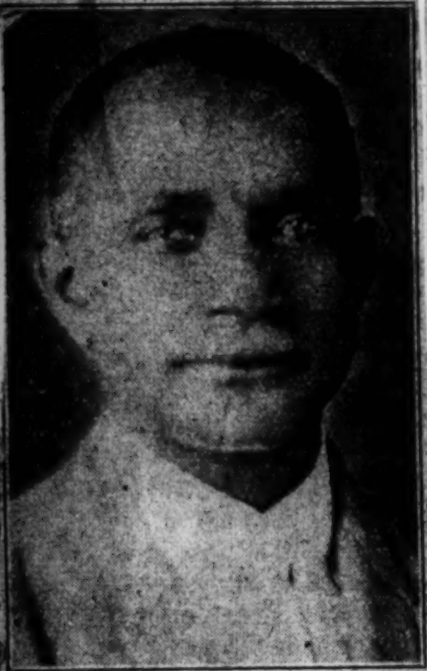
GRANDSON KNOCKED DOWN AND WIFE THREATENED WHEN THEY INTERVENE



S. S. MINCEY

Mt. Vernon, Ga., July 29—S. S. Mincey, 70, Negro Republican leader of Ailey, Ga., died here this afternoon after reporting he had been kidnapped from his home by a band of masked and robed men last night, carried into Toombs county and beaten.

He was found semi-conscious this morning, and revived only enough to give a fragmentary account of the attack. A white man who found him brought him home.

Mincey told officers one of the demands made by the attackers was that he give up his post as county Republican chairman. Before he died he told of being struck over the head with a rifle before being taken forcibly from his home. Physicians said that blow resulted in concussion of the brain and caused his death. He was not able to name his assailants.

Solicitor General M. H. Boyer was with Mincey several hours before he died but was able to obtain only meager information. Officers said considerable feeling had been aroused by the case.

No motive has been established for the attack. Officers said they knew of no activity on Mincey's part, political or otherwise, that might have caused it. They said they had learned there were ten or more persons in the band.

Officers said that they had learned that Mincey's grand son was knocked down and his wife threatened when they attempted to prevent the kidnaping. The beating, in which most of the skin was lashed off the Negro's back, was administered near Grays Landing. He has injuries on his face and head as well as his back.

There was no definite verification of a report here that Mincey recently had agreed to a demand that he resign his position as Republican county chairman.

Several kidnaping and lashing cases have come to the attention of officers here in the last few years, but this was the first in several months.

On accont of eye witness there will be no inquest over the body. These witnesses related the unmerciful flogging given him before he died. The names of a few white men were given as alleged participants. The main cause of his death was from a blow on the head, causing concussion of the brain. He was dragged from bed, his grand son who tried to help him was knocked down, Mrs. Mincey was also prevented from doing anything. His body was badly lacerated and the skin peeled in places.

The leading white people of the county are incensed over the tragedy.

Mr. Mincey was well known in fraternal and political circles. Within the past two months he attended and took an active part in the sessions of the Masonic Grand Lodge, the Eastern Star Grand Chapter, the Knights of Pythias Grand Lodge as well as that of the Grand Court of Calanthe. He was one of the oldest members of the Masonic fraternty and with one exception, the oldest regular attendant at the Grand Lodge. Recognizing his loyalty, he was elected in June to fill the position of Secretary-Treasurer of the Orphan Home department. He had just succeeded in perfecting bond and the office was turned over to him just a week before the fatality. For more than twenty-five years, he was a worker in the Eastern Stars, and served as Associate Grand Patron, being reelected at the recent June sessioin. He served as District Deputy Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias under five Grand Chancellors. He held a similar position in the Courts of Calanthe. For many years he has served as chairman of the Republican party of his county and he was a leader in his congressional district. He had the honor of representing his district in the National Republican Convention a number of times. He was popular with his friends to whom he was loyal. He was well thought of by many of the white citizens of Ailey, for which reason it is surprising that any set of white men of that locality would be guilty of such a cowardly and brutal act.

Mr. Mincey is survived by a loving wife, several sons and daughters, and many grand children and other relatives.

The funeral will take place Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and will undoubtedly be largely attended.

THE MINCEY TRAGEDY

Tribune

7-31-30

Many heinious offenses have been committed against our people in this state, but none more so than the one happening near the border of Montgomery and Toombs counties on Monday night last. There was no cause of a grevious kind whatever for the committing of such a crime. The victim was a law respecting and conservative citizen, one who was really an asset to his community. He was respectful and courteous to everybody. While within the bosom of his family, he was aroused and forcibly taken from his home by an armed and masked mob of alleged white men. Members of his family who attempted to protect him, were assaulted and ruthlessly thrown aside. The defenseless man was taken across the line to another county where the cowardly masked mob vented their spleen by unmercifully flogging him after they had crushed his skull with the butt of a rifle. The inhuman fiends left their victim to suffer and die. Fortunately, hours afterwards, he was discovered by passers by and was taken to his home where every attention was given him, but unavailingly so for he died the following afternoon at 3 o'clock, but not before he was able to incoherently make a statement.

Savannah, Ga

Evidently those who formed the mob are not residents of Ailey, the home of the murdered man, or if so, they must be of an ordinary class, for the leading white men of that place are indignant over the affair and anxious to apprehend the guilty parties. To this end every effort should be bent. While the sheriff of the county is reported to be on the alert to place the guilt, but other steps should be encouraged. Not only should the county offer a liberal reward for the arrest of the mobbers, but it should be increased with one from the Governor. The standing and worth of the victim warrant such rewards. This is also due the other law respecting and industrious citizens of Montgomery county.

Mystery Surrounds Death of Man in Abandoned House Near Fairburn; Boys Discover Corpse.

11-2-30

FAIRBURN, Ga., Nov. 1.—(Special.)—Discovery of the body of an unidentified young white man hanging from a rafter in an abandoned house on the H. B. Godby estate, near Cook's Crossing, in Campbell county, Saturday night, started officers of that county on an investigation to determine whether the case is one of suicide or murder.

Although the circumstances pointed to self-destruction, certain contradictory facts balked a jury empaneled by Coroner T. C. Rivers from arriving at a verdict. The inquest will be continued this morning at the funeral parlors of M. W. Holsenback, in Fairburn, after Dr. W. R. Camp, county physician, examines the body for possible marks of violence and seeks to establish definitely the cause of death.

The body was found about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Floyd Johnson and Clarence Johnson, brothers, who live in that vicinity and who were on a hunting expedition. Notified of the discovery, Sheriff Tom Camp and County Police Chief G. C. Bentley took charge and began investigating the case.

Atlanta Ga

Sheriff Camp Saturday night said he was unable to express a definite opinion as to whether it was a case of suicide or murder, pending further examination of the body. At the undertaking parlors, it was said the condition of the body indicated the man had been dead two or three days.

Clad in winter ankle-length underwear, a blue denim shirt, and a brown herring-bone coat, the body was suspended from a rafter by a door of the house, strips of overalls being used as a rope. The feet rested on the floor, and the knees were bent. Although death apparently was due to strangulation, this was open to doubt because of the size of the noose and the position of the head, which was thrown back to the right as if resting on the noose.

The dead man's hands were clenched tight. He was 135 to 140 pounds in weight, and approximately 25 or 30 years or age. His hair was brown and eyes were blue, and he had one gold tooth in the upper right jaw. There were no marks of tatooing on the body nor any deformities. In the shoes were delivery blank forms of the Dutch Oven Bakeries, dated "10-3-30" and used as extra soles to keep the feet warm.

In the pockets of the coat were boxes of matches, a three-bladed pocket knife, two cakes of soap, a comb, two pencil stubs, etc., and all marks of identification were torn out of the coat, which apparently had been worked over. The shoes were of the high-top Boy Scout type with Panco soles. The right eye was discolored darkly as if from some sort of blow.

The house in which the body was found is a one-story three-room building. Several holes in the floor and paneless windows told a story of abandonment. There were no signs of a recent fire in the chimney. The walls were plastered in places with newspapers.

Discovery of the body came when the Johnson brothers, out hunting, looked through the house out of curiosity and found the body hanging from a rafter, they said.

Resolution Expresses Hope That Floggers Will Be Brought To Trial

Montgomery, Ala

MOUNT VERNON, GA., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Leading white citizens of this section today deplored the flogging and death near here last week of S. S. Mincey, negro Republican leader, and in resolutions expressed a hope that the white men who beat him to death would be brought to trial.

A mass meeting, attended by white men and negroes, was held at the courthouse. Only the white citizens made speeches, but they condemned without reservation the spirit that led a band of men to drag Mincey from his home and flog him.

The meeting was presided over by Col. L. G. Underwood and speakers included J. M. B. McGregor, former State senator; Hugh Peterson, editor of The Moniter, a local newspaper, the Rev. L. S. Barrett, the Rev. L. W. Walker and Solicitor General Boyer.

Mincey, long a leader in Republican affairs in this section, was dragged from his home by a band of men, who slapped his grandchild and struck another member of his family who sought to save him.

He was flogged and eventually injured fatally by a blow from a gun butt.

Officers hold a theory that a political feud led to the negro's death.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR MINCEY'S DEATH

The responsibility for the death of the Honorable S. S. Mincey, of Montgomery country, Georgia, July 29th, 1930, in Toombs county, Georgia, must be laid at the door of the Republican party. Those who have assumed the responsibility for the policy of the party under the present administration can not escape the odium of this foul murder. The policy which made this crime possible can be traced indirectly to the door of the G. O. P. by every trick of the game.

It was early announced in this state by the chosen leaders of the present administration that the party leaders at Washington wanted a 100 per cent white party organization in the state; that the Negro must take a back seat; that white men were coached to enter the regular county mass meetings or primaries, and oust the Negroes at any cost; to capture the delegates to the state convention and to reorganize the county units with white men by fair or foul means.

A vigorous campaign was put on in the Eleventh and Twelfth districts to carry out these revolutiionary and nefarious purposes. A banished klansman was put in charge of the work and was assisted by federal officeholders directed by a special agent of the postoffice department from Washington, who attended these meetings in person and reported the results direct to the Postmaster General at Washington.

Postmasters and other federal officeholders were unbridled to canvas and prowl about the state to round up white delegates for the county and state conventions. Negroes were browbeaten, bulldozed, and in many cases locked out of the courthouses by bootleggers, whiskey runners, ex-convicts and criminals under indictment who partly constituted the following of those who claimed to represent the administration forces. To hell with the Negroes and every white man who did not subscribe to the dictum of the so-called administration leaders.

It was generally understood that the administration policy in the state was to get rid of the Negro and build a 100 per cent lily-white organization in Georgia and the South. Many meetings were held in the Eleventh and Twelfth districts which were addressed by federal officeholders, ex-kluxers, lily-whites, Hoovercrats and Negro-haters, until the minds of the deluded were inflamed to the point of murder, arson and the most intense race hatred.

These meetings were largely attended by hoodlums, racketeers and bootleggers. They were worked up to the point where they thought the administration was behind them, and that they could do anything to a "nigger" and get away with it; yes, even murder—thence, Mincey's cold-blooded assassination.

These outlaws went into the county conventions and got licked to a frazzle; came to the state convention with blood in their eyes to take the state organization if they had to do it at the point of the gun, but the Atlanta police were too much for them. They bolted, set up a rump convention under the leadership of a Federal officer, and placed another federal officer at the head of the rumpers, and returned home to find 95 per cent of the county organizations loyal to the regular state organization and refusing to cooperate with the bolters. Hence, the murder of S. S. Mincey, county chairman of Montgomery county, to get him out of the way.

Thus began the annihilation and destruction of the party in the state by the route of murder. Hence the party as presently constituted and led cannot escape the responsibility for the death of this good and great man, because he had the manhood to stand up for the faith that was in him.

The public has placed the responsibility, and the party leaders cannot escape the odium that follows crime and criminals. The Republican party is responsible, and must suffer the penalty.

The propaganda that inflamed the rabble into a fire of race hatred and led them to mutiny and murder, came from Washington and was coached into the heads of the ignorant by federal office holders and undesirables from other parties in the state. Therefore, it seems that the responsibility for this cold blooded deed can be properly laid at the feet of the leaders of the Republican party without compunction of conscience.

The patronage committee, appointed by the Postmaster General used the patronage to build up this white man's party and must share its part of the ignominy and responsibility. No agency was never more offensive in national politics than this committee of carpetbaggers.

REWARD SHOULD BE OFFERED

Tribune 8-7-30 Savannah

The blood of S. S. Mincey is crying aloud for revenge, not such a vengence as was meted out to him, but legal vengence. Not only the county but also the state should join in the offer of such a reward as would be attractive. It is noted that the home county of the deceased gave a flimsy excuse for not offering such a reward, and thus far the governor has failed to act. Where is their high sense of honor? Where is their ambition to keep an equal poise of law and order? If the county and state governments refuse to act, then all friends of justice should band themselves in the raising of at least one thousand dollars to offer as a reward for the apprehension of the culprits. Can there not be found one thousand men in the state willing to contribute one dollar for such a cause? This is an impelling case. Allowing it to remain unsolved only tends to embolden the perpetrators, thus making unsafe the lives of others who may engender their ill-will. A call for action is sounded and under the sane mandates of the law it should be performed. Mincey's blood is crying loud for the performance of justice.

Thousand Citizens, White and Black, Pass Drastic Resolutions Assailing Robed, Hood Murderers.

Atlanta, Ga

MT. VERNON, Ga., Aug. 4.—In a mass meeting attended by a thousand or more Montgomery county citizens, both white and black, indignation at the ruthless killing of S. S. Mincey, well-known negro citizen, at Ailey Tuesday morning, was fully voiced. L. C. Underwood chairman and W. A. Peterson, secretary.

Dr. J. W. Palmer stated the purpose of the meeting and paid tribute to the honesty of the deceased negro, and his value as a leader of his people.

Spirited talks were made by Colonel A. L. Lanier, ex-Senators J. M. D. McGregory and M. B. Calhoun, former Representative H. B. Folsom, Representative Hugh Peterson, Rev. L. W. Walker, of the Methodist church, and Rev. L. S. Barrett, of the Baptist church, and Solicitor M. H. Boyer.

W. M. Lewis, B. H. Grace and Wimberly Brown, of the Toombs County Bar Association, expressed the sentiment of their county, which has also felt the effects of hooded mobs in recent years. The meeting lasted an hour, and was filled with interest throughout.

Resolutions Adopted by Rising Vote.

"Whereas, in recent years a number of horrible crimes have been committed within the bounds of Montgomery county, or upon citizens of this county forcibly taken to an adjoining county by masked bodies of white men. The perpetrators of such despicable and cowardly acts, under cover of darkness and their identity unknown, have gone without apprehension or punishment, to the indignation of an enraged citizenship, and

"Whereas, in the early morning of July 29 this county again suffered an unpardonable shock to civil right and justice, when S. S. Mincey, a colored citizen, was by a masked band of white men dealt a fatal blow in his home, forcibly taken away and tortured to death in an unmerciful and heinous manner, and this without provocation, and unwarranted by any rule of civilization; the murder of this citizen has forged another link in the chain of violence; it is a tendency toward anarchy and a reign of terror which, if not summarily checked by the enforcement of law, supported by a righteous citizenry, will soon render this county unsafe and unfit for citizenship of character and decency; it is a blot on civilization, a blow at American constitutional rights, and an unsavory record abhorred by the law-abiding element of Montgomery county. Therefore Demand That Officers Act.

"Be it resolved, by the citizens of Montgomery county, Georgia, in mass meeting assembled, in the courthouse of said county, August 4, 1930, that their unqualified condemnation of this and similar acts of violence, contrary to law, human instincts and social order, be expressed in a demand for more direct and definite action by officers of the law charged with the apprehension of criminals and the courts responsible to the administration of justice and the punishment of those so flagrantly defying the law of the land, in the support of which our efforts are hereby openly and freely pledged, that crimes of this nature may be stamped out and a higher and unquestioned standard of citizenship be raised in this section of Georgia.

"Resolved further, that copies of this declaration be transmitted to the state press, with request for publication in behalf of the law-abiding citizenry of Montgomery county, and a copy furnished the clerk of the superior court of said county, with request for entry on official records, in behalf of public honor and integrity. Unanimously adopted by a rising vote in mass meeting assembled, at the courthouse in Mt. Vernon, August 4, 1930.

9-13-30

EASTMAN, GA., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Sheriff G. C. Rogers announced here tonight that an attempt had been made by an unidentified band of men to lynch a negro, M. C. Wyle, held as a suspect in an attack on the wife of a farmer.

The negro, who was shot through the shoulder, hip, and leg with a pistol, has only a slight chance of recovery, the officer said.

Wylie was locked in jail at at Rhyne, Ga., following his arrest Thursday and a statement from the victim of the attack that she "thought he resembled the negro who had attacked her."

A door of the small town jail, the officer said, was broken down early this morning and the prisoner dragged out. The negro shook loose his captor's hold and ran, the officers continued, and was shot while running. He crawled under a cotton gin house, where Sheriff Rogers said he found him.

Warrant Charges Dodge Countian Shot Negro Fleeing From Mob.

Atlanta, Ga.

EASTMAN, Ga., Sept. 1[illegible]—(AP)—George Jump, 45, farmer, residing in the Milan community of Dodge county, was placed under arrest late Saturday afternoon on a warrant charging assault with intent to murder. He is alleged to have been in the crowd that broke into the city jail at Rhine, Ga., early Friday morning seized and shot M. C. Whiley, negro.

The negro, with three wounds in his body, developed pneumonia Saturday and probably will die before morning, according to Sheriff G. C. Rogers, in which event he said he would prefer a more serious charge against Jump.

Whiley was arrested at Allentown, Ga., Thursday night as a suspect in connection with an assault upon a young farmer's wife in the Milan community, the woman being closely related to Jump, according to reports.

The negro was placed in the city jail at Rhine instead of being brought to the Dodge county jail here. Several hours later, at 2 o'clock, Friday morning, the jail was attacked and the prisoner was obtained. Outside the negro broke into a run. Shooting began and the negro was hit three times.

The negro continued to run, hiding under a cotton gin house. The crowd on the street broke up and there were only three or four persons in sight when Sheriff Rogers reached here an hour later. He trailed the negro by blood and rescued him from his hiding place.

The negro was brought to this city where he was given medical and surgical attention. He is not in jail, however, and the sheriff would not disclose his whereabouts.

Sheriff Rogers stated that he had positive information from good citizens of Montrose and Allentown that the negro who was shot was not in the vicinity of Milan at the time of the attack on the farmer's wife. He said the negro had lived in that community, but left two weeks ago. He was employed at Allentown.

EASTMAN, Ga., Sept. 12.—(AP)—

The little town jail of Rhyne, Ga., in Dodge county, was broken into at 2 o'clock Friday morning and a negro prisoner taken out and shot, it was announced Friday night by Sheriff G. C. Rogers. The negro, M. C. Whiley, will probably die, the sheriff stated, from .38-caliber pistol wounds in the shoulder, hip and leg.

The negro was arrested at Allentown, Ga., Thursday, the sheriff stated, by Levi Cook, a court bailiff, of Rhyne, who was said to have been accompanied by George Jump, white farmer residing near Milan, Ga.

Instead of taking the prisoner to the Dodge county jail here, he was locked up at Rhyne as a suspect in the assault upon a young farmer's wife in the Milan district a week ago. Jump is said to be a relative of the victim of the assault.

"We have established the fact that the negro had gone from the Milan community for two weeks," said Sheriff Rogers. "He was working at Allentown. Good people have told us that he was not in the vicinity of Milan at the time of the assault."

The sheriff said that after the jail doors had been forced open and the negro was dragged out, Whiley began to run. The shooting followed. In the darkness the negro got away from the would-be lynchers and hid under a cotton gin house. He was there when the sheriff arrived, after being informed of the trouble.

The sheriff brought the negro to this city, where he is receiving medical attention. The sheriff said the negro had little chance to live.

Before being brought here, the sheriff stated, the victim of the assault was permitted to see him. She told the sheriff that she "thought he resembled the negro who attacked her." She was not positive in the identification, the sheriff stated.

Sheriff Rogers stated that he would obtain a warrant for the arrest of Jump in connection with the shooting Saturday morning, and would bring him to the Dodge county jail. Jump is related to the victim, the sheriff stated.

SOUTH GEORGIA POSSES ON TWO MAN-HUNTS

MACON, Ga., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Man hunts were still in progress Sunday night in two south Georgia communities for negroes who were accused of crimes.

Posses from Dodge and Telfair counties were on the trail of a negro who Saturday morning attacked the 18-year-old wife of a young farmer residing near Milan in Dodge county.

The young woman arose just before dawn, her husband being ill in bed, and as she went to the woodyard for kindling to start the fire, she was attacked by a negro, choked, assaulted and left nearly unconscious. She is still under the care of physicians, it is stated.

Several negroes have been rounded up in connection with this case, according to reports, but the victim has declared in each case that the ones taken into custody did not attack her. She insists that she can identify the negro.

At Baxley county officers were hunting Roscoe Nelson, a negro preacher, who on Saturday night stabbed Arney Gerald, 24, farmer residing on the plantation of Mrs. John Graham.

The white man brushed against the negro on the streets of Baxley. The negro resented this, it is said, and after words were exchanged the preacher is said to have drawn a knife and thrust it into Mr. Gerald's body. The blade struck his heart and lungs.

Mr. Gerald was taken to a hospital in Waycross Saturday night and reports from there tonight were to the affect that he had a chance to recover. An emergency operation was performed on him at Baxley immediately after the stabbing, in an effort to safe his life.

Baxley was considerably excited during Saturday night and a posse of 300 men began a hunt for the negro preacher. The people calmed down today, however, when it was found that Mr. Gerald has a chance to recover, and officers alone were continuing the hunt.

MACON, Ga., May 12.—(AP)—A large territory on the Zebulon road was being watched tonight by a posse seeking Robert Davis, 35-year-old negro, who killed W. A. Harden, well driller last Saturday. 5-13-30

The trail has grown cold with time and was wet, but the officers still had hopes of capturing the negro, and a pack of bloodhounds was held in readiness should the fugitive be sighted.

Atlanta Ga.

A coroner's jury today charged Davis with first degree murder after hearing two witnesses, Morgan Dupree and E. L. Waits, who saw the slaying.

Both testified that Davis killed the white man after the two argued over some remarks the negro boasted of making to a white man "when I chased him off my farm."

Dupree said Harden struck Davis when the negro told him "I am boss here."

A bystander handed Harden a hammer at his request, Dupree testified, but Davis snatched it away and fled into the house. When he returned he had his gun. Harden took refuge in a pump house, the witnesses said, but exposed his head, and the negro shot him.

Harden called for help, according to Waits, who went to help him, only to be ordered away by the negro. Waits said the negro walked to the wounded man as he lay on the ground and emptied another load from the

4-22-30

SYLVANIA, Ga., April 21.—(AP)—Posses from Screven, Burke and Jenkins counties numbering several thousand men were scouring this section Monday night with the aid of track dogs for an unidentified negro who entered the home of a farmer four miles from here, struck the man's wife over the head with an ax, inflicting probable fatal injuries, and then attacked an 18-year-old daughter of the woman.

Atlanta Ga.

The attack occurred late this afternoon and the posses were formed about an hour after it took place. The woman was taken to a hospital in Millen, where doctors said she had little chance of recovery, and the girl is at the home of relatives. Her condition is regarded as serious.

The woman was unaware of the negro's presence and she made no outcry when struck. Her skull was crushed at the top of the forehead. In a semi-conscious state, she made her way to her room, where a loaded shotgun was kept. She secured the weapon and returned to the room where the negro and girl were struggling. When the negro saw the woman with the gun he darted out of the house and made his way to the Ogeechee creek, about three-quarters of a mile away.

The father of the girl was working in a field a considerable distance from the house and he did not learn of what had taken place until some time later. The girl succeeded in getting her mother in an automobile and took her to a store owned by an uncle about a mile away, where she told what had occurred and the alarm was spread.

The girl said that she had never seen the negro before, but that he was short and stockily built and apparently between 25 and 30 years old. She said he wore blue overalls, a blue serge coat and had on a cap. She said she also noticed that he wore white socks.

The negro carried the ax from the house but dropped it by the gate as he was leaving the yard.

Several negroes were taken into custody by officers and taken before the girl for identification, but she said that none of those arrested was responsible for the deed and she also declared that she would have no difficulty in identifying the guilty one.

The posses were separated into numerous smaller groups and all the highways are being carefully guarded.

Negro, Sought by Sylvania Posse, Reported Seen Near Macon.

MACON, Ga., April 24.—(AP)—Search for an unidentified negro who three days ago attacked an aged white woman near Sylvania with an axe and was frightened away after choking her daughter was under way in a swamp near here tonight.

A negro answering description of the wanted man was seen by officers to flee into the swamp after leaving a freight train as it rolled into the Macon yards. 4-25-30

First reports that a suspect to the crime was near Macon reached officers from a watchman at a railroad tower who said he saw a negro leap off a freight train as it entered the yards last night and board it again as it picked up speed. The watchman said the negro answered printed descriptions of the assailant.

Atlanta Ga.

He notified police but before they arrived the negro left the train again and headed for the swamp, into which he vanished just as a posse arrived.

Despite serious wounds inflicted by the negro with an axe, the aged Sylvania woman saved her daughter by frightening him away with a shotgun as he grappled with the girl.

Mrs. Bragg who was struck in the head with the ax, was reported in a critical condition today in a Millen hospital. The girl fought off the negro when he entered her room after hitting her mother, and he fled as Mrs. Bragg seized a shotgun before collapsing from her wounds.

The negro suspect gave his name as William Bryant and his age as 27. He was arrested after F. T. Kemp, a Sylvania merchant, had seen him walking along the railroad tracks near Monteith. Previously, Miss Bragg had failed to identify several other negroes taken into custody as a large posse, with the aid of bloodhounds covered a wide area about Sylvania in [illegible] search.

DEEP MYSTERY IN PORTER KILLING

There Is Talk of Arresting Five Men, but It Is Only A Rumor

LOCUST GROVE, Ga.—The killing of J. H. Wilkins, of Kansas City, Pullman porter on the Kansas City-Florida Special, early on Saturday April 5, remains still a deep mystery.

Wilkins was found dead in a patch of woods about a mile north of here, the body still warm and dressed in the regulation Pullman uniform. According to Southern railway officials, the train on which Wilkins worked did not stop at Locust Grove.

There has been a rumor hereabouts that five men were to be arrested in connection with the slaying, but no one can say who the five are.

4/23/30

A coroner's jury has returned a verdict of death by causes unknown. Pullman company officials and local police are silent on the killing, although they state that investigations ar: still being made. It begins to look as though the Wilkins' slaying will be another one of the white-washed lynchings of the south.

OFFICERS BAFFLED IN PORTER'S DEATH

County, Railroad Police Continue Probe With Few Clues Uncovered.

LOCUST GROVE, Ga., April 6.—(AP)—With few additional clues uncovered, county and railroad police today continued their investigation into the mysterious death of J. H. Wilkins, negro pullman porter of the Southern Railway's Kansas City Special, whose body was found near here yesterday morning, his neck tied to a tree and his knees touching the ground.

Constitution

Two small boys on their way to town found the body in a grove of trees a short distance from the railroad tracks. The negro's skull was fractured in two places and a jagged cut was found under his right arm. The porter's white coat had been used to tie his neck to the small sapling.

Officers expressed the belief that the killing was prearranged and that someone was waiting beside the tracks to take the negro—or his body—to the woods. They thought that the negro may have been hit over the head and thrown from the train or struck after he was taken from the train. 4-10-30

Open Window in Coach.

A car inspector testified at an inquest here yesterday afternoon that an open window with the screen off was found in the coach Wilkins worked when the train reached Atlanta. Officers reported finding the spot where the body struck the track ballast. The coroner's jury adjourned until Tuesday without advancing any theories as to the cause of the death or any solution of the killing.

Footprints leading from the tracks to the body were obscured by rain which started shortly after the boys found the body.

Atlanta Ga.

Wilkins was alive when the train left Macon at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. One report said he was not missed until just before the train reached Atlanta. Another report, which was not confirmed, said he had been seen as the train stopped at Sandy, 17 miles south of here. Wilkins' watch stopped at 4:18, about the time the train was due here.

Officials of the pullman company and the Southern Railway Company in Atlanta could offer no information, although the Kansas City Special is a non-stop train between Macon and Atlanta. Railroad officials said that the train yesterday morning was forced by freight trains to stop at Juliette and Sandy. They said the train went through Locust Grove without stopping.

HUNDREDS ATTEND MINCEY FUNERAL

MT. VERNON, Ga., Aug. [illegible].—(AP)—Hundreds of negroes from all parts of Georgia assembled at Ailey, Ga., in this county, Sunday, to attend the funeral of S. S. Mincey, 70-year-old member of their race who was slain by a hooded gang last Tuesday after being carried from Montgomery county to Toombs county.

The service began at 10 o'clock this morning and lasted for several hours.

From daylight this morning automobiles filled with negroes were seen passing along all roads leading to Ailey. All of the surrounding counties had big delegations in attendance, and the negro Masonic lodges, the negro Knights of Pythias and various other orders to which he belonged sent delegations.

There was no disorder. After the services were over the negroes left for their homes as quietly as they had come.

Mincey was the republican leader of this county and had attended a number of national conventions of that party. He had recently decided to devote all his time to lodge work.

WELL DONE—MONTGOMERY!

Constitution

Reports of the gathering of more than a thousand of the best citizens of Montgomery county in a great mass meeting to protest the recent beating to death in that county of an aged and respected negro is conclusive evidence of the attitude of the people of that section towards the activities of hooded barbarians.

Prominent citizens from every walk of life participated in the Mt. Vernon meeting, raising their voices in stern protest against allowing the perpetrators of the outrage to go unpunished. It was perhaps the most representative gathering that ever assembled in the county.

Resolutions decrying in scathing terms all acts of violence, and demanding "direct and definite action by officers of the law . . . that crimes of this nature may be stamped out and a higher standard of civilization be raised in this section of Georgia," told plainly of the temper of these good citizens.

The fact that Montgomery is one of the state's smallest counties makes more significant the size of this outpouring of her upright and clean-thinking citizens. At a time when the oratory of political candidates is attracting audiences of only a hundred or so people, this affront to the good name of their county and section brought together a crowd of more than a thousand.

Such public expressions as those of the people of Montgomery are, thankfully for the good name of the state, causing such depredations, committed by a vicious element comprising only a small per cent of the state's population to grow less frequent as the years go by.

The citizens of Montgomery are to be congratulated on the prompt and emphatic manner in which they have struck at the threat of mob law within the borders of their county.

County Commission Demands Governor Offer Reward

LEADER KIDNAPPED

Political Activities Of S. S. Mincey Blamed For His Murder

Special to Journal and Guide

MOUNT VERNON, Ga.—The Montgomery County Commission adopted a resolution calling upon Governor L. G. Hardman to offer a reward for the apprehension and conviction of the masked men who robbed and killed S. S. Mincey, 70-year-old Republican leader, Tuesday of last week. Feeling has been aroused, even more than at first, as details of the killing are discussed. A mass meeting was held at the courthouse Monday for public discussion of the crime.

Mincey, for years chairman of the Republican committee of this county, was kidnapped from his home, struck over the head with a gun, and then carried about 25 miles into Toombs County, where he was beaten.

If the state has any information to present to the grand jury when it convenes, that fact has not yet been disclosed. Officers said they were satisfied Mincey's political activities furnished the motive for the slaying.

Other Rewards Promised

It was indicated that other rewards for the capture of the murderers may follows the requested reward by the governor, but the commission wanted the state to take the lead in bringing the slayers to trial.

Mincey was returned to his home at Ailey by a white man who found him crawling along the highway. This man was paid $8 by the dead man's family. Before he died, Mincey, told officers his assailants were masked. Mincey was in the act of quitting politics to take over lodge work when the kidnapping and murder occurred. He was recently elected grand secretary of the Georgia Masons.

The fatal flogging has been made the subject of official inquiry. Mincey's grandson said he tried to intervene when the masked men came to his grandfather's home, but was knocked down, and that the now dead man was threatened.

Atlanta, Ga

EASTMAN, Ga., Sept. 14.—(AP)—M. C. Whiley, negro, who was shot early Friday morning when the jail at Rhine, Ga., was stormed and he was taken out by the attackers, was still alive [illegible]. Pneumonia set in yesterday and doctors stated that he probably would die during the night.

George Jump, 45, was still in jail here tonight, charged with assault with intent to murder in connection with the would-be lynching. No efforts had been made to obtain bail for him. Jump is a farmer of the Milan community and is said to be related to the young farmer's wife who was attacked by a negro on September 6.

Sheriff G. C. Rogers says that he has established the fact that Whiley is not the negro; that he was not in the vicinity of Milan on the day of the attack, having left that community a week before the attack.

Another negro is in jail here, as a suspect, in connection with the case, but the hunt for the one who actually made the attack is still in progress.

NEGRO IS RETURNED AS DARIEN SUSPECT

DARIEN, Ga., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Sheriff Poppell and Deputy Sheriff J. H. Collins, of McIntosh county, returned from Beaufort, S. C., at 11 o'clock tonight with a negro who said his name is General Granison, and admitted he was within three miles of Darien the night two negroes caused the recent trouble here.

The prisoner was placed in the Darien jail tonight. Tomorrow special Officer Ora Anderson, who discovered the two negroes as they were supposed to be in the act of robbing the bank here, will see the prisoner and say whether he thinks he was one of the men who engaged in a duel with him.

Sheriff Poppell said tonight that he and Deputy Collins went to Beaufort today after they had learned that Granison was held there on a charge of vagrancy, and that he had said he was in the vicinity of Darien the night of the trouble.

The sheriff said late tonight that the negro made conflicting statements about his Darien connections. It is said that he does admit having been within three miles of Darien that night, though he denies being mixed up in the attempted bank robbery or the shooting which followed.

A report from Beaufort says the negro told authorities there he was also known as Brien. The man is a stranger to Sheriff Poppell and Deputy Collins. They do not recall ever seeing him before.

M'RAE POSSE HUNTS NEGRO FOR ASSAULT

Constitution

9-7-30

McRAE, Ga., Sept. 6.—(AP)—A large posse of men from Telfair and Dodge counties is scouring the woods and swamps near here for a negro who is alleged to have assaulted the young wife of a farmer early this morning. The posse is being led by dogs.

The woman, only 18 years of age, had stepped to the wood yard just before dawn to get kindling, when she was seized by the negro, choked and assaulted.

Atlanta, Ga.

The young woman's condition is reported serious. Her husband was ill in bed at the time of the attack.

Five negroes have been captured during the hunt and have been taken before the victim. In each case she said that the negro was not the one. She said that she was positive she could identify the negro. The five were given their liberty.

The victim of the attack resided near Milan, about 12 miles from here.

VERA, Ga., Dec. 1[illegible].—[illegible]—The hunt for Abbole E. Gaston, negro, wanted here as the suspected slayer of Ruel Hadden, 24-year-old farmer, had extended to the vicinity of Sandersville, Ga., Thursday night.

Possemen believed that they were on a hot trail and expected to capture the negro, though so far he had eluded his pursuers.

Dogs pressed into service in the man hunt were not sufficiently trained, it was stated, to follow the trail.

More than 100 persons were said to be in the posse in the man hunt.

The negro is believed to be without funds. Hunger, his pursuers believed, will eventually force him into their hands.

Hadden had been missing since Monday night. His body was found yesterday in a pasture. Sheriff's deputies said that he had been clubbed death.

Sandersville is about 30 miles from the scene of the murder.

NEGRO ELUDES OFFICERS' HUNT

Russell Authorities Fail To Find Trace Of Stephens

Reports from Russell county were to the effect that Ed Stephens, Negro, has not been apprehended late Friday night. The black is huntd in connection with attack on Oscar Gunter, Russell county farmer, Thursday morning about 15 miles west of Columbus.

Enquirer

Columbus Ga

The Negro is said to have taken Gunter's pistol away from him and to have beaten him over the head with it. The injured man was carried to a physician at Marvyn. The incident occurred a short time after Gunter is said to have remonstrated with Stephens for firing a gun on the white man's farm a short time before.

Sheriff's officers and a large number of citizens searched the fields and woods for a wide area in the Crawford section Thursday night and the hunt continued through Friday.

BURNED MAN MYSTERY UNSOLVED AS HE DIES

ROME, Ga., Feb. 13.—Robert Tolliver, negro, died at a local hospital at midnight Wednesday as a result of burns he said he had received in an automobile wreck near here Wednesday morning. Officers were unable to find any trace of the alleged wreck. They believe that someone poured gasoline on Tolliver and set it afire. The negro was burned from the waist to his neck to a crisp. However, he died maintaining the truth of his original story.

Negro Pullman Porter Hanged In Small Grove

LOCUST GROVE, GA., April 5.—(AP)—His neck tied to a small tree and his knees touching the ground, the body of J. H. Wilkins, negro Pullman porter of the Southern Railway's Kansas City Special, was found early today in a grove of trees a short distance from the track over which the train had passed a few hours earlier.

Advertiser

The negro's skull was fractured in two places and the body apparently had been carried across a plowed field more than a quarter of a mile from the tracks to a piece of woods. The porter's white coat had been used to tie his neck to the tree, which was a slender sapling. Tracks led from the railroad to the spot. At the railroad right of way were drops of blood and signs of what officers think had been a scuffle.

4-6-30

Officers investigating the mysterious affair thought from the fractured skull that the negro may have been hit over the head and thrown from the train or struck after he was taken from the train.

In the negro's pockets was found $58.60. The footprints leading from the railroad tracks to the body were obscured by rain which started shortly after two small country boys on their way to town discovered the body.

The boys hurried to Locust Grove and reported their gruesome discovery to police. Sheriff L. D. Hightower, of Henry County, was informed and immediately started an investigation.

Wilkins was alive when the Kansas City Special, of which his car was a part, left Macon at 3 a.m. today. One report said he was not missed until just before the train reached Atlanta at 5:20 a.m. Another report said Wilkins had talked with the baggage master and the train porter when the Kansas City Special stopped at Sandy, 17 miles south of Locust Grove. This latter report has not been confirmed.

Montgomery
Ala

Ordinarily the Kansas City Special is a non-stop train between Macon and Atlanta. Railroad officials said that the train this morning [illegible] by freight trains to stop at Juliette and at Sandy. They said the train went through Locust Grove at a good rate of speed and did not stop until it reached Atlanta.

A coroner's jury was impanelled late today and after questioning a few witnesses adjourned until Tuesday without determining the cause of death or obtaining a solution of the mystery. Railroad and Pullman detectives were brought to the scene to assist the sheriff and other officials in the investigation.

The negro's body was brought from the woods one mile north of Locust Grove for the inquest. It was later prepared for removal to his former home at Kansas City.

Angry Crowds Hunt For Negro

Ozark White Man Near Death From Stabbing

Advertiser

OZARK, ALA., April 7.—(Special).—Some 200 citizens of Dale County were tonight scouring the country looking for L. C. Dick, a negro, who was accused of stabbing Chester Head, a white man, in the afternoon. Feeling was running high against the negro, and it was feared that his pursuers might take the law into their own hands if the negro was captured by other than the sheriff's forces.

4-8-30

According to accounts, Head, who manages a filling station at Ozark, suspected Dick of stealing some goods from him and went to a negro poolroom where Dick was in an effort to obtain restitution from the negro. In the argument that followed Head is said to have struck Dick. As Head turned away to go the negro is said to have taken a 12-inch screw driver and stabbed Head in the back, the improvised weapon piercing a lung of the white man.

Montgomery
Ala

Head was taken to a hospital where his condition was reported to be very grave Monday night.

Dick is the son of Calvin Dick, a negro whose body was found three years ago in the woods near Ozark. It was believed the elder Dick met his death by foul play.

LYNCH NEGRO WORKER IN GA.

Bruises and cuts on his body showed that he had been tortured and then lynched.

Suicide Theory Is Advanced In Mysterious Wilkins Case

No Light Shed on Slaying of Pullman Porter—Inquest Will Be Continued in Locust Grove Today.

LOCUST GROVE, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Puzzled officers hoped Monday that the coroner's inquest at Locust Grove Tuesday would throw light on the mystery surrounding the death here Saturday of J. H. Wilkins, negro Pullman porter, whose body was found tied to a sapling with his knees touching the ground and his skull fractured.

Constitution

Finding of a bundle of rags on the railroad's right-of-way near McDonough, eight miles north of the spot where the negro was discovered, was reported by Henry county officials today. They did not give out any details connected with the find.

4-8-30

Theories of prearranged slaying and of suicide were among those speculated on during the day. The prearranged slaying suggested that the body may have been hurled from the train and some one waiting near-by carried it to the clump of trees. A set of tracks which led from the railroad to the body did not fit the shoes of the dead negro. A highway passes within 15 feet of the spot where the body was found.

Atlanta,
Ga

Supporters of the suicide suggestion pointed to an open window of the Pullman in which Wilkins had been employed. This window, with a screen off, was discovered when the train arrived in Atlanta. It was also said that one train official reported that Wilkins had been drinking.

Still another report had it that the train porter and baggage master had talked with Wilkins at the Sandy Creek stop, but that they could suggest no solution of the mystery.

Mystery Envelops Murder of Porter

Negro Pullman Attendant Found Slain Near Locust Grove; Believed Thrown From Train.

Constitution

LOCUST GROVE, Ga., April 5.—(Special.)—About 4 o'clock Saturday morning J. H. Wilkins, 40, Pullman porter on the Southern railway's northbound Kansas City Special, was talking to the baggageman when the train passed through Sandy, a station 17 miles south of here.

5-6-30

Two hours later the body of the negro, with skull fractured in two places and a gaping gash under the right arm, was found, still warm, half a mile from the Southern right-of-way in a tract of land known as Hugh Price's woods, a mile north of Locust Grove.

Atlanta, Ga

The first report, made by two boys who discovered the dead man, led to the circulation of a story that a negro

Pullman porter had been taken from the train and lynched.

Body in Kneeling Position.

Wilkins' body was in a kneeling position at the foot of a small sapling. Around his neck, and supporting the body, was a white coat, such as is worn by Pullman porters. But, instead of being tied, as if to throttle the negro, the coat was placed about his neck and pinned around the sapling. The coat merely held the body in a kneeling posture.

The youths, however, did not stop to investigate these details, and the rumors of another lynching spread. While the stories acquired an increased wealth of detail, H. T. Overfield, of the Pullman Company, in Atlanta, added to the mystery by stating that a window, without a screen, was open in the car where Wilkins worked. The train did not stop at Locust Grove or between Locust Grove and Atlanta and passengers did not recall any unusual incident.

Tracks of One Man.

Even more mystifying was the statement by L. D. Hightower, sheriff of Henry county, that leading to the body of the negro were the tracks of only one man. Sheriff Hightower added that the tracks led almost due west to the spot where Wilkins' body was found and then led in a northeasterly direction away from the scene. In the pockets of Wilkins was found $58.60.

The first report of the finding of the body was made to Will Pruitt, chief of police at Locust Grove. He notified Sheriff Hightower and went at once to the Hugh Price Woods, where he was joined by the sheriff. They first examined the body of Wilkins, and discovered a gash under his left arm. They believed that he had been stabbed to death as the coat tied about his neck and pinned around the tree had not choked him to death. On the negro's shoes was mud, as if he had walked to the sapling. There also was an abundance of clay in his hair.

Watch Stopped at 4:18.

Checking up on the tracks, the two officers traced them to the Southern railway right-of-way and found where the negro's body had struck the rail ballast. A trail of blood paralleled the footprints.

Police Chief Pruitt and Sheriff Hightower returned to the sapling, and, after measurements, discovered that footprints leading to and from Wilkins' body were made by a man who wore shoes more than an inch larger than those of the dead man. They found, also, that the negro's watch had stopped at 4:18 o'clock, which is about the hour the train passed through Locust Grove.

Chief Pruitt and Sheriff Hightower decided to let the body remain as it was until the arrival of Southern railway detectives. In the meantime, they requested Dr. R. L. Crawford, of Locust Grove, to make an examination of the body. Dr. Crawford found that in addition to the gash under the arm, which had nearly severed it, there were two fractures of the skull. These had evidently been made by a blunt instrument. There were additional bruises caused by the negro's fall from the train—a fall which evidently was the result of being pushed through the train window. Dr. Crawford stated that the wound under the arm was not caused by a knife and that the negro's death was not caused by a stab.

Inquest Is Started.

When Detectives W. N. Graham and E. M. Staats of the Southern Railway arrived, the body of Wilkins was brought to Locust Grove and preparations made for an inquest.

The testimony brought out the facts already given. It was stated by witnesses that the train did not stop or slow down near Locust Grove. One witness, Jerome Cox, a linotype operator, who lives near the Southern Railway a few miles from Atlanta, testified that the train passed his home two minutes ahead of its usual schedule.

Will Sutzer, negro, of Locust Grove, testified that the train slowed up as it was leaving Locust Grove. He said he heard the "steam being let off." He explained that he was "an old railroad man" and knew that the brakes were being put on.

Police Chief Pruitt said that he heard the train pass through Locust the train. J. F. Busbee, of Atlanta, Southern railway conductor in charge of the train, said Wilkins had invited him to go into a bootlegging deal, but that he had declined.

None of the witnesses at today's session, nor at the first brief session of the coroner's jury last Saturday afternoon, said they knew anything about how Wilkins came to his death, when or how he left the train, nor how he became tied to the tree.

One sleeve of Wilkins' porter's jacket was tied to the sapling and the other was tied around his neck. His knees were barely touching the ground when two boys found the body in a clump of woods. Wilkins' skull had been fractured, and there was a wound under one of his arms. A physician who testified today said the wound had been inflicted with some instrument sharp enough to penetrate through the coat, into the flesh.

The physician, Dr. R. L. Crawford, of Locust Grove, said that he had made only a hurried examination of the body, where it was found. Asked if Wilkins might have walked from the railroad tracks to the tree, with such injuries, Dr. Crawford said he might have been able to do so. He explained that his examination was only superficial, however.

Persons, the next witness, was questioned as to what speed an experienced man could jump from a train without injury. Persons said he could jump off and stay on his feet at a clip of 30 miles an hour. At 40 miles an hour, he said, a man jumping from a train "would be knocked too far to tell about it."

Jury Asks Questions.

Coroner Barnett, Sheriff Hightower and members of the six-man jury occasionally asked questions of the witness. Persons said the last he saw of Wilkins was when he talked to him in the negro day coach, just before the stop at Sandy.

T. R. Moore, white man and flagman on the train, said that just south of Macon, Wilkins came to him on the observation car and asked him to call him ten minutes before the train got to Macon. Wilkins told him he wanted to go to sleep and did not want to be asleep at Macon, lest an inspector should get on the train. Moore said he smelled liquor on Wilkins' breath.

Moore said Wilkins "had no business" on the observation car, four cars back of the one on which he worked.

R. C. Woodward, white, baggagemaster, said he talked to Wilkins in the negro day coach and that he "appeared all right."

R. W. Harvey, negro pullman porter on the car behind the Wilkins car, said he saw Wilkins just after the train left Macon, and that Wilkins had been drinking. Harvey said he told Wilkins he was likely to lose his job and that the negro answered that he could take care of himself.

Pullman Porter Smith said he went to Wilkins' car at 11 p. m., Friday and found "Wilkins pretty drunk." He said he put him to bed for two hours when he himself went to bed and asked Wilkins to watch his car for the usual "split watch."

Conductor Busbee, the first witness at today's inquest, said Wilkins asked him to join him in bootlegging liquor from Miami. Busbee said he told the negro that he was "talking to the wrong man." The conductor said he told Wilkins that he had never sold any whisky and did not intend to start now. He said the conversation took place north of Macon, and that he smelled liquor on Wilkins.

Busbee said the train stopped twice between Macon and Atlanta, once at Juliette, to take on water, and once at Sandy. He said the Sandy stop was occasioned because the telegraph operator there went to sleep on duty and that the red stop signal had gone up on the right-of-way. He said the operator had since been discharged.

The train, Busbee said, made from 40 to 60 miles per hour between Sandy and Atlanta and that no stop was made at Locust Grove, nor was the train slowed down at or near this point. He said no one got on or off the train at Sandy except himself and the regular train porter, Jim Persons.

"We were running seven to ten minutes late," Busbee said, emphasizing the point that the train did not slow down near Locust Grove. He said the train was due to pass here at 5:17 a. m., eastern time, but was ten minutes late. Sheriff L. D. Hightower of Henry county today exhibited Wilkins' watch. The hands had become tangled in a broken crystal at 5:27.

Busbee said he first learned of Wilkins' disappearance when R. T. Lively, assistant superintendent of the Pullman Company in Atlanta, telephoned the Busbee home in Atlanta at 8:30 a. m. Wilkins told him a month ago, Busbee related, that he was despondent because a brother was sick.

Grove and that it did not slow up, nor slacken its speed as long as it was in hearing. This would indicate that the train was under full headway when Wilkins was thrown from the train.

Dr. E. G. Colvin testified that Wilkins' skull was fractured in two places and expressed the belief that a blunt instrument had been used. Dr. Colvin said that the gash under the arm, which had almost torn it off, was not caused by a stab.

First Clue Develops.

H. T. Overfield, night agent of the Pullman Company in Atlanta, stated the Pullman conductor had notified him that a window was open in the car in which Wilkins worked. The screen had been removed. It was likely that Wilkins' body had been shoved through the window which was still open when the train reached Atlanta.

The testimony of Chief Pruitt and Sheriff Hightower followed along the lines of their statements earlier in the day.

The inquest was adjourned at 4 o'clock this afternoon and will be resumed next Tuesday morning.

It was decided to take the body of Wilkins to Atlanta for a post-mortem examination.

POST-MORTEM ON WILKINS TO BE HELD HERE TODAY.

The body of J. H. Wilkins, negro, of Kansas City and Pullman porter on the Kansas City Special of the Southern railway, was brought to Atlanta Saturday night. It was decided to hold a post-mortem examination Sunday morning at 9 o'clck

It was not discovered that Wilkins was missing until the Kansas City Special arrived in Atlanta.

The train crew, with the exception of one negro porter, changed at Atlanta, and those with the train on its arrival here said they had been unable to get any information from the employes whom they succeeded.

The negro porter on the train between Macon and Atlanta said he was asleep until just before the train reached Atlanta and knew nothing of what took place.

Passengers in the Pullman car in which Wilkins worked all reported they were asleep at the time and did not know the porter was missing until they reached Atlanta.

Mystery of Slain Porter Grows With New Evidence

Pullman Car Conductor Quoted as Saying "I Have All the Evidence That I Need."

Constitution

LOCUST GROVE, Ga., April 8.—(AP)—A coroner's investigation into the death of J. H. Wilkins, negro Pullman porter, was continued Tuesday until next Saturday after hearing a number of witnesses, including one who quoted a Pullman conductor as saying, "I have all the evidence I need."

The Pullman conductor, whose last name was given as Worthington, was said to have made the statement on the Kansas City special, the Southern railway train on which Wilkins was employed. Wilkins' body was found tied to a tree one-fourth of a mile from the railroad tracks here Saturday morning, after he had disappeared from the train.

Worthington was not here today and Coroner A. W. Barnett said that he and several others on the train who were not at Tuesday's hearing would be called as witnesses at Saturday's hearing, which is to begin at 3 p. m.

4-10-30

Coroner Barnett said, after the jury had deliberated 45 minutes on Tuesday's evidence, that "we feel that there might be something more to be brought out and in fairness to everybody we decided to go into the case a little more fully next Saturday."

Worthington's purported statement was put in the record during the testimony Tuesday of Richard Smith, Pullman porter, working in the car ahead of the one on which Wilkins was employed.

Atlanta

Smith said he continued on the train, en route from Miami to Kansas City, and that between Birmingham and Memphis the Wilkins car who took Wilkins' place found two ton, Smith said, Jour the train at Birmingham. Smith said the porter was took Wilkins' place found two bed sheets and three towels locked in the linen closet of the Wilkins car. Pullman Conductor Worthington, Smith related, wrapped the linens in a piece of paper.

Porter Smith said Conductor Worthington passed him, with the bundle under his arm, and remarked, "I have all the evidence I need." Smith said he did not know what was meant by the statement. The porter said he did not see the linens in question.

Conductor To Be Summoned.

The porter who found the linens and the Pullman conductor who had charge of the Pullmans from Miami to Atlanta are among the witnesses to be called next Saturday. Neither their names, nor the initials of Worthington, could be ascertained immediately.

Smith and several other witnesses said Wilkins "had been drinking" a few hours before he disappeared from

Prof. Pierson's Body Is Found In Ind. River

SCOTTVILLE, Ind., April 16.—The body of a man taken from river here is believed to be Prof. Edward D. Pierson, auditor of the National Baptist Convention, according to reports communicated to his wife and son, who reside at 4534 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill. 4-19-30

Professor Pierson was enroute to Chicago from Nashville, Tenn., where he had been on official business. Hs is thought to have been taken off the train here by unknown persons and murdered, then thrown in the river.

Police identified the body by the number of his automobile keys, identification cards and a letter from his home in Chicago. His son Edward Pierson, Jr., left Chicago to make further investigations. Chicago Ill.

Professor Pierson was formerly a teacher in Houston, Texas, where he lived for a number of years. On leaving the schools he became auditor of the National Baptist Convention, the L. K. Williams faction. As auditor he was a dominant factor in the Baptist ranks. He alone held the key to exposing any discrepencies in the church financial condition. It is though by the police that he was murdered to prevent him exposing certain persons who had geen intrusted with church funds.

CHICAGO, April 16,—Edward D, Pierson of Chicago, auditor and efficiency expert of the national Baptist convention, the governing body of most of the Negro Baptist churches in America, was found fatally wounded today, clinging to a tree in the Muscatatuck River, near Scottsburg, Ind. His hands and feet were bound and a rope around his neck was tied to his two suitcases. He had been shot six times.

Pierson died before medical attention could be given and without disclosing the details of the shooting.

NEGRO TAKEN FROM RIVER IS IDENTIFIED

Man's Discoveries While Auditing Books May Have Caused Death

CHICAGO, April 16.—(AP)—E. D. Pierson, 54, negro, who today was found mortally wounded clinging to a tree in the Muscatatuck River, near Scottsburg, Ind., his hands and feet tied, was identified tonight as an auditor of the National Baptist Convention. Pierson was a resident of Chicago. Advertiser 4/17/30

The wife of the slain man, who made the identification, told police she believed that discoveries made by her husband while auditing books in the Nashville, Tenn., office of the National Baptist Convention may have been cause for the slaying. She declared there was some dissension in the convention and expressed the belief that "someone was hired to kill my husband." Montgomery Ala.

The negro woman called attention to the fact that the brief case in which her husband carried his records was missing when he was found in the river.

"The undertaker at Scottsburg informed me that my husband's suitcase and handbag were tied to him," she said, "but the brief case was missing, as were his diamond stickpin and watch. I am convinced it was the records in the brief case that were wanted. There were two $20 bills and one $10 bill in his pockets, the undertaker said."

The National Baptist organization of which Pierson was an auditor is made up of negro Baptist churches throughout the country.

The negro woman expressed the belief that her husband was dragged from the train by his slayers. He still was alive when he was found and pulled from the river near Scottsburg, his body marked by four bullet wounds. He died before he received medical attention.

His presence in Scottsburg was a mystery. He lived at 4,534 Michigan Avenue, maintained an office in Nashville, Tenn., and was returning from there to Chicago when he was slain. New York, N.Y.

Whether he had stopped in Scottsburg on business or had been taken from the train by his slayers has not been revealed. His son, Edward Pierson Jr., said he could not account for his being in Scottsburg. Scottsburg is 30 miles north of Louisville and it was thought that Pierson's enemies may have taken him prisoner when he left the train in Louisville, then driving him there by automobile. 4-17-30

Pierson's son said he had made many enemies in his church work.

Believing that his recent investigations in Nashville may have disclosed irregularities in church affairs, Pierson had asked the Nashville police to place a guard over his office there to prevent the disappearance of any papers having a bearing on the case.

The slain man's wife pointed out that a brief case which he usually carried with him was not found beside the body. His diamond stickpin and his watch were missing, although $50 was found in his pocket. He had received a mysterious telephone call from Indianapolis a short time before his departure from Louisville.

A sensational murder mystery that has shaken the entire Baptist denomination — and may shock the entire Christian world—was brought to light when the body of Dr. Edward D. Pierson was found in the Muscatuck River,, near Scotts_burg, Ind., Wednesday. 4/19/30

The body was found by three fishermen who heard feeble cries for help and searching, found Dr. Pierson with his grips tied around his neck and six bullet wounds in his body. His hands and feet were tied. Dr. Pierson died before he could be moved and without telling anything about the affair. Louisville

Dr. Edward D. Pierson, lived in Chicago. He was an outstanding minister of the Baptist denomination being highly trained from an educational standpoint and every eloquent as a speaker and preacher. Ky.

He did not have a church but was auditor for the National Baptist Convention, Inc. That is the division of the Baptists headed by Dr. L. K. Williams of Chicago. As Auditor Dr. Pierson, it is said, had made many enemies. It is alleged that he found $60,000 had been juggled and misapplied by various church officials. All of which leads the police authorities of Nashville, Louisville and Chicago to suspect he was "put on the spot" by persons desiring to cover up any shortages. This suspicion is emphasized by the fact that a brief case he carried, containing the reports of alleged crookedness of officials is miss_ing. Louisville comes into the picture btcause Dr. Pierson left Nashville, where he had been examining books for Chigago Tuesday and it was known he was going to stop in this city. It is said he came to Louisville but never got in touch with such men as Dr. C. H. Parrish, Dr. H. W. Jones, Rev. Paul Casey or any other of a number of ministers of his faction, whom he knew well. The first of these gentlemen knew of his death or that he had passed through here, was when they read it in the papers.

Detectives are of the opinion he was met here and persuaded to proceed further by automobile, and that he was killed in the car and his body thrown out about 30 miles from Louisville. With that in mind Major Yarberry, chief of detectives, has put Messrs. W. D Wood and Wm. "Jack" Porte on the case, with the idea o tracing any auto he might hav left Louisville in. These tw officers are among the keenes on the force, and if there is clue in Louisville, will find it

In the meantime the Negro Church, Baptst and all other denominations, will hold its breath, for if Dr. Pearson's murder is traced to high church officials, it will rock the Church as no other scandal in its history.

These officers have been assigned to the Pierson murder case.

Posse Presses Hunt For Negro Attacker

MONROE, La., March 18.—(AP)—The negro who last night shot and wounded Burke Shiel, 21, and Shiel's young woman companion, later attacking the woman on the Winnsboro highway four miles south of here, was today sought by a determined posse of citizens led by Sheriff Milton Coverdale.

The searchers beat through the wooded region surrounding the point on the highway where the crime was committed, and the capture of the negro, as yet unidentified, was expected.

Meanwhile, the victims of the fugitive lay in a local sanitarium in serious condition. Shiel was shot in the upper part of his back, and the woman in the breast.

Accounts of the incident are that Shiel and the woman were driving in an automobile out the Winnsboro highway when a tire on their car was punctured. As the young man was changing the tire the negro came up suddenly and opened fire with a shotgun.

Although badly wounded, Shiel managed to get into the car and make an effort to drive off. After driving several hundred yards down the road the lights on the car went out and the latter swerved into the side of the highway. The negro came up again, this time shooting the woman.

While Shiel made his way to a filling station for help, the negro assaulted the woman and escaped.

Man And Companion Are Shot By Negro

MONROE, LA., March 17.—(AP)—An unidentified negro tonight shot Burke Shiels, 21, and the latter's young woman companion four miles [illegible] of this city on the Winnsboro Road. After the shooting the negro attacked the woman.

The wounded couple were brought to a local sanitarium for treatment. Shiels was shot in the neck, and the woman in the breast. NEGROES KILL LOUISIANA MAN

600 in Posse Seek Slayer of Merchant At Greenwood

SHREVEPORT, La., July 23.—(By A. P.)—A posse of several hundred aroused citizens and officers early Wednesday morning were searching the territory between Shreveport and Marshall for two negroes who Tuesday night shot and killed C. J. Mason, 49, merchant at Greenwood, fourteen miles west of Shreveport, and fled after robbing his wife at Mason's store in Greenwood.

W

Although several negroes have been reported taken into custody by the searchers, none of them have been identified as the men wanted. Mrs. Mason, who was reported Wednesday as bearing up remarkably well, declares that she will be able to identify the negroes.

Sheriff T. R. Hughes and most of his force are directing the search for the murderers, which was spread over a wide area. The slaying has created much excitement at Greenwood and vicinity.

Mason was shot through the heart by one of the negroes shortly after the pair had entered the store and one of the negroes had obtained a package of cigarettes. Mrs. Mason, who sold the cigarettes, saw the slayer fire the fatal shot. After the shooting the negroes then forced Mrs. Mason to turn over to them about $10 from the cash register and then fled.

NEGRO CHAINED TO TREE.

Five Men Are Held at Meridian. Charged With Abduction.

Commercial Appeal

MERIDIAN, Miss., April 29.—(AP)—Five white men today were charged here with abducting Boss Williams, 35-year-old negro, and chaining him to a tree. They were released under bond of $2,000 each.

4-30-30

The negro told officers the party took him up in an automobile at the point of a shotgun near Meridian and chained him in a house all night. The next morning, the negro said the men handcuffed him to a tree and left him there with a bottle of water and a small piece of bread.

Those arrested were Jesse Lee, Jack Campbell, Lee Campbell, Leo Irby and Jesse Irby. All are said to reside near Meridian. No explanation for the abduction was given.

BATESVILLE, Miss., May 14.—Percy Green, Memphis, and Jesse Smith, Gary, Ind., negroes, who escaped yesterday after overpowering two deputy sheriffs near here on the highway, were captured this afternoon at 6 o'clock one mile south of Batesville in a box car at a gravel pit.

Memphis

Fifty shots were fired by approximately 25 searchers before the pair came to the door of the box car and surrendered. In the car was found the pistol which was taken from Deputy William Wilson in a scuffle yesterday after the pair had attacked the officers while being carried to a road camp near here from Sardis.

The negroes were taken from an Illinois Central train yesterday and were fined $5 each and costs for riding the blinds. They were being carried to the camp to serve sentence when they overpowered the officers who were seated on the front seat of the automobile. The scuffle followed when the machine plunged into a ditch. One shot was fired in the affray and when the pistol was found this afternoon there was one blank.

The negroes were placed in jail here and charges will be filed tomorrow. Smith suffered a wound in his leg when the posse fired shots through the car.

MERIGOLD, Miss., Sept. 29.—Search was under way tonight for Enoch Derrick, negro, who fired upon E. E. Hutchinson, planter, about 10 o'clock this morning, as the climax of a dispute between Hutchinson and Derrick's mother and sister over the cotton crop.

The two women also seized axes, but desisted when Homer Hutchinson and Charles Shelton came to his aid. The negro escaped after firing one time.

ANOTHER LYNCHING

Jeff Atkinson, a former prisoner at the Mississippi state prison, has been pardoned and set free. Atkinson, a white man, gained his liberty by shooting to death another prisoner who happened not to be white.

According to information sent out by white newspapers and by the Associated Press, Atkinson killed the other prisoner because the latter attempted to escape. Governor Bilbo at once pardoned the white man and ordered his release.

Defender

It doesn't matter what excuse was given for the killing, or how white papers listed it, to us it was just another lynching. It is the new method by which Mississippi brings its lynch record up to its quota when the old method attracts too much attention. This man was the second murdered in Mississippi jails within the past few months.

Chicago

While white guards are explaining how Atkinson happened to shoot the other prisoner they might also explain how a prisoner, even a trusty, came to have a pistol. We do not believe that even the Mississippi jail regulations provide for arming prisoners with revolvers. But, of course, we are not informed on these things in Mississippi. Maybe the unwritten law makes provision for this. At least Atkinson was pardoned expressly for his jail murder, proving that it was according to Hoyle and Bilbo!

The negro left the yard but as Mr. Davis was coming to town on a truck, the negro stopped him and demanded to know why he was ordered from the yard. Mr. Davis answered his question and started to drive on when the negro raised a single barrel shotgun and pulled the trigger.

Cosey fled before officers could arrive. Tonight he is being hunted in every part of Vicksburg with feeling running high in the Jonestown neighborhood, where Mr. Davis was very popular.

FIVE STABBED IN STREET ROWS

NEGRO CUTS TWO BROTHERS

Police Rescue Knife Wielder From Angry Brooklyn Crowd.

Brooklyn police are investigating today small riots that resulted in five persons being stabbed. Coney Island police received a telephone message that at West Thirty-fifth street and Canal avenue, the heart of the bungalow colony, a riot was taking place among men and girls.

The police found everything calm but groans were heard on the beach, where the police discovered three men had been stabbed. They were David McMullen, 26 years old, of 425 Degraw street; John Dougherty, 24, of 1864 Eighteenth avenue, and Frank Riley, 23, of 2217 West Twenty-second street, Brooklyn. They were taken to the Coney Island Hospital, but only Riley was able to go home after treatment.

When questioned about the street riot the victims said they knew nothing except that there was a riot and that they had been stabbed during its progress.

His two victims in St. Catherine's Hospital, one of them in danger of dying from his wounds, David Holland, 22 years old, of 211 Moore street, Brooklyn, will be arraigned in Bridge Plaza court today on a charge of felonious assault.

Holland is a Negro and he heard the cry of "Lynch him!" many times last night before policemen, with drawn revolvers, rescued him from a crowd of 200 white men in Williamsburg, where there has been bad feeling between Negroes and whites recently. This followed the stabbing by Holland of Jack Bobchin, 19, of 233 Moore street, Brooklyn, and his brother, Harry, 18. The brothers were in bathing suits and standing under a Fire Department shower at Moore and White streets when Holland came by in street clothes.

Somebody dashed water on the Negro and he drew a knife and rushed the Bobchin brothers. Jack, stabbed in the right chest, right shoulder, groin and back, was critically hurt. His brother was stabbed in the left chest and the right side.

Police reserves are patroling Brooklyn's Willaimsburg section today in order to guard against a race riot that has threatened since last night when a colored man slashed two white boys to the point of death. David Holland, 22, 211 Moore St., Brooklyn, the colored man, walked past a street shower at Moore and White Sts. at midnight. Some white boys were playing under the shower. Suddenly Holland cried out angrily at Jack Bobchin, 19, and his brother, Harry, 18, both of 233 Moore St. Holland, who accused them of splashing water on him, drew a knife and attacked the brothers. The latter are at the point of death in St. Catherine's Hospital. Immediately after the attack, a mob collected on the scene and police arrived just in time to prevent the gathering from carrying out a threat to lynch Holland.

ILD Denounces Lynch Terror and Calls Organization of Defense Corps.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Jan. 26.—Many Negro workers were arrested yesterday and today at Spencer, forty miles from Charlotte, N. C. One was chased into the river with bloodhounds. A new lynching drive is on.

Negro workers are holding a meeting here today in protest. Sol Harper, special International Labor Defense representative, has today issued the following statement:

"The cotton mill and tobacco barons and the press continue to demand lynching of Negroes, though the murder of Ella May and the six killed in the Marion strike go unpunished. The I. L. D. denounces these blood-thirsty capitalist oppressors of the Negro and white workers, and calls for organization of workers' defense committees against the gangs of the boss men. Down with the company house slave system! Down with mill and factory slavery!"

Edwards, ILD Delegate Exposed Murder

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Jan. 8.—Threats to kill Jim Edwards, who signed an affidavit that Willie McDaniels, a Negro tenant farmer who was found with a broken neck several months ago, had been lynched by a group of wealthy landowners, continue to be made, according to a letter received today by the International Labor Defense. Edwards is now missing, and the gravest fears are felt. He was a delegate to the Fourth National Conference of the I.L.D.

McDaniels was lynched because he demanded that his wife be paid for picking some blackberries. His body was found the following day near the farm on which he worked for Grier.

Tried To Murder.

It is common knowledge that Grier, the wealthy farmer, looked for McDaniels with a gun, with the intention of murdering the Negro worker. It is also known that Grier tried to have McDaniels arrested to prevent him from leaving the farm and applied to the Rural Police to have him arrested.

The police gave their permission that McDaniels be lynched when they said "You don't need any warrant." Workers have been watching the Edwards home ready to protect the family.

Louisville, Ky.

Winston-Salem, Feb. 16 —Laura Wood, 60 years old, mother of four children, a Negro, was brutally murdered and her dead body hung to the branch of a tree with a cow chain, on a farm near Barber Junction, N. C., in day time, the morning of Feb. 11. This murder and lynching of an agricultural worker, is part of the boss terorism which murdered Ella May, though it belongs to the tactic of dividing the working class along racial lines instead of of to the tactic of direct union smashing.

The International Labor Defense uncompromisingly fights all forms of boss terrorism, including that of lynching which is so prevalent at the present timefi the lynching of Jimmie Levine of Occila, Ga., Feb. 1, the attempted lnyching of a white worker in Kentucky, etc.

The above comes from the International Labor Defense headquarters in Winston-Salem, N. C.

The Louisville News has been unable to find any record of a woman being lynched lately—in the white press.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Jan. 16.—Bob Carter, Negro worker, arrested Monday at Reedsville, N. C., because "he acted suspiciously" is now reported not to have been arrested. He has "disappeared." One thousand dollars has been offered for his "capture." Troops were originally called out in a fake gesture against lynching. It is believed here that Carter was simply murdered by the posse which was first said to have arrested him. A white woman, May Banes, claims that she was assaulted by a Negro. Any Negro will do for a lynching in a case like this, according to the standards encouraged by Southern mill owners, who want to divide white and Negro workers.

Negro, White Workers Assemble Tonight

2-25-30

At St. Lukes Hall, 125 West 130th St., at 4 to 9 p. m. tonight, hundreds of workers, Negro and white, are to protest the vicious and brutal lynching of Laura Woods, a 60-year-old Negro woman worker at Barber Junction, N. C., Feb. 11. The meeting is being held under the auspices of the International Labor Defense and will be the third held since the lynching.

New York, N.Y.

The Southern Distrct of the International Labor Defense organized a special committee which secured the chain with which the woman was lynched and sent it to New York on Feb. 15. Tonight the chain will be shown to the workers of New York as a clear exhibition of the kind of justice workers of the South are being given by the capitalist class.

Thousands of Lynchings.

Among the speakers will be Sol Harper, Negro worker, member of the Southern District Committee of the International Labor Defense and Trade Union Unity League Organizer in the South since December 12. He goes on trial Feb. 26 with others arrested at a Washington unemployment demonstration. Harper stated to the Daily Worker:

"The lynching of Negro workers is a passtime and pleasure of the Southern bosses and a means of terrorizing the workers. While 4,330 lynchings have been recorded during the past thirty years, the International Labor Defense will expose hundreds of unrecorded lynchings which have taken place, many of them under the guise of "unidentified Negro found dead." The International Labor Defence Anti-Lynching Committee has already uncovered two such cases within the past few months, one the Willie McDaniels case near Charlotte committed by Mel Grier and a gang of wealthy planters, and that of Laura Wood, mother of four sons.

"The Negro workers in large cities and towns like Winston Salem, N. C., Chattanooga, New Orleans, Atlanta, etc., are becoming too militant for any open lynching and even in Charlotte, N. C., I doubt if a mob would visit the Brooklyn section to lynch Negro or white union organizers, I am sure they would not make such an attempt in the working class sections of Atlanta and Winston Salen."

"While in Atlanta the K.K.K. staged a parade under police escort, they cut short plans for a second after the members of the Communist Party held defense committee meetings among Negro workers.

"In Charlotte a few weeks ago, when a whispering campaign was being conducted to work up a local lynching, the Communist Party held an open-air meeting in the white working-class section, and several in the Negro and border-line sections, and the International Labor Defense Committee made preparations to break up any mob that might have attempted to take a Negro worker out to lynch him from the Charlotte jail.

"The lynching and mobbing of Negro and white workers must be stopped by organized committees of Negro and white workers ready at all times to rush to any place where a prospective lynching of a union organizer or Negro worker is a state of fact. The Trade Union Unity League, National Textile Workers union and unemployed councils must continue organizing their defense committees."

Among the speakers at the meeting tonight will be George Siskin, New York District Organizer, T.U.U.L., and Sam Nisin, District Organizer of the International Labor Defense, and others.

Volunteer and unemployed workers are requested to call at 536 Lenox Ave, at 10 a. m., today, to help distribute unemployment and anti-lynching meeting leaflets.

MOB VICTIM IS SLOWLY IMPROVING

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N. C., Oct. 30—(ANP)—Physicians at the local hospital stated that Buddy Jackson who was shot and seriously wounded by a mob of more than two hundred white, after he had shot Chief of Police J. R. Crews at Weldon on Tuesday, was improving, as was the chief of police, who also is confined in the same hospital.

Courier

The shooting of the officer and the subsequent mob violence which resulted in the shooting of Jackson occurred early Tuesday afternoon, when Crewe attempted to arrest Jackson on a charge of holding up four tourists. When the officer approached Jackson the latter fired at him, the bulet piercing the right eye of the policeman.

11-1-30

Jackson escaped from other officers who rushed to the scene, and made his way to an abandoned mill near Weldon. His pursuers, a veritable mob that formed rapidly, heavily armed, surrounded him there and shot him down. Officers arrived on the scene and dispersed the mob and placed Jackson under arrest.

Pittsburgh

Although he was believed to have been mortally wounded, there was still talk of a lynching, and whites began swarming around the little hospital at Weldon, where Jackson had been taken for treatment. The officers succeeded in persuading the would-be lynchers to let the law take its course and quietly removed Jackson here, where he was placed under heavy guard.

The report was received here on Wednesday that another mob was forming and was planning to take the prisoner from the local hospital and string him up to a tree. Hearing this report, the local chief of police placed a cordon of picked men around the hospital and seven others on the inside to protect the wounded man.

Jackson told local officers that his home is in South Carolina and that he had been out of work for several months. Hungry and destitute, he sought to relieve his condition by holding up a party of tourists, whom he forced to drive him to Weldon, where the shooting occurred. Both Jackson's and Crews' conditions have been pronounced as serious, but hospital authorities are now holding out hope for their recovery.

Prisoner Said To Have Confessed Stabbing Special Railway Agent

OAKDALE, TENN., May 17.—(AP)—A negro, sought in connection with the stabbing of Marion Goodman, 29, special agent for the Southern Railway, was captured early today by an armed posse on Whetstone Mountain, four miles northeast of here. 5-17-30

Taken to the Wartburg jail, the negro, who gave his name as Willie Campbell, of Columbus, Ga., was said to have confessed that he stabbed Goodman, but denied killing W. A. Brown, special railway officer, at Birmingham.

The negro was bleeding from shotgun wounds when the posse closed in on him in the mountain underbrush but Sheriff John E. Davis, of Morgan County, said the wounds were not serious.

Montgomery Ala

The capture followed a day and night search by some 300 men, who were armed because the negro was believed to be carrying a revolver he had taken from Goodman, Bill Scarboro and George and Lee Arms, from the state penitentiary at Petros, were credited with the capture. The Southern Railway had offered a reward of $500 for the negro, dead or alive.

Goodman, who was stabbed eight times, is in a critical condition in a Chattanooga hospital.

Sheriff Davis said he was positive that the negro was not the slayer wanted in Birmingham. When asked whether the negro had been removed from the Wartburg jail, the sheriff said he was not "giving out any information." He asserted, however, that no mob violence had been threatened.

The shooting was said to have followed an argument over the payment of wages to Robertson by Eggar.

The negro was shot by two members of a posse estimated at 150 who took up the search immediately after the Eggars were wounded. He had attempted to flee from Round Rock but was intercepted along the road to Austin and killed instantly.

Eggar and his wife were shot shortly before noon in their residence in the presence of their 14-year-old daughter, Willie Mae. The girl ran to a neighbor's residence and spread the alarm.

Eggar was shot in the head and attending physicians said he probably would lose the sight of his right eye. Mrs. Eggar was shot in the right breast and side.

WACO, Tex., Sept. 25—(ANP)—A rapidly forming mob of white men, women and children were denied the pleasure of lynching Sim Knight about twenty miles from here, through the suicide of the intended victim.

Knight had shot and killed a white farmer, Will Lowe, in a fight over the division of proceeds from the sale of a bale of cotton. The white man used the time-worn method of declaring that Knight owed him a lot of money, a method used by white farmers throughout the South to swindle their Negro tenants farmers out of their money and thereby keep them in virtual peonage, and Knight refused to be used in this fashion.

Going still further, Knight protected himself from an attack on the part of the white man and killed him. As the news of the shooting circulated a mob was in the making and Knight was on his way to surrender to the sheriff. As he neared the city limits he heard the mob behind him and to cheat them of their fun he fired a bullet through his temple, killing himself instantly.

RANGERS SHIELD NEGROES GOING BACK TO HOMES

Shamrock, Texas, Quiet as Officers Mount Machine Guns

(By The Associated Press)

Shamrock, Tex., July 14.—Negroes who left their homes here after Saturday's warning that they get out of town were returning today under assurances from Texas Rangers and city and county officers they would be given full protection.

Sergeant M. T. Gonzaullos and Rangers W. H. Kirby and J. P. Huddleston of Dallas, sent here by Governor Moody, announced they were equipped to put down any disorders, which had been threatened after the slaying of Mrs. Henry Vaughan by a negro last Friday.

Gonzaullos and his men set up two machine guns and assembled tear and gas bombs for emergency use.

Jesse Lee Washington, negro accused of beating Mrs. Vaughan to death with a piece of pipe, was held in Granite, Okla., and Judge W. R. Ewing of the 31st District court was expected here tomorrow to consider plans for convening a grand jury to indict Washington. It was likely his trial would be rushed.

OKLAHOMA TROOP MOVEMENT CANCELLED

Oklahoma City, July 14.—Following receipt of word from county authorities at Erick, Beckham county, that they had the situation in hand, Governor W. J. Holloway tonight cancelled an order sending 100 men and 10 officers of the 179th Infantry, Oklahoma National Guard, to the town to assist in quelling racial disorders.

The troops, under command of Charles F. Barrett, adjutant general, were being mobilized when the governor withdrew his order.

H. C. Ivester, Beckham county attorney, and M. L. Inman, sheriff, who previously had requested the governor to send troops to assist them, told Governor Holloway after looking over the situation they believed help was not necessary.

The trouble was precipitated last Friday when Mrs. Henry Vaughan, who formerly lived in Erick, was beaten to death by a negro on the Vaughan farm home near Shamrock, Tex., just across the Oklahoma line.

Early Saturday night a mob of several hundred men invaded the negro quarter of Shamrock apparently bent on burning the negro houses, most of which had been deserted by their occupants in response to signs posted about the town in the afternoon warning the negroes to "leave town before sundown." The sheriff and a posse met the mob with drawn revolvers and the gathering dispersed without trouble.

Later Saturday night several hundred men gathered in Erick and forced all negroes there to leave, warning them not to return.

L. F. Holly, deputy sheriff, estimated today 200 negroes had fled.

Minor disturbances continued today but these, County Attorney Ivester said, were among members of the mob who apparently were divided in sentiment on the point of allowing negroes to return.
